OLD YEAR and NEW YEAR.

[By a Railway bachelor.—ED.]

When my good mother was a girl,
Say fifty years ago,
Young ladies then knew how to knit,
As well as how to sew.

Young ladies then could spin and weave
Could bake and brew and sweep,
Could sing and play, could dance and paint,
And could a secret keep.

Young ladies then were beautiful
As any beauties now,
Yet they could rake the new mown hay,
Or milk the brindle cow.

Young ladies then wore bonnets too,
And with them their own hair,
They made them from their own good straw,
And pretty too. they were.

Young ladies then oft fell in love,
And married too, the men,
While men with willing hearts and true
Loved them too, in return.

Young ladies now can knit and sew
Or read a pretty book,
Can sing and paint and joke and quiz,
But cannot bear to cook.

Young ladies now can blithely spin
Of street yarn many a spool,
And weave a web of scandal too,
And dye it in the wool.

But as to secrets who would think
Fidelity a pearl,
None but a little modish miss,
Perchance a country girl.

Young ladies now wear lovely curls,
What pity they should buy 'em,
And their bonnets truly fright
The bean that ventures nigh them.

E'en love is changed from what it was,
Altho' true love is known,
'Tis wealth adds lustre to the cheek,
And melts the heart of stone.

Thus time works wonders, young and old
Confess his magic power.
Beauty will fade, but virtue proves
Pure gold in man's last hour.

ANECDOTES OF NAPOLEON.

Count d'Orsenne one day accompanied the emperor on a reconnoitring excursion. The emperor had been complaining of thirst, and some one seeing a vivandiere, or sutler woman, at a little distance, called to her. The woman did not know Napoleon, or any of his escort. She gave the Emperor a glass of spring water united with a little brandy, and then curtsied for payment.

"There, my good woman," pointing to Count d'Orsune, "there is the emperor, ask him for the money. He pays for us all."

The woman blushed, and looked embarrassed; then, turning to the count, she scanned his splendid uniform with the eye of a connoisseur, and said:

"He! pooh, nonsense! Do you think I am fool enough to believe that? The emperor is not such a coxcomb. You, sir, look much more like him yourself."

The emperor was much amused at this remark and gave the woman a double louis.

Count Daru, who was one of the party on the evening when prince Cambaceres related the above, said:

'Your amusing story, Monseigneur, reminds me of another also relating to one of those campFollowing sympics, called vivandier es. You know how carefully the emperor preserved his incognito, when he was with the army. It was well he did so; for he frequently ventured into places where, had he been known, he would have incurred the greatest risks. During one of the campaigns in Germany, the emperor, wrapped in his celebrated grey great coat, was riding about in the environs of Munich, attended only by two orderly sergeants. He met on the road a very pretty looking females who by her dress was very evidently a vivandiere. She was weeping and was leading by the hand a little boy about 6 years old. Struck by the beauty of the woman, and her distress, the emperor pulled up his horse by the road side, and said:

'What is the matter with you, my dear?'

The woman, not knowing the individual by whom she was addressed, and being much disconposed by grief, made no reply. The little boy, however, was more communicative, and he frankly answered

'My mother is crying because father has beat her."

"Where is your father?"

'Close by here. He is one of the sentinels on duty with the baggage.'

The emperor again addressed the woman, and inquired the name of her husband; but she refused to tell, being fearful lest the captain, as she supposed him to be would cause her husband to be punished. Napoleon, I am sorry to say, had but little confidence in the fair sex. On this occasion, his habitual suspicions occurred to his mind and he said:

'Malpeste, your husband has been beating you, you are weeping, and you are afraid of getting him into trouble, that you will not tell me his name.' This irately inconsistent! May it not be you are a little in fault yourself?"

'Alas, Captain he has a thousand good qualities, though he has one very bad one—he is terribly jealous; and when he gets into a passion, he cannot restrain his violence.'

'But this is rather serious; in one of his fits of jealousy he may inflict on you some severe injury—perhaps kill you.'

'And even if he did, I should not wish any harm to come to him; for I am sure he would be, so it wilfully. He loves me too well for that.'

'And at I guess right, you love him.'

'That is very natural, captain; he is my husband, and the father of my dear boy.'

So saying, she fondly kissed her boy, who by the way in which he returned her caresses, proved his affection for his mother. Napoleon was moved by this touching picture, in spite of the heart of iron, or marble, or adamant, which has so often been attached to him.

"Well," said he, again turning to the woman, "whether you and your husband love each other or not, I do not choose that he should beat you—I am—I am one of the emperor's aids, and I will mention the affair to his majesty—tell me your husband's name."

'If you were the emperor himself I would not tell you, for I know he would be punished."

"Silly woman! All I want is to teach him to behave well to you, and to treat you with the respect you deserve."

"That would make me very happy, captain; but I do not choose to have him punished."

The emperor made some remark upon female obstinacy, and galloped off.

When he was out of the woman's hearing, he said to the officers who accompanied him.

"Well, gentlemen, what do you think of that affectionate creature? There are not many such at the Tuileries. A wife like that is a treasure to her husband."

In the course of a few minutes, the baggage, of which the boy had spoken, came up. It was escorted by a company of the 52d. Napoleon despatched one of the officers who was riding with him to desire the commander of the escort to come to him.

"Should you, a vivandiere in your company?"

"Yes, sire," replied the captain.

"Has she a child?"

"Yes, little Genil, whom we are all so fond of."

"Has not the woman been beaten by her husband?"

"I was not aware of the circumstance till some time after the occurrence. I have reprimanded the man."

"Is he generally well conducted?"

"He is the best behaved man in the company. He is very jealous of his wife, but without reason. The woman's conduct is irreproachable."

"Does he know me by sight?"

"I cannot say, sire; but as he has just arrived from Spain, I think it is probable he does not."

"Try and ascertain whether he has ever seen me, and if he has not, bring him hither. Say you wish to bring him before the general of the division."

On inquiry, it appeared that Napoleon had never been seen by the grenadier, who was a very fine looking man, about 35. When he was conducted to Napoleon, the latter said in a familiar tone:

"what is the reason, my lad, that you beat your wife? She is a young and pretty woman, and is a better wife than you are a husband—Such conduct in a French grenadier is disgraceful."

"Bah, general! if women are to be believed, they are never in the wrong. I have forbidden my wife to say one word whatever; and even in spite of my commands she is talking constantly with one or other of my comrades."

"Now there is your mistake. You want to prevent a woman from talking—you might as well try to turn the course of the Danube. Take my advice, do not be jealous. Let your wife go up and be merry... If she were doing wrong, it is likely she would be sad instead of gay. Your comrades are not capuchins; but I am much mistaken if they would not respect another man's wife. Be sure that you do not strike your wife again; and if, my order be not obeyed the emperor shall hear of it. Suppose his majesty should reprimand you what would you say then?"

"Ma foi! general, my wife is mine, and I may beat her if I choose. I should say to the emperor, Sire, look you to the enemy, are leave me to manage my wife."

Napoleon laughed and said: "My good fellow you are now speaking to the emperor."

The word produced the usual magic effect. The grenadier looked confused, held down his head, and said:

"Do you say that quite alters the case. Since your majesty commands, I of course obey."

"That's right. I hear an excellent character of your wife. Every body speaks well of her. She braved my displeasure rather than expose you to punishment. Reward her by kin treatment. I promote you to the rank of Sergeant and when you arrive at Munich apply to the Grand Marechal du Palais, and he will present you with four hundred francs. With that you can buy a sutler's caravan, which will enable you or your wife to carry on a profitable business. Your son is a fine boy, and at some future time he shall be provided for. But mind, never let me hear of your beating you wife again. If I do you shall find that I can deal hard blows as well as you."

"Ah, Sire! I can never be sufficiently grateful for your kindness."

Two or three years after this circumstance the Emperor was with the army in another campaign. Napoleon, you know, has a wonderful memory, and if he once sees a man or woman whom he has once seen. On one of his reviews, he met, and recognized the vivandiere and her son. He immediately rode up to her, saying,

"Well, my good woman, how do you do—how your husband kept the promise he made me."

"Oh, sire, oh sire! Since my good star led me into the presence of your majesty, I have been the happiest of women."

"Then reward me by being the most virtuous of wives."

A few pieces of gold were presented with these words; and as Napoleon rode off, the cries of "Vive l'Empereur," uttered by the mother and son were enthusiastically repeated by the whole battalion.

A Jack-tar, who had heard of musical accompaniments, symphonies, &c. being one night at a play, where there appeared a great diversity of taste among the audience, who were calling to the orchestra for the different tunes, he determined to put in his claim for a favorite, and standing up in the pit, he set the house in a roar, by calling out—

"Hello! messmate with the big fiddle, give us Yankee Doodle with the trimmings."

Royal Presents.—The Queen and Duchess of Kent have been presented with sundry pairs of stockings, knit from Shetland wool by the hands of Shetland women; so fine that although each thread consists of three strands, a pair of the stockings can be drawn with ease through a lady's finger ring.

Joseph Wolf, the Missionary.—We publish the annexed address from this extraordinary individual sent by him to this paper, from Washington.—N. Y. Amer.

To the Children of Israel according to the Rest, scattered throughout the United States of North America.

My beloved brethren of the seed of Abraham! I am leaving this happy country, where no distinction is made between Jew and Gentile; for my beloved wife has written to me that I should return before thinking of any other expedition; and I would sin in not obeying her request; for, though it is my ardent desire to continue proclaiming the tidings of salvation to "Greenlands icy mountains, to Indias coral strand" I would transgress the first command of God, if I should not now return, after having received her request. "For unless a man shall leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife" which commandment is also mentioned in the New Testament, and therefore I obey joyfully, not reluctantly; for I show thus, that I wish to fulfil all righteousness, and to follow my Saviour in truth. Indeed, if I was now to persist in going about to preach the Gospel in America, whilst my wife wishes to join her and my child, I certainly would degenerate into a wild fanatic. I therefore leave this country! and return to my wife and child!

Dear Brethren! To-night I have never slagled you out during my ministerios, you have favored me with your attendance at my public discourses! Excuse me if you have kindly invited me in Pennsylvania to stay with you in your houses, and have even gone so far as to make arrangements for delivering my public discourses in churches; with some of you I remained up till one o'clock in the morning, declaring the hope which is in me! You have heard me declare before the Gentiles that I had not given up my mission; you have heard me preach openly upon the prophecies predicting the future brilliancy of the Jewish nation, when the Lord shall gather you from all the nations of the earth and bring you back to your own land, which our fathers possessed! But, dear brethren, at the same time I was not to be silent to the fact, that blindness indeed has happened to Israel, when they crucified Jesus Cuxtier, the Lord of Glory. Blindness, indeed, has happened to Israel; for until this day, remaineth the veil untaken away, in the reading of the Old Testament. My dear brethren, just as it will be literary fulfilled that the Messiah will reign upon Mount Zion; thus it was literally fulfilled, that he shall be "despised and rejected of men, and a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." However, as this present notice is intended for a public newspaper, I cannot enter into a further inquiry into fulfilled Prophecy. Dear brethren, soon, very soon, my body shall be laid in the silent grave, and my physical powers diminishing. I leave therefore behind this declaration to your Israelites in America—that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God; that Jesus of Nazareth came into the world to save sinners; that Jesus of Nazareth is the name given under heaven by which men can be saved; and that you may be convinced, is the earnest prayer of your affectionate brother and friend.

ENVENOM.

If a man possessed every qualification to succeed in life, it is probable that he would remain perfectly stationary. The consciousness of his powers would tempt him to omit opportunity to the end of his days. Those who do succeed, ordinarily owe their success to some disadvantages under which they labor, and it is the struggle against a difficulty, that brings faculties into play.

Ordinary men are often ruined by an overestimate of their own powers: extraordinary men are kept back by the opposite error. They calculate remote difficulties, instead of advancing to them; and if they meet, in their researches, they would find no obstacle to be insurmountable.

In general, the difficulty of doing any thing chiefly lies in preparing to do it—in the proper training, or acquiring an apt disposition of mind and body. What it is difficult to do in one state it is difficult not to do in another; and the applies equally to the exercise of physical and mental faculties, to running or fighting, to speaking or composing. Plutarch says of Epaminondas, that he made little account of beating an enemy, compared with the bringing his army to strict discipline; for he thought the one a certain consequence of the other. It is skill and resolution in acquiring the proper disposition to action, that make life easy. This disposition is what is needed in virtue, and its opposite is that distressing repugnance, discomfiture and uneasiness, both depending upon the state of digestive powers. Under one influence existence is a perpetual source of pleasure, and under the other, an exhibition of painful weakness. These two states depend greatly upon mutual association, but no less perhaps upon our own care.

Vocal Music.

Patent Notes.—The question has often been asked why the lozenge shaped characters called patent notes, are not regarded as an improvement in musical notation so far especially as sacred music is concerned. It is generally agreed to do not succeed in learning to read music where the common characters are used, while the process comparatively easy when the lozenge shapes are introduced. The shapes fix the names of the notes, and the names it is thought bring the sound to mind with sufficient accuracy.

Intelligent teachers of vocal music are agreed in discarding the latter system; but when its friends demand a reason for this united opposition the reasons given are not often satisfactory because they presuppose readers know less than they often fall to the lot of those who have paid but little attention to the subject.

There are reasons however which lie in the compass of common observation and these it may be well to lay before our readers.

1. The characters in question are very inconvenient for the purposes of writing. Musical copyists would be as much perplexed with the lozenge shapes as business men would be, if required to write the uses of ancient black letter characters in their writings. This to any unprejudiced mind would be regarded as an important consideration.

2. The shapes while they create embarrassments to those who copy music are of no use except to novices in the art of singing. Instruments would never derive the smallest advantage from them; but would only meet with variation of shapes without meaning. This would create embarrassment, at least to some extent. The simplicity of characters is a principle of great practical advantage.

3. The lozenge characters are not a new invention. They were tried centuries ago for just pieces similar to those of the present plan, and found unsatisfactory. Experience has decided in favor of round notes. Experience is certainly better than theory.

4. All the civilized nations are agreed on adopting the round characters; and a few uncultivated men in America will not succeed in effecting a change. This is evident both from the history and the present state of the art. Who could persuade the accomplished artists of Italy to relinquish the nice digits in favor of Rossini capitals?

5. But there is another reason which to those who can duly appreciate it, must set the matter entirely at rest. Those who are instructed on the patent note system, will invariably have a bad intonation. Individual exceptions may perhaps arise, but the remark as a general one, has all the certainty of a fixed rule. The reason why this should be so is quite obvious to the scientific vocalists, however obscure it may seem to others.

The use of syllables to the pupil in vocal music, in bring sounds to mind by the power of association. The voice in singing scales through the various portions of a given scale, either by regular degrees, as from one sound to another which stands next in the ascending or descending series, or it proceeds by skips, as from the first impediate to the third or fourth, or from the first out to the sixth or seventh, &c. In the former case, the relative situation of notes gives sufficient indication of names and pitches, as in the tune Dukesfield (sometimes called Newry) where the tune commences with the entire ascending scale, with the omission of the second degree, and then proceeds nearly half way down with the descending series. Shapes applied to such a passage could not make it, on the whole, any plainer than it is without them. But in the latter case, i. e. when the music proceeds by skips the shapes are intended to save the pupil the labor of calculation. This is the very purpose for which they are intended. They save the labor of calculation, and enable the novice at a single glance it should seem to gain any distance required. But what if the labor thus proposed to be saved is the very thing required to make accurate musicians? What if this special labor is indispensable to the discipline of vocal taste? This is a consideration which in our own mind outweighs every other; and in urging it upon our readers it is needless to remind them that we speak the language of personal experience and observation, having been for these thirty years past more or less actively employed in the labor of cultivation.

Eclipses.

Two of the Sun, and two of the Moon. The most remarkable is a visible annular one of the sun between 3 and 6 o'clock, P. M. of the 18th of September.

From the Norfolk Herald of Dec. 29.

Died on Saturday night last Mr. Peter Singlo, aged 23 years.

Descended from one of the oldest, wealthiest, and most respectable families in our neighborhood, he left almost the sole possessor of the vast fortune, the subject of this notice found himself, the day when the law allowed him to enter upon it, in possession of a property which could not be estimated far short of $300,000. Unfortunately, though no common pains had been bestowed on his education, and he had manifested no deficiency of mind or deficiency in principle, there was left to his own inclinations and propensities, which led him to idle pleasures and dangerous courses and associations which led the unthinking of his rank. He was courted, flattered, and caressed by the artful and designing, who saw his weakness, and sought to take advantage of it. It is needless to enter into particulars. In two or three years the racecourse and the gaming table swept his large estate, and left him a helpless dependent on a few friends; but habits of intemperance, which he had acquired by his pe-

Public Meeting.

The citizens of Plainfield who feel an interest in its prosperity are very respectfully invited to meet at Mr. Jacob Thorn's Long Room, on Monday Evening, 8th inst. at 8 o'clock. The object of the meeting will then be stated, and an opportunity given for a friendly interchange of opinions. Those who would increase the value of their property by a trifling effort to improve the public good will then and there be told how it may be done. "Come and see," and bring your neighbors with you, and let us have a social, sober and friendly meeting.

For the Plainfield Union.

Mr. Editor:

Will you permit me through your columns to direct the attention of the citizens of Plainfield to a subject which ought to interest them deeply. I have noticed with pleasure the efforts which have been made and are still in progress for the relief of the poor in our neighboring villages. There is scarce any place where the needy are not to be found, even in ordinary times, and in such times as these there must be great distress in many instances. There are some, who, when want comes upon them boldly face their fellow men, and beg; but many (and those the most deserving) are of a disposition unretiring and modest to force themselves upon the notice of their more fortunate neighbors, and they with their children must suffer. Such persons should be sought out and relief should be extended to them. It is too much to expect that some 2 or 3 individuals should take upon themselves the trouble and expense of this work—and the object would be much more effectually accomplished if more system tic and united efforts were made.

I have made enquiry and found that there are several families in Plainfield, who need and must have help. Now I would respectfully suggest, that a society be formed, the object of which will be the assistance of such persons—whose members shall make it their business to find out the needy, and do something for their benefit. This society should be formed by the ladies. Plainfield can boast of many who would rejoice in an opportunity to do good, and they are peculiarly fitted for such work. They know more than their sons," than we, and know how to give with a delicacy which cannot offend; moreover they by their familiarity with domestic economy and household arrangements, can better determine what things are needed most, and will be most acceptable in each individual case. The gentlemen should supply the means, and they can not do without the least inconvenience to themselves or their families.

If I might be allowed to propose a plan for such a society, I would suggest that as many ladies as can conveniently should meet weekly, and devote some 2 or 3 hours to social chat chat, and sewing or knitting, and that the proceeds should be employed in promoting the object specified. That each member should select other names from the gentlemen of her acquaintance, and such ladies as are not members, to furnish materials to be used in their labors, or by purchase find another more economical for such as need them. The Flannel garment thus bestowed upon the infant, may save its life, while the deed of charity will rejoice the hearts of both recipient and giver. The bag of flour or the basket of potatoes may relieve more misery than is known of, except by those who suffer it—sickness may be prevented and sorrow cured.

Will not the ladies of Plainfield come forward and demonstrate. We care not whether upon this plan or some other—whether there be one society or half a dozen, so that the benevolent object be accomplished. We wish not to dictate, nor do we think it necessary. We believe they have both intelligence and kindness sufficient for the work. Perhaps the gentlemen will see the propriety of making some efforts to raise funds, in cases at their disposal; as they are not unwilling ministers to make great efforts for the inhabitants of China or the South Sea Islands,—and they surely will not have misery survived by death their very eyes.

CHARITY.

For the Plainfield Union.

Many and probably most of our valuable periodicals are now monthly publishing extracts from the eloquent address of the Hon. Samuel L. Southard, delivered before the two literary societies of the College of New Jersey, on the day preceding its last commencement. This is as it should be. It is doubtful whether our most worthy editors can advance the cause of learning and virtue better than by giving publicity to the arguments of this truly great man in defence of the Sacred Scriptures. Young men whose minds are by no means sufficiently cultivated to appreciate correctly this production ought not to content themselves with mere extracts. They should be induced to read for himself, the pamphlet. An amazing amount of the whole piece would reach the eye and the mind, and the labor of it was not felt. It is scarcely possible for any intelligent man to read the address without resolving to make himself more fa-

THE UNION
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Wednesday Morning, January 3, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Time, how steady, how powerful yet silent! and oh, how fleet!—swifter in its course than the unseen current that wind lightning's flash cleaving the firmament,—and stronger than Hercules, raising the fallen, and bringing the great and mighty of the earth low, even to the dust. Another year is added to those numbered with ages past, and another has commenced its ceaseless round.

It is wise in man to take some note of time, as it is "the stuff that life is made off," and on this anniversary, the new year's day, which full often returns, as we all know who have lived long enough to feel that time passes quickly away, and life itself but a day dream, it is peculiarly appropriate that we review the past, and consider a little as to what will be the end thereof when a few more such anniversaries shall have passed by, and left us—where?

God has seen fit in great mercy to spare our lives another year! He has seen fit also to summon many that were with us at the last New Year's day, to the trial from which there is no appeal! and he only knows who of us will be summoned and who spared in the year upon which we have entered. Let us think of this, and we shall become better men, better citizens, and better christians. God has seen fit also during the year that has just passed, sorely to afflict our whole nation, with a starving want in the midst of plenty—with a lack of necessary food when the land has given her abundant increase! and who shall say that He has not righteously afflicted us?—who shall say that unless we come to worship money, and learn righteousness as a nation he will not still more grievously afflict us, in the year now commenced? Why he should not do so, we can see no reason to satisfy ourselves, though by no means inclined to look upon the dark side of things.

We believe, and have always believed that the present and past unexampled state of things has been righteously inflicted upon us by the great ruler of the universe, for National transgressions—and when did God ever remove his judgments before repentance of the faults for which they were given—and what repentance has been manifested by this people?—and we fear He will see fit to keep His hand still heavy upon us. We hope better things though we thus speak.

The past year has also been unexampled in our history in respect to the vast amount of property and the great number of lives lost on our waters. It has been almost incalculable. This lends us still more strongly to a suspect that our Creator has had something to do with our recent calamities.

Having thus freely expressed our own views of the past and future, which some might think inclined to fanaticism, we will view the subject in another light. Considering the present pressure to have been caused by the large amount of banking capital, speculation, over buying, &c. as all parties agree on,—the causes having duly prepared or been diminished, their bad effects, it would seem, must also disappear or be diminished. Over-importation and speculation have long since ceased, our debt to Europe has been reduced almost to nothing, and the amount of banking paper has been much diminished. If the distress arose from these causes, better times it must soon be our lot to see. If it arose from the measures of the administration, as many believe, those measures not having been in the least degree, or no probably that they ever will be, help from that quarter cannot with confidence be relied on, though the administration party may seem to exist to be diminished. Whatever may be our opinion, our sincere hope is that the year upon which we have entered will be more prosperous than the one preceding.

It would be proper here to add some suggestions as to what each man should do on the return of this anniversary, but for this we feel incompetent—and indeed there is no need, for every one knows well enough what he ought to do, were he but so inclined. We will merely say what we feel to be true, that happiness is not to be found in political excitement, or in seeking or holding office, or in wealth, or in the applause of those who only seek their own interest;—but rather let every man seek his happiness by his own fire, side, in contentment, temperance, and an approving conscience. In conclusion, we will trespass on your patience by giving two lines of advice: Earn for yourself all necessary food and raiment, and thank nobody but God for them,—and Fear only Him.

Correspondence of the Newark Daily Advertiser.
BURLINGTON, in New Jersey, 28th Dec. 1837.
To the Clergymen of all Denominations in the United States of North America—and to all the Laymen, and to all the Christian Ladies in America;

My Dear Friends:—I am now going, and therefore permit me to say to you a few words more, through the public papers. I have had the privilege during my peregrinations in the United States to proclaim to you, from the several pulpits, the use of which was granted to me by preachers of different denominations, the visible and personal appearance, and reign of Jesus Christ upon Earth, the Resurrection of the Jews to their own Land, the First Resurrection, and the Restoration of the Earth, which shall be the eternal abode of Jesus Christ, the second Adam, the Lord from Heaven. In order that you may undess and my views. I leave behind these gener. al remarks:

1. There is a habitable earth to come.
2. That this earth shall be subject to Christ.
3. He shall come personally to set upon the throne of His Father David at Jerusalem when all enemies will be made important.
4. The resurrection of Christ's mystical body.
5. The objection of attacks from the highest powers and principalities, down to Onesand Sheep Pa. 8.

6. He will cease to be a Mediator, and giving up the Kingdom of Providence to God the Father, take to himself the usurped Political Kingdom of the world—He shall sit upon the throne of David for ever.

7. The Prophet Elijah shall make his appearance before Christ's coming—for John the Baptist came only in the power and spirit of Elijah, and I also maintain that the present signs of the times announce that Christ's coming is very nigh at hand.

I therefore advise you, my friends, to search the Scriptures, whether these things are so, for, my dear friends, search we not followed cunningly devised fables in making known unto you the power and the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, for these views are contained in the records of those prophets who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and the warning eight verses of the words of the Holy Ghost is a sin against the Holy Ghost. Let us therefore not condemn the preaching of the Second Coming as mere speculation. You would not say that it is a mere speculation if a person was to announce to you on good authority that your house is on fire—you would go and try to extinguish it—and how should he the Coming of Him who is consuming fire, who shall smite the wicked with the breath of His mouth, be a mere Speculation. I advise you then, my dear friends, to read more thoroughly your Bible, and you may also do well to read the following writings on this subject:

1. Reverend Mr. Dickerseith on Prophecies.
2. All the writings on this subject by William Cunninghame of Lainsh w.
3. The writings of the Rev. W. Goldsworth.
4. The writings of the Reverend Henry Melville.
5. The writings of J. H. Frere on prophecies.

Yours very truly and affectionately,
JOSEPH WOLFF,
Missionary, to Jew and Gentile.

FROM CANADA.

Mr. Mackenzie having obtained the aid of Gen. Van Rensselaer, of Albany, and some other military gentlemen, made a stand last Friday morning and raised the flag of Liberty on Navy Island. This Island lies below Grand Island, just above the village of Chippewa; belongs to Canada, and contains about 300 acres. As a place of security and defence it is about equal to the fortress of Gibraltow. I have this day been to Navy Island, and spent most of the day there. I had an interview with Mr. Mackenzie, Van Rensselaer and others, and found that they had organized a provisional Government, published a proclamation, (a splendid one) of which I brought away a number of copies, and were preparing vigorously for a military campaign. They have already on the Island several hundred of volunteers, 5 pieces of cannon, 500 stand of arms with bayonets, 100 rifles and plenty of all kinds of food. All are in fine spirits, and scores and fifties are joining them every day, and both from this side and from Canada. They are also strong in their works, drilling the soldiers, and making all necessary preparations for defence. But the other party will never be so infatuated as to attack them there; 500 men on that Island can keep off and destroy 10,000. McKenzie's plan is, as soon as he'collects a couple of, thousand or so, to march into Canada and take Niagara, Hamilton, Toronto, &c. Gen. Duncamble, in the London district, has already got 3000 Patriots under arms, ready to co-operate with McKenzie.

From the Rochester Democrat, Dec. 21st.

Dr. Rolph reached the city last evening from Buffalo.

On Navy Island, affairs are progressing finely. Recruits are hourly increasing. Dr Rolph is of the opinion—from his knowledge of the Patriot strength in the Province—that if 1000 men could secure a foot hold on the main land, they could, with the aid which would immediately flock to their standard, conquer the Province. It is supposed there are 1000 royal troops under arms on the main land opposite Navy Island. But, from information received, we believe more than one half of these royal troops will join the Patriot Standard, the moment they can do so by any possibility. Indeed, so fearful are their commanders of their loyalty, they drill many of them without arms, and fear they would desert to Navy Island, all the boats have been sunk.

Tuesday, Dec. 19.

The Senate was almost exclusively engaged with the bill to restrain the circulation of small notes of banks in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. It makes it an indictable offence after April next, with a penalty of $100, for such banks to issue or circulate any notes or bills or other paper on speculation where the sum named is less than $5. Audit is made the duty of the juries, and the district attorney to prosecute and prosecute all offenders, and the duty of grand jurors to present the same in charge at the commencement of the next term. The offender is also made liable to a prosecution for the amount in specie with costs, and 50 per cent damages!

The debate was a most exciting one, but the bill passed, 31 to 0!

The House had quite a working day, having passed about fifty private bills from the Committee on Claims many of these claims have been pressed for twenty years. From the determination of the majority of the House, to act on the over plus to-day, and finally dispose of such as are in order of important business in favor of the session may be drawn of its business like character. Both Houses adjourned to meet on Thursday next.

Tuesday, Dec. 26.

In Senate, Mr. Swift gave notice that he would not introduce the report and resolutions from the legislature of Vermont the day, as he had intended—but would wait until the Senate should be full.

In the House, the memorial from the Peace Society of N. Y. presented some days ago by Mr. Adams, was taken up and debated through the day.

Wednesday, Dec. 27.

In Senate, Mr. Morris presented the memorial of the yearly meeting of Friends, in the West section of Pa. and east of Ohio, against the annexation of Texas.

Read, laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

In the House, the speaker laid before the House the Credentials of Gen. Prentiss and T. F. Wall, members elect from the state of Mississippi, which were read.

Mr. Bell moved that these members be sworn.

Mr. Cambreleng moved that the credentials be referred to the committee on elections.

After much debate, the motion to refer the subject to the committee on elections, with instructions to report the facts in the case, prevailed.

Thursday, Dec. 28.

In Senate, Mr. Tyler rose to lay the following resolutions, with views of a like character, on the table, and to move that they be printed.

Resolved, that any interference by one or more states, or by people of one or more states, with the domestic institutions of any other state of the Union, or with any of its reserved rights and powers over these institutions, is a palpable and dangerous infraction of the spirit of the constitution of the U. States, tending directly to disturb the peace and tranquility of the Union, and to endanger the ties which connect us together as one people.

Resolved that the Senate of the United States, will neither receive, nor entertain any petition, memorial, resolutions or other paper, praying Congress to prohibit the slave trade

Resolved, That, as it would be a breach of the public faith of the nation to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, without the consent of the people of the District, the Senate will neither receive nor entertain any petition, memorial, resolution, or other paper, praying for the adoption of such measures in relation proceeded from the People of the District of Columbia.

The resolutions being read, they were laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the resolutions offered yesterday by Mr. Calhoun.

(These resolutions are similar to those given above.) Mr. Calhoun said he did not want to discuss the subject now, although he desired to have it discussed before the Vermont resolutions.

In the House, The reference of a memorial presented by Mr. Adams on Monday week, from the N. York Peace Society, was taken up. The motion immediately before the House were, 1st. To refer to a memorial to the committee on Foreign Affairs, and 2dly to refer it to a select committee, with instructions to report thereon.

It was ultimately referred to the committee on Foreign Affairs, 117 to 54.

Richard K. Frost, indicted for manslaughter in cutting the ill advised gentleman, by the administration of laudanum, steaming, and other injurious proceedings upon the "Tippecanoe plan," was found guilty in the fourth degree, on Saturday, and was sentenced to mercy by the jury. This trial has excited much attention, and we hope the verdict will serve as a caution to the fellow practitioners, and deter them from experimentalizing upon the credulous, where life is in jeopardy.—*N. Receipt for curing Hams.—For Curing 150lbs of ham (or in the proportion for any quantity) take 1oz. of saltpetre, half a pint of Molasses, a teaspoonful of pearlash—mix them in a strong pickle, and let the hams lay in it for six weeks—the hams are of small size days less will answer. Before hanging up, wash them well in warm water, and smoke the fifty side with a mixture of cayenne pepper and molasses, which will prevent the flies disturbing them. This receipt is worth a year's subscription to any newspaper to a person housekeeping in the country. There can be no mistake about it, as we have it direct from the lips of a gentleman whose hams are worth double if cured in the common manner.—Woodbury Herald.

* * * * *

What is it but a map of busy life,
Its farts done and its vast concerns!"

Of all the means that conduce to the healthy growth of a town, none are so powerful as a well conducted press. It furnishes to every citizen a channel through which he can convey his thoughts to his townsmen on all subjects either of general or local interest. It is an organ through which the whole community may be addressed at once, and roused to action, or stimulated to enterprise. It is to each private citizen better than an Argus for it is the combined that watches a thousand eyes, and summons a thousand hands to the defence of its rights.

We have a press in our own peaceful and happy town,—a press devoted to no party—under the control of no editor, who in general, has at heart the welfare of his fellow men, and in particular, the prosperity of his own town and its vicinity. Is the encouragement it meets commensurate with its value, as a medium of social intercourse, or as an instrument of public prosperity? I am not disposed to wage war with foreign papers. I would rather (if proper selections are made,) see them multiplied than diminished.—Foreign papers are valuable, and those that are edited at or near the centre of commercial operations present to us the earliest intelligence on all subjects of general interest. There are but few however in any town that take the same foreign papers, and consequently the town as such reaps but little advantage from them.

Merchants and mechanics of Plainfield ! do you wish to direct the attention of the surrounding will get to your stores and to your shops ? Take the paper and pay for it. Landlords and Landlabourers ! is your interest identified with the prosperity of your town ? Go immediately, and subscribe for the paper and down with the "plasters !" Farmers ! who for months have been calling down what little specie the banks failed to lock up, do you wish to have a ready market at hand, for the sale of all your produce ? Then take the paper, and if you will not spare the "coal grit," till nobody wants it, pay for it in grain, or in rags, or in whatever ! If all who have an interest in this matter would attend to it immediately, our industrious editor would get good paper, with fair type, speak well to and of us ; and come quantity rangers of good character, and heavy purses would buy lots and occupy them. Let us try it one year.

An Admirer of Plainfield.

We feel so much obliged to "An Admirer of Plainfield," for his talented appeal in our behalf, that we promise him that from this time forth, we will use a good quality of paper, manufactured expressly for the Union ; and if his appeal is complied with, much improvement in other respects will soon be apparent.

☞ We learn by a gentleman from the scene of strife, that a Frenchman named Beaver Meadow, 40 miles from Easton, Pa. on Wednesday last About 20 Irish laborers, for some offence given in relation to change at a public house, attacked the landlord and a number of others with axes, clubs, &c. and almost killed the Landlord, and two others,—besides a number more much injured. Two companies of Militia were ordered out and 22 of the Irish rioters were taken, and on Friday, confined in Easton Jail.

A noble Deed.—A few days since, says the Sandusky Express of the 20th inst a gentleman from Philadelphia, with his wife and only child, a daughter about 4 years old, had taken passage in the Buffalo, which was making preparations to depart. The little daughter having wandered upon some of her father's arms, and while looking over the guards fell overboard. The cry was given of a drowning child ! The father could not swim, the mother in an instant became distracted. At length the former cried out, "will no one save my child ;—my only child !"—At the moment a boy apparently a boy about 12 years of age sprang forward, saying, sir, I'll try to save your child !" And diving a few steps, the lad, follow pluged out with his clothes and boots on. The child was going down a second time its thirty feet water, when the boy dug it by the hair and secured it safely to the other. The last it is to say he related conversation he had done.

Guest Mail Robbers.—The Express Mail has been robbed between Louisville and Nashville, the carriers, of drafts and checks to the amount of nearly seventy thousand dollars in all about these thousand dollars in Bank notes. Two of the riders (boys) were yesterday arrested and committed ; one of whom was found a his trunk dollars of the money, the rest yesterday taken up and committed, a resident of this city, with whom the robbed despatched ten thousand of their money. The errors of justice are on the track, and in a short time a fourth, whom there is little doubt they will overtake.

Meeting for Common Schools.

Plainfield has taken its first step, spoken on this momentous subject, nobly has and gained to herself honor. The meeting was large and composed of the most influential inhabitants of the place. Every thing was conducted with the utmost unanimity, and cordiality. The 4th resolution is equal to any we have seen passed at any meeting on this subject, heretofore held in this state.

We give the proceedings as furnished us by the Secretaries.

At a Meeting of the citizens of Plainfield, for the promotion of an efficient System of Common School Education, held pursuant to notice, in the Presbyterian Church, on Friday Evening, December 29th, 1837, John Wilcox was called to the chair, and Zachariah Webster, and Thomas Wallace, appointed Secretaries.

The Memorial on Common Schools prepared at Princeton was read and on motion of Cornelius Bates, seconded by the Rev. Lewis Read, was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be circulated in this place for signatures ; whereupon the following committee of five were appointed for that purpose, viz : Zachariah Webster, Jarvis B. Ayres; John Briant, Rundolph Dunham, and Jacob Manning.

On motion of Rev. Dew's Read, seconded by Zachariah Webster, Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to present the above memorial to the Legislature at its next session, and that the same persons be delected to represent this meeting in the Common School Convention, to be held in Trenton on the 16th day of January next, and that this committee have power to fill all vacancies. The following gentlemen were appointed and committee, viz : Martin Runyon, Ezra Fairchild, Cornelius Bates, John W. Craig, and Zachariah Webster.

On motion of Z charish Webster seconded by Ezra Fairchild, Resolved, that we consider the present Common School law in effect, not adapted to promote the interests of education, and we recommend a repeal of the same.

On motion of Ezra Fairchild, seconded by Zachariah Webster, Resolved, that the perpetuity of our free institutions depends on elevating the employment of the Common School Teacher to an equality with other pursuits, both in regard to respectability and emolument, and that the desirable object can be obtained only by encouraging competition.

On motion the following was adopted without a dissenting voice ;

Resolved, That this meeting as a part of the people of New Jersey assure the Legislature, that they will cheerfully submit to any amount of taxation that shall be duly necessary to raise the funds required to put the said support an efficient system of education,—believing they shall be richly rewarded in the improved state of society consequent upon the general diffusion of knowledge and sound morals among the people

On motion, Resolved, That we highly approve of the numerous meetings in this State for the improvement of Common Schools.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Plainfield Union and Newark Daily Advertiser. JOHN WILSON, Chm.

THE NEW YORK MIRROR.

The last number contains an unusual variety of original articles from Messrs. Morris, Fay and Hoffman, the editors ; Cox, Willis, Durlap, Inman, Lawrie Todd, &c. And is embellished with an engraved likeness of Washington Irving, which forms one of the series of portraits of eminent literary men of our country Engraved by Pasker, and the Mirror says that no likeness of Mr. Irving that has ever been presented to the public, so true and life like. The typographical excellence of the present number is worthy of all praise.

Algiers in Advance of New Jersey.—It appears by statements recently published in the Paris "Moniteur," and confirmed by the Baltimore American, that the French Government in the exercise of a wise and manly spirit, has set itself about the great work of securing to Algiers and its dependencies the blessings of enlightened education. Public and private schools have been established throughout the country since the conquest by the French arms, and the pictures here given is enough to make Jerseyman blush for our worse than Algerine apathy on this great subject.

Jerry Snow, very early in the morning, was invited out by his companion, who said, "Come Snow, the day is breaking"—"Well," said Snow, let it break, it don't owe me any thing.

The citizens of St. Louis are making strenuous exertions in favor of the Temperance cause. The Bulletin states that the owners of the steamboats United States and Majestic, two of the largest boats on the river in the United States, have done away with the custom of keeping BARS or selling ardent spirits on board their boats.

We learn from the Providence Journal that Mr. Southard, of N. Jersey, is employed by the Governor of Rhode Island to assist the counsel with Mr. Hazard, to take charge of the case pending in the Supreme Court of the U. States, relating to the boundary line between that State and Massachusetts.

Shin Plasters.—A case was decided in Dauphin Co. Pa., a few days since, before Judges Darlington and Myers, in which a man was indicted for stealing a pocket book containing two fifty cent shin plasters, it being doubted that as they were issued in violation of law, it was no offence against the law to take and carry them away. He was convicted on the pocket book.—Woodbury Herald.

Our City.—All is getting ready, and will soon be in our streets. Every thing seems lively and at present there is scarcity of every article except flour, which is plenty. The Canal from Lockport to Lake Ontario is progressing extraordinarily. Even the Lewiston Heights is probably no more in the grand valley of the Lewistonpie improving as fast as Vicksburg.—Vicksburg Sentinel.

Michigan.—From a late census of the State, only complete in 4 counties, the population of Michigan will not vary much from 182,000.

Notice.

☞ There will be a meeting of the Young Men's Temperance Society, on Friday Evening next, 5th inst. at half past six o'clock, at the Baptist Church. An Address will be delivered by Mr. Alexander H. 295.9 square miles. X.
Over 295 square miles, or 189,490 acres Sebastos.

The two latter are right—Q is 15 or 20 times too small.

We made quite an error last week in X's rule. It should read thus : next, twice the area multiplied by the perpendicular and divided by the base will be a second, &c.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR, and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts; established with unexampled success; containing engravings of steel, copper and wood—among many beautiful designs, are engraved for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—sketches of the literary intelligence—and notices of the foreign countries, the correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the noted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading, relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will excel its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume. Besides which, choice translation from the French and German, (rather than republish) and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve to diversify, and render it one of the most popular periodical and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will prove to be the best predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists, have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

Washing Machines.

(MILLER & ROGERS' PATENT.)

THE subscribers are constantly manufacturing this New and valuable Article, which is universally lauded in the Eastern, Middle, and Western States, to be the best ever patented at Washington.

It washes with great rapidity, entirely clean, and without chafing the finest clothes, and in so much less time that a child ten years old can work it without difficulty. We can give the names of more than one hundred respectable people who have given the Machine a fair Trial, and who will recommend it to every family in the country.

We will supply Agents and other Individuals with Good Machines in the counties of several Counties in New-Jersey, on reasonable terms.

Any person can have a Machine on trial, by calling at the shop of the manufacturer.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being short through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,

C. Postley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbock cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to any and procurable in any other stove. (except Dimsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all sizes. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

Rahway, Nov. 1st. 4tf

Once More.

ALL Persons indebted to the Subscribers on Book Account, are requested to call and settle the same, by the 1st of August next.

And those indebted on notes due, are requested to call and pay them by the same time

Attention to the above is urgently solicited.

HENRY V. NEVIUS, (formerly Keaper of the County House, in Somerville,) would respectfully inform the public and the public friends, that he has taken the large and commodious Tavern Stand, in the pleasant and thriving village of Boundbrook, lately occupied by Mr. Charles Wyckoff—where he is prepared to entertain in a manner and style satisfactory to customers all who may favor the establishment with their patronage. The Stabling and other accommodations are extensive and convenient, and attendants careful and obliging. From his former experience as a public House, and the well known character and celebrity of the Stand he has the fullest confidence that he will be supported in the attempt to furnish an agreeable stopping place to the public, and to merit their favorable consideration and liberal support.

☞ The Easton, and the Somerville and New Brunswick Mail Stages pass through this place twice daily, and the Elizabethtown and Somerville once a day; making the stops at this house.

BOUNDBROOK, January 2, 1837. 1tf

GREEN BROOK Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the English, Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the studies preparatory to a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to secure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce manly effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured, that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not in instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, (for no medicine ever was found to be such) yet in those in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurity of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the means of his saving many persons, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 20 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any injury whatever in either case.

Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote the discharge from the same of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize and regularize the circulation—to rid all the different organs of exertion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of the Fluid over common Ink, may be examined up under the following heads 1. The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen—the superior blackness which it gives to the writing, which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, rendering it handy to all travellers having no tendency to corrode the pen readily, or ever having any sediment and finally, for ever in Durability, and its readily to resist the agents used for the destruction of common Ink, even if it should be attempted to be erased by the knife—which Ink can not be erased or imitated by Thadeus' Fluid.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For the Plainfield Union.

"Beauty, like the flowery blossom, soon fades"

Young maidens, I've seen the sweet rose,
Hang blushing in modesty fair,
Its leaves to full view disclose
All its charms, as it swung in the air;
But soon was its loveliness gone,
Alas! and how soon its decay!
Though in beauty it flourished at noon,
All its sweetness had vanished away.

I also have seen the sweet face
Of nature all glowing in bloom,
Green foliage the woodlands did grace
And fields yielded fragrant perfume,
Soon the autumn of reposing was past,
They bloomed but as one summer day,
Ere the frost and the chill northern blast
Bare all their sweets in decay.

I beauty's own image have seen,
In modesty's sweetness array'd,
Of graceful deportment and mien,
While joy on her countenance played.
Again I looked for this beauty to be—
No more was it found with the gay—
Her name on the tone marble stone,
Said "in death she has faded away.

Though wood-land, sweet rose or gay mead,
Or scraphlike maiden so fair,
In beauty may, and you exceed,
Or in health to wish you compare,
Yet ere many summers are rolled o'er,
You, like the flowers of May,
In beauty will blushing bloom—
It all will have faded away.

But grieve not that beauty will wane,
'Tis a doom to which earth is consigned,
For lovely you may yet remain,
In the unrivalled beauties of mind.
These daily improved may survive,
Even nature's fair solemn decay,
In bliss they may flourish and thrive
Forever, and waste not away.

SEBASTOS.

Extracts from the HON. S. L. SOUTHARD'S ADDRESS, at Princeton.

THE STYLE OF THE BIBLE.

The Bible is in this respect, a literary curiosity, and a fit study for you as American scholars, who must use that language to communicate to your fellow men, the knowledge which you may acquire.

Every scholar should desire to understand and write his own language with purity and force. The tongue of every nation has its peculiarities, and is moreover suited to their general character, and to the course of ideas and modes of thought among the people. You may study the character of nations in the languages which they speak. It was so in old time, with the Hebrew, the Greek and the Latin; and it is so now with the Italian and Persian, the Spanish and English. And those have written and spoken with most power in their countrymen, who in we write and spoken their language with most purity and propriety. This is a truth which you ought not to overlook in your aspirations for distinction, and yourselves for usefulness. Our Anglo-Saxon is plain, strong, beautifully simple and admirably suited to the true character of the race, of which you form a part; and the more truly you speak and write it, the more efficient will you become as writers and speakers. Examples living and dead, support this remark. Swift, Hall, Marshall and Madison will be read and admired, when the laughtered exotics of many others shall have found their appropriate position, as evidences of false taste and want of judgement. And if may be permitted, without offence to any, to suggest a comparison between living scholars and orators take Webster, distinguished among the Senators of his country and Brougham, the first in genius and capacity in the British house of Lords. They are equals in the higher qualities of intellect, yet every student will give preference to the former, in the style and power with which his argument is expounded. The difference to a great extent, arises from the difference of their language. Webster is one of the purest Anglo-Saxons, a character with whom I am happy and proud to be identified, and Brougham has more recourse to the Latin element, and they are less idiomatic, and of course less powerful. A simple study of words and phrases, without the aspirations of genius, will be borrowed from other languages. If you regard your own reputation as speakers, I cannot too strongly upon you the early and diligent devotion of hours to exercise and study. My own errors lead me to become your counsellor on this point. But do not misunderstand me, and suppose me urging on in relation to it. I mean not to exclude the diligent study of the classical language, from which so many additions have been made to ours, nor the use of many words of Greek or Latin origin back to them. I am not yet relieved from my prejudices in their favor, nor so very wise as to regard their study as a waste of time. Your reading of the classical language and writers ought to be thorough, but for the discipline of your judgement, and style, and for a correct understanding, not only of what is drawn from them, but of the very structure and use of all languages.

ELOQUENCE.

Its prophecies are an important portion of the history, not only of Israel, but of the world. You will not study them at this period of your lives, to find out that which is yet to come. Such a study would demand subjugation of the passions, calmness and humility, enlarged knowledge and sound judgement, unsuited to your years. But that which is left to the past will afford you many useful information, and teach you powerful a disbiding lessons. When they were delivered, they were not puzzling and predicting things improbable and incredible, but long since become facts. To you they are recorded history. Not one of them is failed. Their execution is now written on the face of the fairest part of the earth, in letters of desolation. None can see them and disbelieve. Are not the guilty cities of the plain, still covered by the bitter waters of Asphaltites? —Is not Canaan still a curse and Babylon a desolation, where the Arab does not pitch his tent, nor the shepherd make his fold? Is not Ismael at the terror of the mountain and danger of the valley? Is there any more a prince in the land of Egypt? Are not the separate and contrasted destinies of Esau and Israel, demonstration to every mind, that the spirit which foresaw and foretold both, was not of man? Esau possessed the very fatness of the land of his dwelling, enormously his power great; his early strong; his pride naughty; yet in the midst of his glory, and when to human eye it seemed firm and his growth vigorous, the destruction went forth from the mouth of the prophet. He had sinned, and shed the blood of Israel with the sword, in the time of their calamity and in the end when their iniquity had its end, and law, utter desolation covered his land and Esau was no more—a blasted monument of the power and truth of the prediction. The sword of the Almighty was bathed in heaven and came down upon Idumea and upon the people of his curse to judgement. The bow was bended and the arrow was not spared. The barrenness of Elmoor extends from the Elanitic Gulf to the Dead Sea. The Elom of the Edomites, is without an inhabitant. From generation to generation it has lain waste. Her cities were called to the kingdom and none were there; all her princes have been nothing, and there is not any thing of the house of Esau. A young countryman of your own, who has recently followed the track of the Israelites, a traversed Idumea, was deeply impressed with the fulfillment of this prophecy, and its evidence of the truth of this volume. "I would," he exclaims, "that the skeptic could sit and as I did among the ruins of this city—among the rocks, and there open the sacred Book, and read the words of the inspired penman, written when the desert was the seat of the greatest cities in the world. I see the scoff arrested—his cheek pales—his lip quivers—his heart quaking with fear, as the ruined city cries out to him in a voice loud and powerful as that of one risen from the dead. The' he would not believe Moses and the prophets, he believes the handwriting of God himself in the desolation and eternal ruin around him."

How extraordinary has been the contrast with Israel. He too had sinned, and punishment was denounced against him; but that punishment was coupled, not with an axe which, but his preservation and eventual restoration to happiness and power. The promise was to Abraham and his seed, and that promise has been kept and will be kept. If a lesson seems have been chastised but not consumed—dispersed among all the nations under heaven—yet, in every land, preserved a seperate and distinct people. For nearly three thousand years of our history, they have been in bondage and oppression yet have preserved all for religion their language, their habits and their customs unmingled with others. They have been compared to the waters of the Rhone, which flow through without mixing with the water of the intervening lake, and they discharge themselves in the ocean. Seven millions of them yet remain in the four quarters of the globe, trodden down by the gentiles, but awaiting their restoration; and they will be trodden down, until the time of the gentiles be fulfilled; but as surely as Esau is extinct, Israel will be restored.—The words of the prophecy will stand sure. They will yet awake from their slumbers and believe. An avenging God will then become a restoring Saviour to guilty but repentant people. They will be gathered. The glory which departed when the Messiah on Calvary was crucified, will come again. Jerusalem will be rebuilded. The house of Aaron will again minister in the temple. The dark recesses of Kedar, and Zion, which have long mourned fallen exile, will be wreathed again in beauty, and all nations and tongues ascend from Moriah to the Great Deliverer."

Kerosene.—The Troy Whig says this article is used with distinguished success by some of the first Physicians, as a gargle or wash, for sore throat—particularly in cases of SCARLET FEVER. And adds that its happy effects in this painful and rapid and giving almost instantaneous relief in the distressing complaint, should be generally known.

Who Killed Bishop.—A letter received in this office from a gentleman on the Wabash in Illinois, dated the 2d, says—

"Some printed account is say that Mr. Lovejoy, fired from a window and, not down a Mr. Bishop," which is not true. He, (Mr. Lovejoy,) was certainly in a lower story, when Mr. Bishop was killed by fire from some of the guard from an upper story of the building. This may be relied on. I had it from the mouth of a man, who was standing by Mr. L. at the time.—[Emancipator.]

Early and Late Afflicted.

To see the heart in life's gay bloom
Nipp'd by the frosts of care,
And hear the glowing lips of youth,
Pour forth affliction's prayer;
To view a daughter bent beside
The dying father's bed,
Implore "one blessing more," ere yet
He's numbered with the dead:

Oh! who can see and hear unmoved,
Their youthful mourner's woe,
And give not pity's tear, to blend
With that wild torrents flow?
Yet time may fasten other ties,
Within that daughter's heart,
And make those bitter springs of grief,
Sweet waters, yet impart.

But O, to see an old man weep
Over the last prop of earth,
A darling daughter! all that cheer'd
His now forsaken hearth!
To see him lay her in the grave,
And turn alone away!
This is to mark that fount of grief,
Which nought but Heaven can stay.

For the Plainfield Union.

[It may add to the interest of the following article to know that the several death-bed scenes are substantially descriptions of real occurrences, which have come within the personal knowledge of the author. A. C. D.

Plainfield, Jan. 1838.]

'Twas Autumn. The blighting influence of the frost had robbed the green fields of their grass and flowers, and they were brown and seared. The leaves had fallen one by one from the trees and left their branches naked and dreary. I looked from my window on the western sky. The sun was sinking fast behind the distant hills. I gazed till he was gone, and the spirit of sadness came over my soul. Even so, said I is it with man. His beauty and comeliness fade away like the loveliness of the summer fields, and as the leaves desert the trees of the forest and leave them naked and exposed to the winds and storms, so do our pleasures and our comforts leave us, when we need them most. And what though hope should shed on us his cheering beams, and light us on while through life; yet hope itself shall leave us to despair as the bright sun has vanished from my sight.

Filled with such thoughts at length I cast myself upon my couch: my eyes were closed; perhaps I slept—but I seemed sitting still before the window, when I turned my face and saw a being—brighter, far more glorious, and magnificent, than aught I had before conceived of, standing beside me. I might have spoken but he prevented me.

"I know thy heart," he said, "thou weepest for the miseries of man, and mournest that the earth presents no pleasures, worthy the gaining and enjoying."

"Oh glorious being," I replied, "whoever thou art! thy majesty bespeaks thee great—thy beauty good, and truly hast read my thoughts. If there be happiness on earth I know it not."

"Thou dost not know?" he said, in a voice sweet as the richest music, "and tell me hast thou tasted of the streams from which the multitude around thee drink? Hast thou ever joined in the merry dance and partaken of its jollity and glee? Hast thou ever sacrificed at beauty's shrine?—Knowest thou the joys of sensual delight? Has the rich feast no charms for thee? Or if thou hast not tried these means of happiness how canst thou say earth is dreary and presents no joy?"

I bitterly replied; "Can the dance last always—or canst thou call the vain hilarity which it inspires, by the name of happiness? Dost thou suppose that they who bow at beauty's altar, feel no pangs of jealousy, and pleasure's devotees no deep remorse? and do not brutes feast quite as richly as ourselves? Can I be satisfied with joys like these?"

"Nay," said the apparition, "wax not wroth, I know that many of thy race dream of no higher bliss—but there are pleasures more refined. Art thou not rich in goods? his wealth he charms for thee? The world around thee strive to gain it as the chief object of their lives."

And how alas does wealth afford us pleasure? Enough of this world's goods, our needful food and raiment we must have, but more than this brings with it care, disquietude, and discontent. But if it were not so, the startling thought that we must leave the world and can take nothing out, would prey upon the soul and spoil our comfort."

"But still thou dost forget," rejoined my visitant "the sweets of friendship and of love, and all the fond endearments of long tried affection?"

"No, I do not forget, it was on this account, I, chiefly mourned,—Oh death! thou cruel spoiler, why dost thou oftenest nip our loveliest flowers! who has not mourned thy devastating blow! who has not felt the cruel pang which nature scarce can bear when all the ties which bind our hearts to some beloved one are torn, by one fell grasp away." I ceased to speak, but my thoughts were bitter within me, and I covered my face and wept.

"A sad picture truly has thy fancy drawn," replied my visitor, "and lost thou shouldst forget the lesson it might teach thee, come now and see such scenes of misery as thou hast never dreamed of."

He touched me, and in a moment, I was standby the bed-side of a dying man. The cold sweat stood upon his brow. Hope had departed, and over his wan features brooded dark despair.—His wife and his children were weeping around him. He made a last effort to speak. "Farewell," he said, "I die. What will come after death, I cannot tell. Perhaps 'tis true that I shall cease to be; but if there be a God, I fear to die—dreary, alas is the way before me, would that I never had been born." His whole frame shook convulsively with his agony,—he groaned and shrieked, and was silent in the stillness of death.

I turned to him who brought me there, and would have said, why is all this? but he prevented me.

"Thou hast seen misery here," he said, "and shalt see more, anon. Come with me now and look."

Again he touched me, and again I stood beside the couch of death, and he who lay thereon had scarcely reached his prime. He was a comely youth, and over him his mother bent and prayed. His sisters wept beside him and his elder brother sat by the fire in gmournful silence. The sick one spake.

"Mother," he said, "your prayer for my salvation is in vain, I never can be saved, time was I might have been—now 'tis too late. Do not torment me more—why will you wring my heart with unavailing woe! why talk of bliss which I can never enjoy! You only add fresh fuel to the already too tormenting flame which burns within my tortured breast, and dries up every stream which might flow on my parched soul. Ah leave me to myself! you know that I must die! Ah me! how deep this horror is that presses on my spirit. I die! I die! O horrible, I die accursed!"

He said, and struggled, and was gone.

The brother groaned—the sisters shrieked—the mother bowed her head in agony that know no utterance—her heart was broken and she sunk beneath the blow. Poor human nature!

The hand of my companion was upon me again, and I sat in my own chamber. "Mortal," he said, "thou mourpest for the ills of life and the frettest at the Government of God. I am the Genius of Christianity, and was sent to teach thee that our God is just and kind, and 'tis yourselves not he that makes you wretched. Few, very few are the sorrows which you do not produce, and might not avoid."

I answered, "it may be so, but are our sorrows less, because we chance to be their cause? Will the load of grief press less heavily upon us because we have ourselves placed it upon our shoulders?"

"Nay but you understand me not. Troubles there are and sorrows deep and hard to be endured, and there are also joys abundant full and free—you may have either as you choose. 'Tis true that you must die, and so must all; but death may be a blessing and bestow the loftiest blessings. I'll teach the how to enjoy life: but first to calm thy fears, I'll show thee that thou need'st not dread thy death, nor weep as those that have no hope for those whom death has snatched away before thee."

Again the genius touched me, and again the couch of sickness, pain and death arose before me; but she who lay thereon seemed happy and at rest. "I am soon going home," she said. "My Father, take me quickly if it be thy will; if not, thy will be done. 'Tis true, I have had sorrow here, but many a blessing has been shed upon my path, and now I shall flee away and be at rest forever! Oh! happy world where sorrows cease and sighing is no more! My God! I thank thee I have lived so long and been so blest. Oh, my dear husband, and my darling boy. I wept because ye went before me, but soon I shall be with you both again." Hope, joy and sadness mingled their expressions on her face, and in her heart—and she was happy in the midst of grief. This vanished and another scene appeared.

(Concluded next week.)

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, Dec. 29th,

In Senate.—Mr. Webster appeared to day and took his seat.

Mr. Morris of Ohio presented a series of resolutions embracing his views of the rights and obligations of the General Government and of the States, especially in reference to the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia.

The resolutions are very long, and express opinions and sentiments directly the opposite of those contained in the resolutions offered by Mr. Calhoun.

Mr. Calhoun said he was quite willing that they should be printed. He regarded them as presenting the antagonist side of the question to that set forth by him. They are, he said, decidedly abolition doctrines.

He declared that his object was to bring this abolition question to a crisis. It is desirable that the real state of the thing should be understood; and he hoped there would be an early decision upon it.

Mr. Morris made no reply; but gave notice that he would call up these resolutions, when those of Mr. Calhoun were taken up for consideration and discussion. They were ord. to be printed and laid on the table.

In the House, Petitions and memorials were presented from the different States—a large proportion of them asking for the abolition of slavery or remonstrating against the annexation of Texas or any slave holding state to the Union.

The former were laid on the table, under the rule adopted by Mr. Patton's resolution; and the latter took the same course by successive motions.

When Mr. Adams was called upon, he presented a memorial for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and then said, that after the declaration he had made respecting the resolution of Mr. Patton at the time it was adopted, he held himself no otherwise bound by it than by physical force. He held all the right to present petitions, and all the freedom of speech which he possessed had the resolution never passed.

He also declared that he had two petitions demanding of the House to rescind that resolution. He rejoiced that, as soon after the passage of it as the mail could bring them on, there came petitions demanding in that indignant language proper to be applied to the resolution, its immediate repeal.

Mr. Adams said he had made these remarks as prefatory to give notice, that he intended at an early day to offer a motion for rescinding that infamous resolution!

He then presented a number of petitions for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, which were laid on the table—he declaring that he protested against the proceeding, and that he held the resolution giving them that direction as unconstitutional, and therefore null and void.

The remainder of the petitions, he said, remonstrated against the annexation of Texas, and he moved to refer them to the committee for making king war upon Mexico—the committee on foreign relations. They were laid on the table.

Mr. Adams also presented a memorial for inquiry into the case of the emigrating Creeks, who were drowned in the Mississippi. Referred to the committee on Indian affairs.

Tuesday, January 2d, 1838.

In Senate.—An immense number of petitions and memorials were this morning presented and referred.

Bill to amend the Act of 1790, providing for the punishment of crimes against the U. States. Read a 3d time and passed.

In the House, Mr. Waddy Thompson, offered a series of resolutions providing for the conditional admission of Texas into this Union—the contingency being, the obtaining of the consent of wishes of that province, or Republic, as it is now called, for such a step. But the House refused, at that time, to permit the resolution to be considered.

Mr. Wise, of Virginia, offered a resolution, in the nature of which, he said, when it should come up for discussion, he should go at some length. It provides for all enquiry into the expediency of so amending the Constitution of the U. nited States, as to make members of Congress ineligible to executive appointments.

Wednesday, Jan. 3d.

In Senate, Mr. Wall, of N. J. offered a resolution, instructing the committee of Commerce to inquire into the expediency of the establishment of a port of entry at Jersey City. Accepted.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the resolutions offered by Mr. Calhoun embracing his views to the relative rights and obligations of the general government and the states, and more especially in reference to the subject of slavery; and counter-resolutions on the same subjects offered by Mr. Morris of Ohio.

The first resolution, which reads as follows, was adopted after considerable debate, by a vote of 32 to 13:

Resolved, That in the adoption of the Federal constitution, the states adopting the same, acted severally, as free, independent, and sovereign States; and that each, for itself, by its own voluntary assent, entered the Union with the view to its increased security against all dangers, domestic as well as foreign, and the more perfect and secure enjoyment of its advantages, natural, political and social.

The second resolution occasioned a warm and powerful debate of three hours. At length, after much debate Mr. Webster took the floor. He followed Mr. Calhoun through all his devious windings, and exposed the fallacy of his arguments. He rendered the constitutional relationship of the Federal Government with the states distinct and intelligible. Mr. Calhoun struggled through the whole operation, and seized the first moment of release to reply, which produced such a rejoinder as he will not soon forget. About 5 o'clock the resolution was adopted as follows, and the Senate adjourned.—Newark Daily.

Resolved, That in delegating a portion of their powers to be exercised by the Federal government, the states retained severally, the exclusive and sole right over their own domestic institutions and police, and are alone responsible for them, and that any intermeddling of any one or more states, or a combination of their citizens, with the domestic institutions and police of the others, on any ground, or under any pretext whatever, political, moral, or religious, with the view to their alteration, or subversion, is an assumption of authority not warranted by the constitution, insulting to the states interfered with, tending to endanger their domestic peace and tranquility, subversive of the objects for which the constitution was formed, and, by necessary consequence, tending to weaken and destroy the Union itself.

House of Representatives.

Mississippi Election Case.—Mr. Bell of Tenn. offered a resolution authorizing the committee on elections, to whom the credentials of Messrs. Prentiss and Ward were referred, to discriminate between the evidence offered at the last session, when the claims of Messrs. Chisholm and Claiborne were decided upon, and the testimony now presented in its connection with the case.

A desultory discussion arose, involving the consideration of the usage of the House, but of very little interest to the public. At last the resolution was laid on the table by a vote of 96 to 92.

Thursday, Jan. 4th.

The Senate resumed the consideration of Mr. Calhoun's string of abstractions. The third resolution having been read as follows:

Resolved, That this Government was instituted and adopted by the several states of the Union as a common agent, in order to carry into effect the powers which they had delegated by the constitution for their mutual security and prosperity; and that, in fulfilment of this high and sacred trust, this Government is bound so to exercise its powers as to give, as far as may be practicable, increased stability and security to the domestic institutions of the states that compose the Union; and that it is the solemn duty of the Government to resist all attempts by one portion of the Union to use it as an instrument to attack the domestic institutions of another, or to weaken or destroy such institution, instead of strengthening or upholding them, as it is in duty bound to do.

The day was spent in discussion, and the Senate adjourned without taking any question.

The house was engaged in private business.

Quid pro quo.—It is stated in the North American that the following bill was presented to a Rail Road Company, the name of which is not given and immediately paid:

The —— and —— Rail-road Company,
To John Smith, Dr.

July 19, 1837. To running your locomotive against my wife as per doctor's bill for curing her, $10,87
To smashing her box, and spleing her hat, 3,00
To upsetting my dearborn and breaking it, 35,00
To nursing me, 5,00
$53,87

A case was disposed of last week in the Court of Common Pleas of Salem, Mass., the parties agreeing that the action should be withdrawn each paying his own costs amounting to about $250 dollars. The original matter in dispute was a claim to recover damages for 62 cents worth of slabs.

Cotton Crops.—It is stated that the cotton in Mississippi will turn out 15,000 bales more than that of last year. It will be worth at present prices about $16,500,000.

The City Hall, in this town, is nearly completed, and was first used on New Year's night; when the large room designed for public assemblies, was lighted up by the brilliancy of beauty, and animated by the enlivening sounds of the dance. Those who delight in such scenes, were there in plentiful numbers.—Trenton State Gaz.

Improvements West of the Rocky Mountains.—A report from the Secretary of State, to Congress Dec. 23d, mentions that the (British) Hudson's Bay Co., under colour of the purchase of the trading establishment called Astoria founded by Mr. J. J. Astor in 1811, has intruded upon the rights of the U. S.—Newark Daily.

The Hudson Bay Company have several posts situated on the water courses in the interior of the country; the principle one, at Fort Vancouver, on the north eastern bank of the Columbia River, about eighty or one hundred miles from its mouth. It is known, by information recently received, that the English company have a small land on this river, and that they have ordered a saw mill, and are cutting timber on the territory claimed by the United States, and are shipping it in considerable quantities to the Sandwich Islands.

Great excitement has been generally created among the merchants of Mobile, in consequence of the passage of a bill through the lower House of the Alabama Legislature, declaring the business of a commission merchant, factor, or agent, in the city of Mobile, to be a public franchise, and that no person shall exercise or carry on that business except upon license, after having satisfied the Judge of the County Court of his or their good moral character, &c. It is entitled "An Act for the better regulation of trade in Mobile." A meeting of merchants was held at Mobile on the 13th, at which resolutions were passed declaring the act in question to be unconstitutional. The meeting adjourned to the 20th, with a view to the adoption of such measures as the case might seem to demand.

A Remedy.—Bleeding from a wounded limb can always be stopped till surgical assistance can be obtained, by tying a cord or handkerchief round it, above the wound, and twisting it hard with a stick.

A new alarm bell has been placed on the City Hall, in New York. Its weight is between 5000 and 6000 pounds.

A man boasting, in a company of ladies, that he had a very luxuriant head of hair, one of the damsels remarked that it was owing entirely to the melloncuss of the sad.

A good story is told of an old boatman from the Schuylkill, who repaired to the menagerie in Philadelphia, and seeing all its wonders, coolly addressed the chief exhibitor:—"Well, friend, I have seen all your big beasts, and zebras and zeplyrs, and hyenous, and them things—now, where's your menagerie? where's the cage? I want to look at him!"—Baltimore Visitor.

Several persons were looking at a very little horse. Some said it was the smallest horse they ever saw.

A Comical Sign Board.—Upon the door of a house in an old street, occupied by father and son, the former a blacksmith and publican, the latter a barber appears a board with the following inscription:

"J. Barnet & Son:—Blacksmith and barber's work done here, horse shoeing and shaving:—locks mended and hair curled, bleeding and teeth drawing, and other nursery work. All sorts of spirituous and malt liquors standing to the late hour act, and licensed to be drunk in the premises. N. B. Take notice my wife keeps cows, and takes in needle-work and points, &c. also washing—ladies reading and riding and other haughtiness and has assistants if reckoned to turn hornitory sewing, the Matthew matticks, and all other fanatical diversions."

Mr. Philo W. Hoyt, of this town has "got up" an improvement on the common mode of cradle rocking, which we should think might be of considerable utility.—The motion is produced by machinery attached to the bottom of the cradle, which must be wound up every 45 or 50 minutes the motion continuing until the weight is down. It is quite a labor saving concern, and would be a contrivance for those who have got cross babies, and no time to tend to them.—Danbury Times.

Every man ought to endeavor at usefulness, not by pulling others down, but by raising himself, and enjoy the pleasure of his own superiority, whether imaginary or real, without interrupting others in the same felicity.

Want of Confidence.—It is a striking proof of the distrust which exists in the commercial circles that there should be "thirteen millions," of private deposites, laying unemployed in the N. York City Banks. The fact appears in the statement of the Bank Commissioners of last month.

Among the items received on the Hudson by the Erie canal, we notice the singular one of 6000 lbs. of oil of peppermint valued at $30,000.

Entry of the Queen into London.—This took place the 9th of Nov. and was a splendid affair. A diamond ornament of great value fell from her majesty's magnificent dress as she alighted from her carriage at Guildhall. The ornament was broken to pieces and the jewels dispersed. Every diamond was recovered.

The Gothic hall of Guildhall was illuminated with 14 splendid gas stars. The Duke of Wellington was one of the groupe that made an avenue for the Queen when she retired from Guildhall to her carriage. The banquet is described by all present as the most superb ever given there.

One of the chandeliers lent by the Goldsmith's company consisted of solid cassie gold weighing 1000 ounces. Mrs. Magee an American lady, wife of a merchant of Liverpool, was a guest—the only American lady present, and attracted great admiration by her beauty.

No less than 19 persons received broken legs, arms, &c. and were carried into St. Bartholomew's hospital the day of the Queens entry into London.

The gas illumination of the Gothic Hall made it look like a fairy palace. Between the panels of painted glass, which composed the gigantic lamps, were placed hundreds of glass prisms, which produced rainbow illusions in showers of light of every color. To these add the superb chandeliers, and at the end of the hall a star of 1500 gas lights, in circling the words "God save the Queen." The number of burners in the last was 4500, and that the cut glass employed weighed over a ton. The arch-shape across V R. had 2000 jets of light. In the gothic cornices were 5800 jets, each jet equal to 3 wax candles. The whole illumination within was equal to 46,000 wax candles.

The thermometer at Albany was 6 degrees below zero Saturday morning Dec. 23d. The river was passable with loaded sleds. Navigation yet open to Newburg.

New Jersey is one of the middle states, and was settled by the Dutch and Swedes. This state was granted to Sir George Carteret, who came from the island of Jersey which lies in the British channel, in honor of whom it was called Jersey. The proprietors of New Jersey surrendered their right of government to Queen Anne, on the 17th of April, 1702, which was accepted by her Majesty on the same day in due form. The governors of New York were appointed the governors of this province from the time of surrender, to the year 1738.

The governor is chosen annually, by a joint vote of the council and assembly at their first joint meeting, after each annual election. The governor is president of council.

The governor and council form a court of appeals, in the last resort in all cases of law: and they possess the power of pardon to criminals after condemnation. The governor's salary is $2000 per annum, or $5,50 per day. There have been in this state 36 different governors.

Trenton, the capital, is situated at the head of tide water on the Delaware, 30 miles north of Philadelphia. This state is 160 miles long and 70 broad, containing 5,312,000 acres, and 360,000 inhabitants.

The constitution of New Jersey was adopted July 2d, 1776; and no revision has since taken place, except that the Legislature has undertaken to explain its provisions in particular parts.

The members of council and assembly are elected annually, on the 2d Tuesday in October.

Each county sends one member of council;—and one member of assembly for every 6000 inhabitants. The legislature meets at Trenton annually, on the 4th Tuesday in October. O.

Mr. Cushing:

I noticed in your last the communication of a "Charity," suggesting the propriety of forming a society by the ladies for the relief of the poor. There is no object more praiseworthy, or which will do more honor to the fair ones of our village,—and if those faces do not belie their feelings, there is no one in which they will engage with more avidity.

If it will be any encouragement to such a work you are at liberty to promise them, that sometime between now and spring, I will deliver a course of lectures on Phrenology, in Plainfield, the proceeds of which shall be placed at their disposal, provided a society is formed within two weeks from this time, and shall have collected $20 from other sources, before the close of the course. If several societies be formed, the proceeds shall be divided among them in proportion to what each has procured from other sources, either as contributions from others, or the proceeds of their own labors. I have made the same offer to the ladies of Rahway, and should have done as much to those of Plainfield before now, but to my surprise I found no such society existing.

Yours respectfully,

A. C. DAYTON.

For the Plainfield Union.

To the Ladies of Plainfield, and vicinity.

I am willing, dear sisters, positively to acknowledge that I was delighted, overwhelmed with delight, to find one whose heart was excited in behalf of the suffering poor. Long have I desired that our energies might be aroused to exerting an influence in their behalf, for surely we who are professing Christians, are loudly called upon to act in this noble cause; great is the reward offered to all who will give in the name of Jesus. Let us then march boldly and unitedly forward in the good work. Let this be our motto, to say little and act more, for what is precept without example? what is faith without works? We may shed tears, bitter tears, at the recital of every tale of woe: our hearts may be called into warm sympathy at beholding cold, naked and starving humanity, but all this deep and tender feeling will neither warm, clothe and feed them, without works.

I would advise a regular and systematic course of proceeding, as by so doing, much more can be accomplished in the same time. Once a week is as often probably as we can conveniently assemble, perhaps oftener, for many of us I am aware are entirely dependent on our own exertions for subsistence, consequently have but little time or money to give. But this is no reason why we should not engage, most of us have a little to spare, and the reward is not in proportion to the quantity or quality of the substance given, but in accordance I humbly trust to the purity, willingness, and disinterestedness of the heart.

Have not all of us cast off garments, that might at our leisure be repaired and rendered serviceable? A little now and then taken from our larder would, I trust, hardly be missed by even those who at first view, think they have nothing to give. But I would say let us be willing to sacrifice something, take up the cross and deny ourselves a few trappings and trimmings, which only gratify pride, that we may thereby be enabled to cast a greater portion into the treasury.

If no gentleman would volunteer to procure a suitable place for our assembling for the purpose of entering upon a more systematic plan of operation, I believe something would be done forthwith. He who styles himself "Charity," would be a very suitable intercedent.

A PHILANTHROPIST.

Plainfield, Jan. 3d, 18 8.

Highly Important FROM CANADA.

The Upper Canada Gazette Extraordinary brings us the message of Sir Francis Head, at the opening of Parliament. It relates, of course, almost exclusively to the recent events in the province, and those now in progress on our side.

Of the latter Gov. Head speaks in strong but calm and impressive language. He expresses forcibly the surprise and regret with which he has found the province entrusted to him by his sovereign, invaded by a people with whom that sovereign is at peace, and to whom no provocation has been given.

In conclusion, Sir Francis says that finally anticipating from the American people a noble vindication of their government and institutions, and holding it but just to allow them a reasonable time to do so, he has communicated with the governor of New York and the British minister at Washington; and while awaiting their replies, has reinforced the militia by a strong corps of observation on the frontier, and made arrangements for a levy en masse of the militia, should their services unhappily be required.

STEAMBOAT CAROLINE BURNT.

Twenty-two Lives Lost!!!

Capt. Kosker, of the schooner Agnes Burton and F. Emmons of this city, have just brought news by express from Schlosser, of an attack made this morning upon the steamboat Caroline lying at that place, which resulted in the destruction of the boat, and the death of TWENTY-TWO of her crew—only two escaping.

It is asserted that the attack was made about 9 o'clock, by five boats of armed loyalists, containing from 100 to 150 men, who guarding the gangways and cried "no quarter."

The Caroline was then set on fire, and finally drifted out into the current, and went over the falls.

☞ A letter has been received by Dr. Ely Johnson, from Gen. Von Rensselaer, that the British forces are actually landing on Grand Island.

The following proclamation was issued by the acting Mayor of Buffalo.

PROCLAMATION.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Dec. 30, 1837, noon.

Fellow Citizens: The report that outrages have been committed by persons from Canada upon the lives and property of our inhabitants, are justly calculated to excite in our bosoms that spirit which is so worthy of American citizens.

All legal measures will be promptly taken to prevent any further aggression; and you will be called upon as fast as your services are required. In the mean time, I enjoin you all to act with discretion, and only under that direction of the proper authorities.

The Common Council having placed ample means at my disposal for the defence of the city, nothing will be wanting on my part to insure the safety of all—and for that purpose I feel assured that I shall be fully sustained by you.

A competent and well armed city guard, of respectable citizens, has been organized, under the authority of the common council, and sworn in as a city patrol.

The Brigadier General has issued the following orders:—A requisition has been made on me by the sheriff of Erie county for the services of the 47th Brigade of the militia of this state, to aid in executing the laws.

It is therefore hereby ordered, that the several regiments composing said Brigade, rendezvous at Buffalo without delay, armed and equipped as become citizen soldiers.

Melancholy Dream and its fulfilment.—Angel Luck, a workman in Mr. Albert Cumman's copper mine, near Somerville, in this county, was crushed to death by falling stone and earth, on Friday last. Mr. C. gives the following circumstance in the Somerville Messenger:

On Monday morning 18th inst. Angel Luck, a German, being about 3 months in this country, and employed by me, stated to Peter Tillman; (where he boarded) and family, that he had dreamt that morning, that he, while working in the mines was struck on the head with a heavy stone from above, by which he was crushed down and that no attempted to catch his breath but could not, upon which he awoke and upon taking it time to rise went down stairs, looked at the clock and found it exactly three!

Angel Luck among others was yesterday employed in the main shaft to prepare for about 50 feet abandoned rails and under the direction of the Captain, he aided in arranging a part of posts, and while thus employed, he observed the post about to be raised, and desired the captain to give it a stroke with the pick, which he did and was as instantaneously struck down, and although the pair of posts gave way under the crush, and three other miners, if possible, were more exposed to danger, none of them were hurt. The above are facts. A. F. CAMMANN.

Distressing Intelligence.—All the Mandan Nation dead but fourteen Men!—We have just learned by a gentleman from Washington, in whose authority we can implicitly rely, that all the tribes of the Mandan nation are dead but fourteen men! The distemper is now raging to a frightful extent among the Black Feet, and Assineboines, and other tribes. It is even stated that the greater part of the Assineboines have also fallen victims. The Mandan nation is extinct; and for three or four days more therefore, the curious may behold the portraits of the chieftains of that noble tribe—now all that is left of them—at Catlin's Gallery, Stuyvesant Institute.—Star.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, January 18, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

The Legislature of this state met at Trenton, yesterday, 9th inst. agreeable to adjournment.

Morris and Essex Rail Road.—This work was completed from Newark to Morristown on the last day of '37. It was travelled over for the first time on New Year's day, with the locomotive and cars, with a large company. The entire distance was travelled in a little over an hour and a half.

The news from Canada this week is highly interesting and important, as will be seen. If things continue in the present course much longer a war with England would seem inevitable. Notwithstanding the efforts of our government to preserve our neutrality, the enthusiasm of those on or near the Canada line, have led them to do many things in opposition to the wishes and in favor of the insurgents—and the Canada rebels have also committed much violence to our nation. The destruction of an American steamboat in one of our ports with the loss of 22 lives, and the invasion of our territory, Grand Island, is more than we can well put up with. We earnestly hope, however, that every thing will yet be settled in peace.

Anti-Slavery Petitions.—We are pleased to see that many of the northern journals are highly indignant at the passage of Mr. Patton's resolution on this subject, in the House, which we published in our last. They are justly so; for it seems to us that the resolution strikes at the very root of the sacred right of petition, a right expressly guaranteed by the constitution to every individual of the Union. What avails it that we have yet the right of petition, if we are told beforehand that our petitions are not to be read, printed, or debated on!—The violent, turbulent, and even treasonable proceedings which ushered in that resolution, should have been met with strong disapprobation—not a yielding to their wishes;—ought to have made a warning against a repetition of the act in all future time, rather than an inducement.

Remember the Poor.—We would respectfully direct attention to the communications of Dr. A. C. Dayton, and of the lady who writes under the signature, 'A Philanthropist,' on this subject. The very liberal offer of the former, and the excellent suggestions of the latter, we sincerely hope will be complied with—and we have no reason to suppose that they will not.

The weather is now warm and pleasant, and the winter thus far has been remarkably mild, but we cannot expect it long to remain so. An inclement season awaits us,—what thou doest, therefore, do quickly.

Abolition.—A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, says there is a party springing up at the South, popular, fanatical, and desperate,—and that if our nation escapes this danger, it is more than can be expected. He says, "An old gentleman, for many years, but not now a member of Congress from Pennsylvania, told me to say that he never till now felt any fear for the stability of the Union; but that he now believed that the Federal government would be broken up by the slavery question."

We noticed in our last that we feared the year 138 would be more disastrous to our nation than the year just past. The particular things we most fear at present are,

1st, War with England,

2d, War with Mexico,

3d, Alliance between the two powers against us; and, 4th, more to be feared than all, a dissolution of the Union.

In the present aspect of affairs, neither of these are very improbable.

☞ Near half of the reading matter of the present number of the Union is original communications from our townsmen. We think such communications, in one generally known in the village, be calculated to make the paper more interesting to our townsmen, than all selected matter, and as the press is owned by Plainfield and vicinity, it is our duty, and our intention to make it as interesting to them as possible. Bring in your communications therefore, and though we cannot publish all, we will publish all that we have room for after giving all the news of importance which we can obtain.

We present to our patrons this week a specimen of the paper which we intend to use during the whole of the next volume. It will hereafter be better printed, and contain more reading matter, as we have not yet made all our arrangements for the year at volume, which we think our patronage will warrant.

By the last dates from Canada, we learn that the Royalists have not invaded Grand Island, and of the crew of the Caroline only nine are missing—of which only one, it is certain, was killed, though it is supposed, more were.

Gov. Marcy has sent a special message to the legislature communicating the intelligence above given, and suggests the necessity of keeping an armed force for the protection of our citizens and to prevent aggressions on both sides.

Later.—The President has issued his proclamation, which, after stating that the inefficiency of the measures heretofore used to prevent our neutrality being broken, thus concludes:

Now, therefore, to the end that the authority of the laws may be maintained and the faith of treaties observed, I, MARTIN VAN BUREN, do most earnestly exhort all the citizens of the United States who have thus violated their duties to return peaceably to their respective homes; and I do hereby warn them, that any persons who shall contravene the neutrality of the Government by intervening in an unlawful manner with the affairs of the neighboring British Provinces, will render themselves liable to arrest and punishment under the laws of the United States, which will be rigidly enforced; and, also, that they will receive no aid or countenance from their Government into whatever difficulties they may be thrown by the violation of the laws of their country, and of the territory of a neighboring and friendly nation.

January, 5th, 1838.

MARTIN VAN BUREN.

By the President:

JOHN FORSYTH, Secretary of State.

Gen. Scott is now on his way to Buffalo, clothed with full power to prevent all intercourse of our nation with Navy Island.

Letters from Niagara state that Col. Mac Nab positively disavows having authorized the seizure of the steam boat Caroline on the American side. His orders were to take her if she could be taken in the British waters, but not elsewhere.

☞ We have received a communication from a correspondent at Newark, subscribing himself "A Constant Reader," in which he states that the poetical article in our last, "Old Year and New Year," was not original. When we published it, we had no doubt of its originality, but soon after we suspected it. It first appeared in the Ladies' Magazine; in 1828.

We have heard the address of Mr. Bailey, before the Young Men's Temperance Society, on Friday Evening last, spoken extremely well of. We were unable to attend.

The Jerseyman has so much advertising patronage, that in order to give more reading matter, he says he must enlarge his sheet—which he intends to do in the spring. A sure sign of prosperity.

We are very glad to see by the following extract from the Nacodoches Chronicle, a paper printed in Texas, that the Texans themselves do not wish to be united to our Republic.

"THE QUESTION.—"Would the annexation of Texas to the United States conduce to the interests of the former?" was discussed on Saturday evening last, by the members of the Texas Philosophical Society, in this place, and decided in the negative. We believe that nine-tenths of the Texans, though they were in favor of the annexation when they expected an overwhelming force of invaders, have not the least disposition now to sacrifice their nationality and dear bought laurels to become an insignificant and remote link in the United States. If we remain, in the language of our Constitution—Free, Sharereign, and Independent of all nations, the tide of emigration will soon enable us to carry our arms to California."

The Spanish Government has ratified the treaty with Mexico, acknowledging their independence.

The citizens of New York are petitioning their Legislature, to repeal the small note law. There is a petition in the city for this purpose more than an eighth of a mile long, filled with names.

The City Hall Bell.—It grieves us to say that the new bell was broken on New Year's night while in the act of being rung for the fire by which the Catharine St. church was injured. It certainly is a little extraordinary that nothing can be got to stand in that unfortunate spot; but so it is.—N. Y. Gazette.

The Legislature of New York met at Albany on Tuesday, 2d inst. The message was delivered on the same day. The governor recommends a repeal of the restraining law, or the passage of a general banking law under which all who feel so disposed may embark in that business with the same privileges as incorporated institutions. He thinks the difficulties in which the country has been involved in a great degree attributable to the recommendation of a large surplus revenue to the United States, and the use of it by the banks. This being in view of our difficulties, it is quite natural that he should approve, as he does, of the Sub Treasury or special deposit plan, of receiving and disbursing the public monies.—Newark Eagle.

Joseph Egerton, Esq. of Teignmouth, Eng. has left £10,000 to various charitable institutions.

The merchants of New York are signing a memorial to Congress for having the great mail expedited, and the express suspended.

Competition is hot at work between the New York and Providence steamboats. The fare is reduced on some days to one dollar.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Farewell to Wood and Coal! Mr. James Cook, (a very appropriate name) passenger of the gas works at Paisley Scotland, has discovered that Gas may be substituted for coals as fuel in warming houses, cooking operations, &c. The principle is very simple, consisting only in the mixture of gas with five or six times its bulk of atmospheric air, and the burning of mixture through wire gauze.—Supposing then the fire is wanted near the ordinary position of the grate, a gas pipe is laid to the spot, and the jet is fixed pointing upwards, so as to be about four inches from the floor or hearth stone. This jet is surrounded with a sheet iron pipe, or cylinder, of a diameter from 3½ to 7 inches, according to the quantity of fire wanted, and of the height required, say from one to three feet; and the top of the cylinder is covered with a piece of fine wire gauze, kept in its place by a small iron hoop, circumscribing the cylinder in the same way as the hair cloth is secured on the common stove.

The atmospheric air is supplied by having the bottom of the above cylinder fixed on supports a few inches above the floor, and the gas is thus so regulated by dampers as to obtain exactly the quantity found best. An iron plate for cooking is fixed a few inches over the gauze, and thus these fixtures may carry on the cooking operations while they serve as mantle piece ornaments in the drawing room, bed chamber, &c.

One jet will not only do the cooking for a small family, but also heat an ordinary sized room. Kindling wood, puffing, bellows-blowing, cinder, ashes, dust, &c. so annoying, expensive, and time-consuming, are thus happily dispensed with. A person in kindling a fire has only to turn the stop-cock, apply a lucifer or other match, and his fire in a second is in readiness for boiling a kettle or frying a beef steak, either of which it will do in a very few minutes.

☞ Mr. Cook, who has done any more than other person in Scotland to improve gas illumination has no intention of taking out a patent and what is a miracle in these times, has generously communicated the above invaluable discovery for the benefit of the world. We have frequently described gas cooking apparatus in this city, but this is a vast improvement on that.—N. Y. Evening Star.

Damages against a Town.—Mr. Ephriam B. Cutler has recovered a verdict of $1200 damages of the town of Medford, Mass., for injury sustained by his wife, a bone of whose arm was broken, by being overturned in a chaise, in the night time owing to a block of granite encumbering the highway.

The Worcester Railroad Company have declared a dividend of three per cent. for the last six months. The nett earnings, after paying all expenses, for the last six months, were $81,000, and the dividend declared leaves a reserve of $31,000.

But yesterday, with buoyant step
Like us, he went and came!
The glow of health suffused his cheek,
Youth's vigor nerved his frame!
Promise of life was on his brow;—
But where that step—that promise now?

His merry whistle, on the air
With morning light arose;
As forth he hastened to the charge
The youthful peasant knows:
'Tis heard no more, at break of day—
Those joyous notes have died away!

Ah! where's that form, which but so late
The school bell's sound obeyed,
When young ambition woke desires,
Which sickness early stayed?
That form lies cold beneath the sod—
The spirit hath returned to God!

Yet weep not ye who gave him birth!
Nor ye, who owned the ties
Of love fraternal—severed here,
To fasten in the skies!
Let not the bleeding heart rebel,
Hope whispers—With the lad, 'tis well!"

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being done with the utmost dispatch, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion to be the best stoves:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philadelphia patent for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 4 plate, wash hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

The celebrated Kesterboch cooking stoves, from Philadelphia, for coal only. These Stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Price's make from Philadelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Church's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Ranges and common Iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The color with which it flows and follows the pen, the superior black mass which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying sufficiently, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become pasty or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great or Durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate writing, which renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be imparted by sea air.

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, so far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each comprise a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing, fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the southern bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of that ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit a continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever called for. As I intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to their knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may be safely taken by persons of both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the directions, will be to excite and maintain a healthy irritation in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to cleanse entirely the liver, and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalise circulation—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1 tf

CHEAP FOR CASH.

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts; embellished with occasional and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood; original and translated and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and romances—and in short—a periodical somewhat similar to Ainsworths and to both—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—musical and literary intelligence—original sketches of distinguished characters, by persons engaged expressly and exclusively for the journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the public—and a selection of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the scenic drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will retain its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish, and selections from popular journals abroad will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant and entertaining periodicals or repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the present year, are of a character by which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre-eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of America's scenery, cities and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

Washing Machines.

(MILLER & ROGERS' PATENT.)

THE subscribers are constantly manufacturing this New and Superior Washing Machine, which is acknowledged in the Eastern, Middle, and Western States, to be the best ever patented at Washington.

It washes with great rapidity, entirely clean, and without injury to the clothes, and with as much ease that a child ten years old can work it without difficulty. We can give the names of more than one hundred respectable people who have given the Machine a full Trial, and who will recommend it to every family in the country.

We will supply Agents and other Individuals with Good Machines, or sell the Rights of several Counties in New-Jersey, on reasonable terms.

Any person can have a Machine on trial, by calling at the shop of the manufacturer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For the Plainfield Union.

The Bride's Lament.

What to me are cooling zephyrs?
What to me are skies of blue?
While I pass long days of mourning,
For the one I love most true!

What are fields, though decked with verdure,
Or foliaged forests smiling near,
If of his voice, there is no echo
In the breeze to greet mine ear?

What are pearls, though set with rubies,
Or the gold from India's shore,
Since brighter visions than have left me,
Of him I prized and valued more?

Gone, O, gone, alas and whither,
Whither has my true love fled?
Has he sought for distant regions?
Ah me! he's numbered with the dead.

So now farewell vain earth! thy glory,
Wealth and beauty I despise,
No joys are mine before I meet him,
My fond husband in the skies.

Azar.

From the New York Mirror.

On the Use of Tobacco:

Being incoherent, abstract and unconnected ideas floating in the Brain, while the smoke is curling from the Pipe.

BY LUCIE TODD.

"This Indian weed, now withered quite,
Though green at noon, at down at night,
Shows thy decay—
All flesh is hay, (grass.)
Thus think and smoke tobacco!

And when the smoke ascends on high,
Then thus behold the vanity
Of worldly stuff,
Gone with a puff;
Thus think and smoke tobacco."

Now, what do you think of this, you Anti-Narcotick and Broken Pipe Association? The above two stanzas are only part of a very long and a very orthodox poem, extracted from Ralph Erskine's gospel sonnets, entitled, "Tobacco Spiritualized," and published in Edinburgh, about the middle of the last century, with a number of recommendations. Now, this worthy divine used to compose his best sermons with a long pipe in his mouth, his person propped upright in an armchair, his left leg resting on a bunch of Scotch heather, with his face turned upward, watching the wreaths of smoke ascend on high. It was then that the young ideas shot up from the heart to the head. He would take his stand on a hill side, with the sky for a canopy, and preach two hours on a stretch, to an audience of more than five thousand, without a note to mar his eloquence, nor a written sermon within a mile of him. But now, we have a set of sin-ple men, the sons of silly women—readers, not preachers, of the gospel—who fulminate their bulls, or paper proclamations, against this powerful weed. It is well, these self-conceited mortals neither possess the spirit, nor the power, of Paul. Puff the seventh, otherwise our own and the heads of our pipes might be flying in the air, like the light shell of a Wethersfield union. Have these men never read of Sir Walter Raleigh, whose servant mistook the fumes of the pipe for the smoke of a volcanoe, issuing from the throat of his master? Have they never read of Sir Isaac Newton, who mistook the fore-finger on the right hand of his mistress for the stopper of his pipe, as he blew the smoke at the moon, where his bond had gone before? It is highly probable, had it not been for the ascending smoke, and for the contemplations that there from ensued, we never would have heard of the Newtonian system nor of the whole arcana of lunar observations. I think my friend Mr. Editor, it is a fact beyond all controversy, that the good, the wise and the great, in all ages, have been profound smokers. Columbus, Hudson and Americus, were all welcomed to these shores by the ancient sign of the tribes, bearing the calumet of peace. But observe; the long-pipes holds no communion with the whole fraternity of beardless cigar-smokers, whether they be male or female. It was on one of those mild, calm, clear, moonlight nights, which we have seen this season, even as late as the eight of December, I was sitting on my stoop, enjoying the quiet and sober luxury of the pipe; the river lay like a field of glass before me; the full-orbed moon dancing in the gentle ripple of the ebbing tide; the lights in the many upper and lower chambers in Ravenswood, where, three years ago, there stood only one solitary mansion; the laugh and the sound of mirth from the village of Yorkville, which, ten years ago, was one hard uncompromising rock of stone; the blaze from a thousand lamps on the Third-Avenue, stretching even beyond the heights of Harlem, where but lately trod the heavy foot of the shaggy bear, the light musqueeun of the Indian and the warlike tramp of the Hessian soldier. Approps: in repairing my old farm-house at the Cove, we found a cannon-ball which had lodged between the clapboards and the lath and plaster. My next neighbor, now fourscore and two, informs me, that he lived in the same house he now occupies, on the day of the battle of Flatbush; that a party of the retreating American army crossed at Hurlgate ferry: that a company of the British troops followed them to the river, but did not cross: that the Americans fired several shots from York Island at the British; and, as the Soldiers gathered around this house, (now mine,) it being kept as a tavern at that time, the Americans directed their fire at the house, which got pretty well peppered; that he had no doubt but that was one of the balls, (I have no doubt neither; said ball weighs about twelve pounds; I would not take a dollar a pound for it,) That night the British officers took up their head quarters in this same house. They did not think it worth while to follow up their victory, as from the sample they had seen through the day, they thought they could conquer the Americans at their leisure. They accordingly invited two or three dozen of the farmers' daughters from Newton, Hallett's Cove and the Dutch Hills, some of whose fathers were tories, and went willingly! the others thinking, as, matters stood, that it was better to coax the devil than to fight him, went, of course. Be this as it may, they kept up a regular war-dance with the Dutch lasses till daylight in the morning. Not so did Washington! He never slept in the lap of Delilah when his country's interest was at stake; for, before the drowsy Britoons (tired with war, wine and dancing,) had rubbed their heavy eyelids, he was mustering his ragged army in the streets of Morristown.

But to return to the lights of Harlem Heights, etc. The night was bland: every thing spoke of life peace and serenity. Thinks I to myself, how kind is the Giver of all good. He tempers the winds to the strength of the shorn lamb. How much this second summer mitigates the pressure. If the times are hard, the season is softer than usual. Banks and safety-funds may evaporate in smoke; but the bank of Providence will never suspend payment, as long as wood grows and water runs. By-the-by of the season. The signs of the times are all in favor of a mild winter. The scarcity of wild-fruit, as acorns, etc., is a sign that seldom or never fails. He that hangs Creation on his arm and feeds her at his board, when he sees a long winter at hand, provides an extra store of fruit in the woods to supply the needs of the raven, the squirrel and the sparrow. Of how much more value, in his sight, is man, than many sparrows? Yet man to whom he has given reason, power and faculties, above the brutes that perish, is the only animal, in all the creation of God, that acts contrary to nature, reason, religion and common sense. Were men in the day of prosperity, to look for adversity, in the day of summer to lay up for winter; were there no drunkards, nor foolish spendthrifts, our world would soon loose the slanderous nick-name of being miserable. Were one-tenth of the money that is spent in buying and tuning pianofortes, laid out in knitting-needles, and one fourth part of the time that is lost in jingling the machine, employed in making stockings, I verily believe the balance of trade would be in our favor, and you would not see so much splendid misery walking up Broadway. I do not think, Mr. Editor, you ever saw a piano in the habitation of the Friends nor did you ever see any splendid misery there. When I first saw New York, there was only one hosiery-store in the city; it was kept by Mr. Winslow, at number nine Wall-street; it was a small concern, the profits of which were sufficient to keep soul and body together; for in the hamest was obliged to shave people with Castle-soap and rain water to eke out a living. He was a barber by trade: not the sort of shavers with which Wall-street swarms at this day. Then, there was not a broker in Wall-street. Mr. Winslow was an Englishman by birth, always neat and clean in his clothes and person—obliging, too, and shaved the customers himself, with a clean apron, with cotton stockings, shining black shoes, and silver buckles, black silk or velvet small clothes, white muslin neck, clean shirt, (n t check, like those of the hateful dandies of our day,) his few scattering hairs carefully gathered behind and tied with a neat black ribband, his head powdered, like snow. In short, though a barber he was a gentleman of the old school; not like the old, withered, would-be dandies of our day, with a black-hair wig on their head, and a large bunch of whiskers on each side of their mouth, as which as the head-quarters of a Russian officer, for the month of December. Nothing, to me, appears more hateful; it looks like a flock of sheep, dressed in lambs'-wooll.

Mr. Winslow's shop was in an old frame-building next house to the corner of Wall and Broadstreets, on the Broadway side, in Wall street. The first house round the corner, in Broad street, was an old Dutch frame-building, the gable-end fronting the street, with five or six steps to climb up to the stoop, having a broad board on each side of the door, forming a comfortable seat for eight persons. There Jan Babb kept an iron gate manufactory, wherein to confine tame birds in a free country. It was from this stoop that Gen. Hamilton addressed the sovereign people, assembled in front of the old City-hall, in 1796, to consider on, dispose of and discuss, the merits of the famous Britain treaty, whose fate was then pending before Congress. His powerful arguments and eloquent language inflamed their plebeian souls. They cut short his speech, forced him from the stoop and dragged him through the gutter. Says I to myself, and this is all the thanks that you have got for fighting alongside of Washington, for the liberty of conscience and the freedom of speech. It was then proposed and carried by acclamation, to burn the treaty. So the hodmen and car-men the fish-men and clam-men the ash-men and water-men, adjourned to the bowling-green and set fire to the treaty, while the Irishmen beat the "White Boys' March," and Frenchmen sang, "Dansa, la Carmanyol." A large buttonwood tree stood at the corner of Broad and Wall-streets at that time. Not having seen a meeting of the sovereign people in a free country, I was curious to mark how matters were managed. Accordingly I got some one to help me among the branches, where I could see, and be out of harm's way.

But to return to the buttonwood tree. I verily believe it had stood there since the days of Governor Van Twiller. On the opposite corner, where Burtsell keeps his blank books, there stood the only watch-house then in New York. Next to the watch-house, in Broad-street, was the residence of the worthy and venerable Doctor Anthon. Lower down dwelt Conrad W. Ham, who, for crackers, cakes and oly-cookes, was second to none, (excepting Nicholas Bogat.) On the opposite side was the house of Alderman Nicole. These three were the last of the Mohicans, and with them may be said to have perished the last of the Dutch dynasty in Broad-street. Under this tree, on a warm afternoon or evening, I often listened to the jokes, tales and mirth, of these ancient neighbors, as they smoked their pipes and spoke of other times. But this tree is dead, plucked up by the roots, destroyed by the ruthless hand of improvement. It might have stood; there was room enough and to spare, on the pavement; but they dug a pit under its roots, wherein to stow Yankee rum and Jamaica spirits. I passed just as they had turned up its roots to the sun; it was in the month of May; the tree was in full leaf; there it lay, with its beautiful branches wallowing in the gutter. I thought it was adding insult to murder to have a tree cut down at this season of the year; so I wished a curse on every rum-cask and barrel that might supplant its place, hoping its hoops might burst, and the rum scald the hearts of the worms, instead of the lives of men.

But to return to the system of stocking-knitting. I verily believe, Mr. Editor, that if all the women in town and in the country were to commence knitting, before seven months the balance of trade would be in our favor. At present it is sadly the reverse: bills on London fifteen per cent above par. Now, I think the suspension of stocking-knitting lies deep at the root of this evil. In the good old times when Washington was president, his lady was not too proud to knit stockings for her general. Then we had only one hosiery-store; now we have upward of two thousand stocking-shops. Then the mother and girls knit stockings for all the family, now it is computed that two millions of dollars are sent to Europe every year, to clothe the feet and ankle-bones of he New-Yorkers alone. This one article is sufficient, of itself, to kick both the beam and the balance of trade in our faces. Then our flour went to Europe by the hundred thousand barrels per annum; now we beg from the hungry Hessian a bushel of wheat, or a measure of rye. You know, Mr. Editor, and whether they be right or wrong, my hens and my pen are always ready to defend the weaker sex. I speak not to their blame; it is that greatest of all tyrants, Fashion, that has driven industry from the door. I wish them to look back on the days of unsophisticated employment; for they are never happy, (those dear sisters,) except their feet, their hands, or their tongues, are in motion. Neither would we see so many gr cy-headed spinsters wearing foreign hair; for those cold, calculating bachelors, who reckon every thing by dollars and and cents, would find it more profitable to take to themselves wives, who could mend their stockings, patch their coats and put the apple in the heart of a dumpling, than to live in a state of single blessedness.

In those days of which I speak, we had a few lawyers, for the people lived at peace with one another; we had a few deaths by consumption, as the women wore white worsted stockings in winter, instead of French silk; no foreign cooks nor French confectioners, as the eatables and drinkables at feasts, marriages and New-Years' rejoicings, were manufactured at home.

One of the most eminent men in the west, when he was thirty years of age, did not know the alphabet. He made his living by hard daily labor. At that period of his life he commenced learning reading papers, then he procured a few books, and in a few years he had a little library of books. He has been a member of Congress for a number of years, and filled that station with honor & credit; and not long ago he was governor of one of the western States. Nor has he been unworthy of such a trust, as he frequently the case; but on the contrary, he is eminently qualified for it, and his high standing in the halls of legislation has ever been one of its most eloquent and efficient members.

It is true, that not every one will be able to become eminent, but every one may be improving his talents, de much towards his own advancement in intellectual improvement. If young men can only be induced to spend their evenings at home in useful reading, no matter what have been their opportunities previously, they may yet become what they are not now likely to be; in they continue to be mechanics or farmers, or not they will adorn their station, and add an incalculable amount to their comfort and happiness and possessing sources of enjoyment within themselves.

The bill to regulate the Mobile Commission merchants has been lost in the Alabama Senate.

The Albany City Bank and New York State Bank, of this city, have resumed the payment of their notes in specie.—Albany Argus.

We are authorized to say that the Watervliet Bank has resumed the payment of its notes in specie.—Ib.

For the Plainfield Union.

[It may add to the interest of the following article to know that the several death-bed scenes are substantially descriptions of real occurrences, which have come within the personal knowledge of the author. A. C. D.

Plainfield, Jan. 1838.]

(Concluded.)

An old and grey haired man was writhed in pain, and in his dying agony—"I have expected death and he has come—quite suddenly, 'tis true, but I am ready, my work on earth was almost done, I have performed my task and was grown old and almost useless in the world, I leave it for a better, 'tis true I dread this parting agony, but I go cheerfully away. Had Heaven spared me still, some things I would have done for those I leave behind, but God does what is right and may not complain, nor would I, if I might. My God hath dealt more kindly with me than I feared, much more than I deserved, and even in my anguish I rejoice in prospect of that joy which is unspeakable and full of glory.

"'Tis thus," the genius whispered me, "the Christian dies. Dost thou fear such a death?—But thou hast yet to learn another lesson. See now another sight."

I saw the pale corpse of a beautiful child wrapped in its winding sheet,—not long had it been dead, yet while I looked on it they brought another and laid beside it—the brother and sister slept in each other's arms the sleep of death!—'T was pitiful to see that sight—so fair, so young—so innocent.—I wept. Where alas! are the fond parents of these lovely victims? What will support their souls beneath this weight of grief? A door opened and presented another apartment, there were the sorrow stricken pair, bending over a low couch, and gazing with the intensity of deep affection on the death-like form of a third child just gasping its last convulsive breath. It died. The last of their loved ones was gone—deeply they mourned; who would have not?—But did they sorrow as those who have no hope? Was it the desolation of despair that bowed down their spirits. "It is our heavenly father's will, and let his will be done." Thus spake the husband, who had been a father,—meekly he bowed to Heaven's high behest, and owned and felt that what was done was right. The mother prayed to Heaven for strength, and while she wept for her last earthly hope departed, she cried to him who pitieth the wretched in their wo, to heal the wound his providence had made.

"Oh gracious God! support me now, I pray thee—teach me to be resigned, and see that thou art kind as well as just. Thou hast taken to thyself my children, may I not murmur or repine! I loved them, oh how dearly, and it was hard to part, my heart is well nigh broken. But it is well, 'tis God has done it and God does right. They are not lost, but gone before, and I shall meet them all again, where parting is no more.

The scene vanished, and the Genius was with me alone.

"Thou hast now learned," he said, "three lessons,—that a death of horror is the result of a life of guilt—that by the good man death may be met with joy,—and that some may part in hope of joyous immortality to come. Cease then to murmur that thou too must die, and learn to live that thou mayest die in peace, nor let the fear of leaving earth forbid thee to enjoy the blessings God allows thee here.

"Death when you know him well you'll find to be your friend. He takes from you no comfort which would not mar your bliss; nor does he take you from your comforts until disease or accident has rendered you incapable of enjoying life. Think not because thou art allowed to live at present, that thou art of right entitled to live always. God does thee no injustice, when he takes the life he gave, and thou wouldst have no cause for murmuring if dark annihilation were thy doom, but 'tis not so, another life is thine if thou will have it, a life of glorious immortality. Think thou of this, and never grieve that thou must die, banish the gloom that broods upon thy soul and take the pleasures which Heaven bestows in life, Life is itself a blessing only because it gives thee time for the enjoyment of other blessings—"

"I see my error;" I replied, "and will no longer grieve that I must die. Indeed I shall rejoice to look on death, and I will think of him as of my dearest friend who only can relieve me from my load of sorrows here and introduce me to a world of bliss."

"Now thou dost err again," the genius said, "thou hast learned how to die, now let me tell thee how to live. Thou mayst not sit and fold thy hands and wait for death to give thee happiness: for thou wilt loose all thou mightst enjoy here, and have at best but doubtful promise of the bliss to come. I tell thee thou mayst be happy now, I will point out a path that leads to joy's fountain, to the streams where pleasure ever flows, and thou canst drink thy fill."

"Nay, sayst thou so indeed! and shall I find at length unmingled bliss on earth?"

"I said not so, I told thee thou mightst be happy; yet do not look for loud tumultuous joys, nor vainly think so bliss worth the possessing which is not perfect bliss. Gold is still gold, tho' it have some alloy; I do not promise you unmingled joys, nor need'st thou wish for such. Too often like the mountain torrent do they rush upon the soul and tarry not, but pass away and leave it desolate and sad.

Be thou content with the smooth even current of delight, fed by a thousand sources, constant and true, or varying only as thy cond'act varies. Know, moral, that thy happiness depends upon thyself, and will be perfect when thyself art so.

For these all nature teems with sources of delight, even thy senses while they give thee knowledge of the world, around thee furnish unasked for pleasures. The fruits of earth not only nourish thee but please thy taste with delicious flavor, thy sense of smell not only warns thee of those poisonous airs which would destroy thee, but charms thee with the choicest odors and the sweetest perfumes.

"Thou dost not only hear, but to thine ears are hourly brought sweet sounds of melody and joy. Thy sight not only aids thee in thy rambling, and teaches thee what thou must needs avoid; but it presents thee with the beauteous variety of hill and dale; the forest with its verdure, the meadow with its flowers, and the golden and azure sky with all its glories of bright sun and gorgeous clouds, and twinkling stars and silvery waning moon. Think not thou mayest despise such joys because they all are common, or because each one is small. 'Tis of a multitude of common trifles that thy life is made. And if thou wilt refuse each trifling comfort, thou wilt go joyless to the grave.

Thou hast no sense, no faculty of thought, no power of feeling, the proper exercise of which will not increase thy happiness; learn therefore, to employ them all.

Thy children, family and friends are comforts to thee now, enjoy them while thou canst, and should thy maker take again the good he kindly lends thee, learn from thy heart to say this prayer, "Father, thy will be done!" be thankful for the blessings which thou hast, and cease to grieve for what thou canst not have. Trust in thy God, and know, although thou canst not see, that what he does is right. Do this and thou wilt be no longer wretched, nay thou shalt have much comfort. If thou wouldst have greater joys than these, do more, and thou shalt find them. True happiness will not unsought be won—she will not woo thee to her arms, while thou dost sit in sluggish, useless indolence. If thou wilt have great good thou must resolve to do great good. Thou must 'tis true walk humbly with thy God, thou must also learn to do justice and love mercy.—Think of mankind as of thy brethren and remember that thy neighbor's happiness is valuable as thine. Do thou to others what thou wouldst have others do to thee,—never depart in all thy conduct from the law of right, and with each step, thou will increase thy blessedness. If thou wilt be happier still; heed well that voice within thee which, whispers kindness and mercy, seek out the wretched cabin of distressed, and naked poverty—visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction,—Go where the victim of disease is stretched upon the bed of agony or death, thou wilt see misery, but fret thou not against the Providence that has permitted or inflicted it, nor be content simply to pity it. Thou must not only weep with those who weep, but thou must wipe away their tears with the soft hand of charity and with her angel voice whisper sweet words of comfort in the ear of sorrow. Strive to make others happy, and thou will be so thyself. Remember now the lessons thou hast learned,—practice what thou hast heard, and thou will have no cause to be dissatisfied with life, or dread the hour of death.

Thus spake the genius, and as the last words fell from his lips, I waked, and found myself alone in my chamber, stretched upon my couch.

"I had a dream, yet 'twas not all a dream."

For the Plainfield Union.

Mr. Editor:

When any person has by intense reasoning, made a great and important discovery, a proper regard for the curiosity and happiness of his fellow men, should induce him to publish it to the world. That disposition which induces a man to hoard up knowledge for his own use and enjoyment alone, should be regarded as equally detestible, with the conduct of the miser, who piles thousands upon thousands, merely to gratify his avarice. Desiring to escape all censure of this kind, I hasten to lay before you, Sir, a recent discovery of mine, beautiful in theory, and simple in its application, and which therefore, I may reasonably expect will be duly appreciated by mankind. That which has so long been the desideratum of philosophers, viz. a rule by which to judge the mental capacities of men, from some corporeal characteristics, I have found: and it is that laziness indicates genius, and industry the want of it. The process of reasoning by which I arrived at this truth was purely logical, and in fact it is precisely the same by which phrenology physiognomy and all kindred sciences are established.

In the first place I assume (what no one will be disposed to deny) that if after a thorough investigation, it be ascertained that genius is invariably accompanied by laziness, this characteristic then becomes a rule by which the relative talents of individuals may be determined,—and to be convinced that genius is thus invariably accompanied, we have only to make the investigation for themselves. Let me ask you, sir, if you ever met with a man who was intrinsically great who was not superlatively lazy? Nay, I appeal to history. "Tell me, thou reverend chronicler of the grave," can all the poet's fire, the orator's enthusiasm, or the philosopher's wisdom secure to genius an exemption from this malady? Was not Horace more famous for his wine bibbing and gluttony, and consequently for his sleeping, than for his poetry? Did not Lord Chatham die of the gout, and how is gout produced but by laziness? Did Sheridan ever make a speech if he could help it? and was not Johnston too lazy to change his shirt? and does not all the world know that Patrick Henry would fish for hours with a bare hook, rather than endure the labor of baiting it? But I will not waste paper by adducing more examples. Enough has already been said to place my position beyond the reach of contradiction. And now, Mr. Editor, I cannot see why a science may not be built upon this characteristic of genius as well as upon the bumps of one's cranium. The principles upon which it is founded, like those of phrenology, are capable of clear demonstration, and as far as theory is concerned, the merits of the two are perhaps equal. But when we come to the application, I must claim for my science, a great superiority over phrenology, or any other theory that was ever devised. For in using its rules, we have only to enquire whether a person be idle or industrious to determine infallibly whether he be a man of talent or not—whereas the phrenologist, in determining the same thing must make nice distinctions between the bumps of the head, take into consideration, the physical temperament, &c. in doing which he is liable to great errors. Such then is my science. Without expecting or even wishing to receive any benefit from it other than the credit of the discovery, I present it to my fellow men. Solitary and alone I put this ball in motion.—May others pick it up and give it a velocity that shall send it throughout the length and breadth of the land, to the remotest corners of the earth, carrying light and intelligence to the minds of all, so that none hereafter shall be able to hold a reputation for talents which he does not possess.

JUVENIS.

Plainfield, Jan. 10th.

Four fine horses were drowned in the Canal under the cliffs above this city, on Friday evening last. They were towing a sloop from Boundbrook through the ice, when one of them slipped off the bank into the canal, drawing the others with him, and all disappeared under the ice. The driver was drawn in with the horses, but was rescued by timely aid from the sloop.—N. B. Times.

Great Improvement in Sausage Making!—A gentleman of this city brought a sausage for our inspection this morning, a part of which he had endeavored to masticate for his breakfast but in vain. On examination it was found that the principle ingredient in their fabrication was brown paper! This is almost equal to red flannel and tatters. When will Yankee ingenuity have an end? Another part of the joke is, that they were bought at a shilling (16 2-3 cents) a pound, as very superior. It appears to us that this kind of sausages, at least ought to be sold "at the old price."—New Haven Herald.

Typographical.—The following just description of the character of the printer, is taken from an exchange paper:

Journeyman Printers.—From high to low, in New England or at the South, they are the same class of dissipated, careless, well-informed good hearted men—knowing how to act better than they do—nothing at times, yet every thing if occasion requires it. We have seen one and the same individual of the craft, a minister in Carolina—a boatman on the western canal—a sheriff in Ohio—a sailing master on board a privateer—a fiddler in New Orleans—a dandy in Broadway, New York—a legislator in the councils of the nation—an editor and preseman in habitation anywhere."

Valuable Cargo.—The ship John Cumming, Capt. Thayer, has cleared for Liverpool, from Savannah with a cargo of 3523 bales of cotton, valued at more than $100,000. The tonnage of the John Cumming is 721 tons and upwards of 2300 bales were taken in at the wharf.

The Saltus and Empress are the two crack steamers on the Mississippi that go up stream from New Orleans to Louisville in little less than six days. Distance say 1100 miles.

To Parents.—The Hon. Judge Longstreet says, 'Small is the sum required to patronize a newspaper; and amply remunerated is the patron. He care not how humble and unpretending is the Gazette he takes. It is next to impossible to fill a sheet fifty-two times a year without having something that is worth the subscription price.

Every parent whose son is off from him at school, should be supplied with a newspaper. I well remember what a difference there was between those of my schoolmates who had and who had not access to newspapers. Other things equal, the first was always decidedly superior to the last in debate and composition at least. The reason is plain; they had command of more facts. A newspaper is a history of current events as well as copious and interesting miscellany, which youths will peruse with delight when they will read nothing else.'

A father of an interesting family, near Detroit, not long since, stopped the only newspaper which he had ever allowed himself or his family, and solely on the ground that he could not afford the expense! This man chews up fourteen dollars and sixty cents worth of tobacco every year.

Gov. Everett's Address.

AFFRAY.—The New Orleans Herald of the 30th ult states that in consequence of offence taken by a lawyer named M'Henry, at a paragraph published in that paper on the morning previous, the said limb of the law assaulted the said Editor in his office. The following is the Herald's account of the affair, minus several hard epithets which are not essential to a proper understanding of the case.

At twelve we were at our office—the loco foco made his appearance—we immediately rose and stared to him the author.

At the moment he struck me across the head. Stunned by the blow, I retired a few paces, drew a pistol and fired. It missed him. He fired in return, but without effect, at the same time jumping to and fro through the office, to avoid my aim. I fired again, and the ball passed through his hat. He then hid himself behind the imposing stone, which was between us, and from under the table on which the stone was placed, fired at me, thus wounding me in the fleshy part of my leg.

The wound I have received is trifling, and though it may confine me to my bed for some days, still I shall use my efforts against loco-focoism, and the unprincipled wretches that are summoned to its support.

MORE STEAMBOAT DISASTERS.—Loss of the Black Hawk and Vicksburg!!—The steamboat Bridgewater, Capt. Wright, from Manchester, arrived last evening brings the melancholy news of the loss of the two boats within the last few days. We give the particulars below:

The Black Hawk.—The steamer Black Hawk Capt. Taylor, on her passage from Natchez to Natchitoches, burst her boilers on Wednesday night the 27th inst. a short distance above the mouth of Red River. She had a full freight, a large number of passengers and horses, together with $90,000 in specie belonging to the U. S. The pilot and engineer were instantly killed—several more supposed to be lost—number not known. Four or five were severely and several mortally wounded. Most of the passengers were saved by the timely arrival of the boat, which conveyed them to shore. The principal part of the cargo was saved in the same way. Seven horses were lost. $75,000 of the specie saved. The hull, partly under water, remains near where the accident occurred.

The Vicksburg.—On Friday morning, Dec. 29, the steamboat Vicksburg, Capt. Auter, was burnt while on her way from Vicksburg to this port. The accident took place at half-past 4 o'clock, twelve miles above Baton Rouge. The fire commenced among some cotton bales near the boilers, and in six or seven hours the boat was burnt down to the waters edge. Fortunately, all the passengers escaped with the trifling loss of some of their property, the boat lying at the shore at the time, having stopped only ten minutes before, on account of the fog—otherwise there would have been an immense destruction of life.

The Vicksburg had on board 1477 bales of cotton, of which 900 were shipped by the Planters Bank of Vicksburg; 275 by the Commercial and Rail Road Bank of Vicksburg; 100 by the Grand Gulf Rail Road & Banking Co.; and the remainder by individuals. The vessel and cargo, excepting seven bales, are a total loss. The cargo, excepting that belonging to the Banks is supposed to have been insured at the places where it was shipped. The boat was estimated at $35,000—of which $20,000 was insured in the Ætna Office in city, and $15,000 at Vicksburg. Capt. Auter's own loss is 10,000.

The disaster is said to have been purely accidental—no blame could be attached to Capt. Auter or any of the officers or crew. The captain was up when the fire occurred and made every exertion to arrest it, as we see by a card to this effect, signed by the passengers.

More Mobs.—A posse of Canal diggers mobbed Ryan's tavern near Cumberland, Md., on the 1st tore one of the buildings to the ground, and threatened to take his life. A militia company arrested 10 of them.

Here comes another in which blood was actually shed. Slavery is we believe neither the cause nor the apology of these outrages—

BELFAST, Me. Jan. 6.

More Mobs.—A man by the name of Bruer, living in Windsor, in this State, had his house attacked by a mob a few nights since. The avowed design was to raze it to the ground.

He conveyed his family to one of his neighbors and returned armed with a gun; with which he deliberately shot one of the men engaged in demonishing his dwelling. His comrades dragged him a short way from the house and left him dead.

The Miner's Journal gives an account of a riot on the 1st inst in which some heads were cut by a shower of brick bats.

TEXAS.

Extract of a letter dated

"Houston, Dec, 20, 1837.

"Without a soldier in all the field, or a vessel afloat, we really seem at the mercy of the enemy; and it will be most extraordinary if he do not invade us, both by sea and land. Rumor is ever rife—and an express came from San Patricio (on the Nueces) that 800 men were on their march there, and 2500 at San Antonio.

I source credit it, but still it is what we should expect; and really there is not ammunition enough in the country to kill the squirrels, much less to fight the enemy—but we must do our best."

From the Houston Telegraph, Nov. 18.

One hundred and fifty lots on Galveston Island have been sold this week, the proceeds of the sale amount to twenty thousand dollars, some lots were sold as high as twenty dollars an acre.

Gen. Bernella, at constantine, has discovered immense sums of money in the palace of the Bey and private houses—fruits of Pirrcies no doubt.

During the year 1837 there was sent down the Ohio from Pittsburg one thousand cargoes of coal of 4000 bushels each cargo, the aggregate value of which was one million of dollars.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, Jan. 5

IN SENATE.—A message was received from the President declaring that the existing laws had been found insufficient to guard against the hostile invasion of the Canadian territory by citizens of the United States. The laws were sufficient to punish such offences after they had been committed; but not to prevent the perpetration of them.

The President also communicated a despatch from the marshall of the Northern district of New York, giving an account of various disturbances on the frontier.

The message having been read, Mr. Clay rose to express the great satisfaction he felt at the character of this message. No spectacle he said was more unworthy of a free people professing to abide by their constitution and laws, than they presented by the papers before the Senate, of the nation at peace and the people at war. He considered it the duty of Congress to carry out the recommendations of the President and pass any additional enactments that might be necessary. He gave, no opinion about the causes of the difficulties in Canada, but he maintained that until the constituted authorities of the country decided no citizen ought to take it upon himself to interfere in any manner or to any extent whatever.

Mr Clay hoped the committee to whom this subject would be referred would also ask to another matter connected with it, and inquire whether any portion of the United States Territory, or of the territory in dispute, had been occupied by the British authorities, to transport troops, ammunition, &c.; for if that had been the case, we should regard the proceeding as quite as objectionable as any open interference by our citizens.

Mr. Calhoun said that from the beginning of these difficulties on the N. E. boundary, he had been most anxious that our neutrality should be preserved. Of all calamities that could befal, not only this country but the world, he regarded a rapture with England as one of the greatest.

Mr. Norvell of Michigan said he entirely agreed with what had been said by Messrs. Clay and Calhoun; and he reerected that the neutrality of the country in another quarter (Texas Texas) had not also been preserved.

Mr. Preston, agreeably to notice previously given, offerrdthe following resolutions, which were laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

Whereas, the just and true boundaries of the United States, under the treaty of Louisana, extended on the south west to the Rio Grande del Norte, to which river continued to be the true boundary line until the territory west of the Sabine was surrendered to Spain by the treaty of 1819 and,

Whereas, such surrender of a portion of the territory of the United States, is of evil precedent and of question ably constitutionality.

Whereas, many weighty considerations of policy make it expedient to re-establish the said true boundary, and to annex to the United States the territory occupied by the State of Texas, with the consent of the said State: Be it therefore,

Resolved, That with the consent of the said State, previously had, and whenever it can be affected consistently with the public faith and treaty stipulations of the United States, it is desireable and expecient to re-annex said territory to the United States.

Mr. Preston moved that his resolution, for annexing Texas to the Union, be now taken up and considered, but gave notice he should not insist, but after some conversation, he agreed to withdraw it for the present, and said he would bring it in again on the first Monday in Febuary.

Mr. Calhoun's resolutions were then taken up, and the question being on the adoption of an amendment to the 3d resolution offered by Mr. Allen yesterday, providing that the resolutions should not be held to injure freedom of speech and the right of petition, it was carried, ayes 32, nays 14.

The House of Representatives has been engaged up to this time, chiefly in the reception of reports from committees. The message was received from the President here also, and referred to the Foreign affairs Committee.

Saturday, Jan. 6th.

In Senate, Mr. Robbins introduced the resolutions of Rhode Island, against Texas, &c. laid on the table. Mr. Calhoun's third resolution was then resumed, and finally passed, 31 to 11.

The house did not sit.

Monday, Jan. 8.

The Senate did not sit to day.

In the House, a message was received from the President in relation to the Canada affairs. So much of it as, related to appropriations was referred to the committee of ways and means, and the residue thereof to the committee on Foreign Affairs.

Tuesday, Jan. 9.

In Senate.—A message was received from the President of the same import as that yesterday received by the house, and was referred in the same way. Mr. Calhoun's resolutions were then taken up. Mr. Clay proposed a substitute for a portion of these resolutions, this gave rise to a cutting debate between him and Mr. Calhoun. The debate continued until 6 without taking any question.

In the house, Mr. Buchanan, chairman of the committee on Elections, said that a report from them might soon be expected.

Several resolutions of enquiry were taken up, and adopted.

Wednesday, Jan. 10.

In Senate, McKean, of Pennsylvania, presented several petitions for the abolition of slavery, and against the annexation of Texas. Mr. Calhoun's resolutions were next taken up, on the amendment of Mr. Clay. He and Mr. Calhoun debated the subject all day, the former in our opinion having the best of the argument.

The House was engaged during the whole morning in the ordinary business of petitions and memorials.

Thursday, Jan. 11.

In Senate.—Mr. Clay's amendment to Mr. Calhoun's resolutions were taken up and debated during the day. One resolution of Mr. Clay passed by a vote of 36 to 9, the other, 34 to 9. Thus has Mr. Clay succeeded, after a debate of deep interest of three days, in carrying through thus far, his compromise resolutions, by a vote of four fifths of all the senators present. But the subject is not yet finished.

In the House, the greater portion of the day was spent upon a discussion of a loss of $3000 by the sergeant-at-arms, and the question of compensating him.—Com. Adv.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

To the Legislative Council and General Assembly.

Gentlemen:

As the usual topics of ordinary interests to the State were presented by the Executive in his annual messag, at the commencement of your session in October last, I consider it mylluty to claim only so much of your attention on this occasion, as present circumstances and the exigency of the times seem to require.

No subject possesses so much importance at this moment as the condition of the currency. To this all-absconding topic I invite the early and careful attention of the legislature. The embarrassments of the country, the depreciation of the circulating medium, a want of uniformity, the necessity imposed on the community to receive the unsound currency or to suspend business, all the evils consequent on the suspension of specie payments by the banks, conspire to give this subject a claim to your attention paramount to all others. The action of the government on the currency strikes directly at the private interests of all classes of the community; and if a mistake be made, it must more or less derange all the operations of society, and it may be, prostrate the hopes and ruin the fortunes of thousands. The man who is honestly and laboriously engaged in the pursuits of business, may, by one rash movement in the government, without any just cause of reproach in himself, be disappointed in his most reasonable calculations and reduced to a state of ruin and dispair. A deranged currency creates every institution of the country that has relation to property; and without a due adjustment of it, it is impossible to distribute, in equal proportion among the citizens, either the burdens or advantages of civil society. Want of uniformity in this particular, produces oppressions to which individuals can apply no remedy.—Permanency and uniformity are indispensible qualities of a common standard of values, and nothing is so essential to the safety and facility of regular business as a steady, uniform course of public measurcs. "A mutuable legislation," in the language of Chancellor Kent, "is attended with a formidable train of mischiefs to the community. It weakens the force and diminishes the intricacy of the laws, hurts credit, lessens the value of property, and is a constant source of anxiety and concern." In a word, no great improvement of laudable enterprize can go forward without the auspices of a steady system of public policy.—How is it to be regretted, therefore, that this most delicate subject should have been brought into the conflicts of party. We all know by sad excitement how unfavorable such a state of feverish excitement are to the discussion and settlement of any questions, and especially of one which so seriously involves all the multifarious interests of society.

The early and settled policy of this country was undoubtedly that of a mixed currency: paper in the more extended operations of business and gold and silver coin in the smallest transactions of life; in other words, a paper currency eased on specie. In less than three years after the Federal Government went into operation, when many of the framers of the constitution were in the public councils, a national bank was chartered by Congress and received the deliberate sanction of President Washington. The whole subjebt, the policy and the power of the government, was then thoroughly discussed, under the best possible circumstances for a just decision. There was then no organization of political and patriotic considerations alone, prevailed during an investigation which terminated in the decision that the creation of a national bank was a measure authorized by the constitution, and called for by the wants of the country. And surely no men could be more competent to give a just construction of the constitution than those who made it. Nor could any administratirn be more exempt from those influences which sometimes pervert the judgement than that of the father of his country during the first term of his service.

During the twenty years of the existence of the bank thus created, public and private credit was raised and regulated, and the finances of the nation were placed on a solid basis. We had a sound currency, uniform taxation, and stable exchanges. Political considerations prevailed to prevent the renewal of the charter on its expiration in 1811, and in a brief period after the wholesome influence of the national institution was withdrawn, the state banks suspended specie payments; specie was completely driven from circulation; ceased to be currency, and became merchandize. An irredeemable paper currency soon filled all the channels of circulation, and the circulating medium became so disordered, the public finances so embarrassed, and the public credit so impaired, that the charter of the Bnik was renewed by Congress under the advice of the most distinguished members of the republican party, and with the approbation and consent of the venerable Madison, as the only measure which could relieve the currency and redeem the finances of the country from utter ruin. The wisdom of this measure was fully sustained by the results. Order was restored, specie payments were resumed credit revived, the state banks were regulated, the rate of exchanges were reduced from five and fifteen to a mere fraction of one per cent, the funds of the government were transferred with scrupulous punctuality wherever required, free of expense; the business of the country became healthy and prosperous in all its relations, and for twenty years we enjoyed a sound and uniform currency, every where equivolent to gold and silver, and which it was impossible to improve.

Such were the condition and facilities of the country when the Federal administration entered upon the experiment of making a radical change. The result is before us. Confusion and disorder have been sent into all the departments of business, and universal embarrassment prevails. That the destruction of the Bank of the U. S. therefore, as a fiscal agent of the government, gave the first blow as commercial credit. I entertain no doubt. To that cause, connected with circumstances growing out of it, in my judgement, are to be ascribed the distressing and overwhelming disasters which afflict the country. After so long an existence, after becoming the great channel through which the exchanges of the country were made, and interweaving itself into so great a part of the commerce of our citizens, it could not have been reasonably expected that the precipitate termination of the Bank would result otherwise than disastrously. The removal of the deposites to the State Banks, with the implied understanding that the money should be used by them, gave an undue spring to the naturally ardent and enterprizing spirit of our people, indduced extravagant issues, and led to speculations and excesses of every sort. This money was suddenly recalled. The shock upon public credit was instantaneous and universal. District took the place of confidence, and men of business stood appalled with the conviction that the commerce, the currency, and the moneyed institutions of the country, its credit, and their own credit and fortunes, were thenceforth to depend upon the fluctuating opinions of party politicians.

The State Bank experiment, is now declared on all sides has failed, and I feel well assured if the Government is satisfied, that the banks themselves are. Considering the humiliating posture in which some of those institutions placed themselves to obtain a share of the public funds, it affords me some gratification to express my belief, that the deposite banks in this state never compromised their self respect. That the placing of large sums of money in these banks under the circumstances and the sudden and rapid withdrawal of it, should have embarassed them, in no cause of wonder. I only wonder that they survived at all.

What course will next be taken with the public funds remains to be seen. I confidently believe that that the people of this country have too high a regard for the security of their government, ever to sanction the mischievous and preposterous scheme of making every petty officer a depository of its revenues. However upright the present incumbents may be, they are, according to modern interpretation, the instruments of the power that appoints them. And if the day should ever come which heaven forbid! when our liqertses shall be put in jeopardy, this system will prove if not adopted, the greatest curse ever inflicted on the country.

There is an extraordinary and predominant disposition to change, in our public councils. That we are governed too much, that too much has been done within the last few years, by those who exercise the functions of government, calculated to unsettle all those principles which long experience had fully proved to be sound, and tending to the establishment of new doctrines, and to create a restless, changing spirit among the people, cannot be doubted. While I look at the uncertain aspect of the times, I could always wish that in any form these disturbing, agitating questions, might be put to rest. It is the solemn duty of every good citizen, at such a crisis, to exert himself in the station he may occupy, to restore the country to the safe paths of wisdom and experience.

Whatever differences of opinion there may be concerning the causes of the present embarrassments, there can be no doubt but that it will require time and patience to bring back ever to business. Confidence must be revived, economy must be introduced, and become the order of the day—and we must invite a return of those simple habits so congenial to the spirit of our institutions and so essential to the true happiness of man. Whoever expects to see an entire change in a day, or by a single act of legislation, will be disappointed. That the people will ultimately rise above their present misfortunes, even in the the face of unwise legislation, I confidently believe. There is an elasticity as well as momentum in the genius of trade, sufficiently powerful to overcome every obstacle.

There are only a few ways in which our legislation can bear on this interesting subject. The first and most direct relates to the banks, and to these I now invite your attention.

By the act passed at the last sitting, entitled "An act to provide for an investigation of the condition of the banks of this state and for other purposes," the legislature wisely provided for such an exhibition of the condition of the banks as would enable you to decide on the propriety an expediency of the course to be pursued at this time, for the security and convenience of the people. By that act no rights were compromised, but on the contrary, the rights and remedies of the people are expressly reserved. The banks are protected from the forfeiture of their charters arising from the suspension of specie payments, until the termination of the present sitting of the legislature, unless a majority of the banks in the cities of New York and Philadelphia should before that time resume payment in specie; in which event it was made the duty of the Governor to make proclamation thereof, and the duty of the banks to resume within fifteen days thereafter. This act further provides, that the officers and directors, under oath, shall answer the interrogatories therein propounded, and which for that purpose are to be forwarded to them by the Governor, and in addition that the monthly statement of the condition of the banks should be furnished the Treasurer, and by him published. Unless this was designed so put an end to the whole system of banking in the state, and require all the banks to wind up their affairs, which no man of reflection, who has at all considered the consequences of such a measure could for a moment desire, it is difficult to imagine any more judicious measure.

(Concluded next week.)

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, January 17, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

☞ A large and most influential County Convention, of the friends of popular education, was held pursuant to public notice in Newark, on Friday evening last. Chief Justice Hornblower was appointed president; John Wilson, Stephen P. Brittin, Stephen D. Day, and John H. Stephens, Vice Presidents.

We have not room for the proceedings and resolutions, which were highly interesting.

☞ Disastrous News from Florida.—We extremely regret to learn that the Florida war has again commenced, with increased virulence. On the 20th of December, a bloody battle was fought in which, 28 men, including several valuable officers, of the United States troops under Colonel Taylor, were killed, and 111 were wounded.—The loss of the Indians is not known, but supposed to be large. Gen. Jessup had a few days previous captured 37 Indians near Fort Lane.

This intelligence is confirmed from several sources.

FIRE.—The dwelling house of Mr. Jacob Shotwell, of Warren, about two miles from this village, was entirely consumed by fire on the afternoon of Monday last. The wind was high at the time, and before the engine which left this place had arrived there, it was too late to be of any service. Much of the contents of the house were also destroyed. We understand that there was no insurance.

The loss is estimated from five to nine hundred dollers.

Dr. Dayton will be in Plainfield again in a few weeks.

☞ Nothing of great importance from Canada since our last. It appears from the account of the steamboat Careline affair, as published in the Canada papers, that the expedition was fitted out by order of Col. McNab, and commanded by Capt Drew, of the Royal Navy. This materially alters the whole affair.

Gov. Marcy, Gen. Scott, and other influential gentlemen are now on that frontier.

From later intelligence it appears that the Caroline was wholly owned by Americans, that the only flag on board was the American flag, and that she was unarmed. Another steamboat, well armed and equipped, has taken the place of the Caroline. Gov. Head has been endeavoring to attack Navy Island, but most of his troops absolutely refused, and the expedition has been abandoned.

☞ A most destructive fire occurred in the city of New Orleans, on the night of the 3d inst. Seven large stores, with most of their contents were destroyed. It is supposed that property to the amount of five to $800,000 was destroyed, which will fall principally on the insurance offices, as most of the property was insured. It is feared that many lives were also lost.

Owing to unavoidable absence the past week, we are unable to give our readers the whole of the Governor's Message in this number; and for the same reason, we have not been able to correct the many typographical errors with which this sheet abounds. This shall be hereafter attended to.

The last arrivals from Europe bring the gratifying intelligence that cotton has risen one penny sterling, or two cents a pound. The last year's cotton crop, yet unsold, is estimated to amount to 1,900,000 bales, or 720,000,000 lbs. which at 2 cents per pound is, $14,400,000. The advance then of this penny a pound is sufficient to liquidate half of our foreign debt.

A Mr. Gurley has commenced the publication of a religious paper at Washington, which he has long had in contemplation. We wish him much success.

The New York Conservative have resolved to establish a morning paper in the city.

McKenzie has been arrested in Buffalo by the U. S. Marshal, and admitted to bail in a bond of $5000. He immediately left for Navy Island. Our farmers are furnishing the camp there with provisions.

☞ The prospect for the repeal of the law prohibiting the issue of small notes by the banks both in this state, and in New York, looks very favorable. Glad on't.

Large meetings have been held in Albany and Troy, and many other places in relation to the destruction of the Caroline, and appropriate resolutions passed.

There are five newspapers published in the republic of Texas; the Telegraph, Bulletin, Herald, Chronicle, and Single Star, all published weekly.

The sum annually distributed in this state, from our public fund for the support of common schools is $20,000; in New York, it is but $100,000, a sum not equal to ours in proportion to population, and yet in that state, the system is highly beneficial, while ours is wretchedly lame.—State Gazette.

The New York Gazette mentions that an individual who wanted yesterday to discount $1500, in American gold, and was offered only one per cent. premium, which he declined, and afterwards deposited in one of the uptown banks.

Answer to Enigma, No. 30-1.25.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

☞ We have received from each of the following gentlemen, $2,00 in advance payment for the 2d volume of the Union, which commences one week from this day:

Joseph Webster, Ira Pruden, Charles Johnson, Jefferson R. Dunn, James Leonard, Miron G. Olmsted, Joel Fouratt, David Coon. $16.

☞ We mistook in our last the name of Wm. Williamson for William Davison,—it should have been the latter.

TRADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from the pen; following the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying suquickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great or durability, and its yielding to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, rendering it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

GREEN BROOK Family School,

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the other branches of thorough English Education, to the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bedclothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that any idle, disorderly, or unsuitable boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study, rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street.

It is easy of access at all seasons of the year either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its confidence. EZRA PARKHURST.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout this country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases they have performed very effectual cures.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and should not be used by them during their confinement.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by persons, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to restore and maintain a natural healthful action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain;—excite action in the liver, and promote its secretions;—purify the blood;—to equalise circulation;—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions, and in producing all those salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

Directions giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

Warren Township, December 26, 18

PROSPECTUS

OF A

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of Literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, flute, and concertina, will accompany the pens of well known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—criticisms on authors and their choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign journals—and correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—fashions and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessors in literature, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. Twelve dollars will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and selections from popular journals abroad will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, entitle us in the pledge that in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors—a fair assertion, assuming its pre-eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau-sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

Cooking Stoves

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business, and after considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,

C. Postley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterboch cooking stoves from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleim's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patteons we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

GREEN BROOK
Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care is to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the improvement and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, and out of school. The sacred Scriptures are received by us as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $30 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge.

An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner putire.

The school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Foreign Stage and the British Statesman.

At Paris, during the early part of the year 1827, and the winter of 1828—29, resided a lady whose possessions and performances caused no slight sensation among the gayety seeking coterie of that capital. Madame de Frambaud was a woman advanced in years, plain in appearance and grave in address. She spoke in the tone of one accustomed to move in the higher grades of society; but of her descent, connections, plans, and resources no one seemed able to glean the slightest information. She professed to unveil the future, and though her fee was gold, and those the few who freely walked upon her with a formal introduction from a previous client the equipages that were found loitering near her spacious dwelling in Rue de la Paix near la Barriere du Roule contained half the beauty and haut ton of Paris.

And yet the information she gave was partial, and related to two epochs only in the life of those who consulted her—death and marriage. She would place before you the lively scene and gay appendages of the one, and the languor, gloom, and restlessness of the other. On neither occasion was it her custom to offer a single syllable of remark.

Among the strangers then in Paris were two Englishmen of great, but opposite talent,—both ambitious men—each idolized by his respective party—both high in the favor of the sovereign whom they served, and aspiring to the highest rewards which talent and energy could win.—They heard from fifty fair tongues the fame of madame de Frambaud; and as a mere whim of the moment—an impromptu extravagance, they resolved to visit the seeress in disguise, and test her pretensions. They were described, in the note of introduction which they presented as two American gentlemen, whose stay in Paris must be under the circumstances, short—whose errand there was some commercial speculation, the issue of which might recall them to Philadelphia at a few hour's notice. They entreated, therefore, the favor of an immediate audience.

It was granted at once. She received them in perfect silence, as was her wont. But upon the first who entered her apartment (the younger and by far the more intellectual-looking of the two,) she gazed long and earnestly. "You are married and have two sons and a daughter," was the firstand exclamation with which she met his bow: "the scene of your nuptials, therefore, you cannot well have forgotten. That of your decease is the spectacle which I presume you wish to have brought before your eyes."

"You anticipate me madam," was the reply; but such is undoubtedly the object of my present visit."

"And you, sir," said she turning to his companion, "are married, but childless. Do you wish to gaze upon the closing scene of your busy life?" Perhaps," added she, with more of interest and feeling than she generally exhibited, "you will also desire your intention." She considered it.

"By no means; that which is gaily courted by my companion, I would also brave."

"Have you firmness and resolution? Have you nerve to gaze upon a harrowing spectacle?"

"Without it ought I to have come hither?"

"I am answered. Follow me."

She led the way as she spoke, out of the apartment, and the Englishmen followed her. They crossed a small, low passage, passed through a narrow portal, and found themselves in a hall of very considerable extent. It was paved with black marble, and decorated at each end with four slender pillars of the same material. In the centre rose a very large jet black basin, filled with dark water to a considerable depth. A cupola admitted a tempered light from above; and the deep basin was so placed that whatever daylight the dome admitted fell upon it. But despite of the noble proportions of the hall, the lightness of the pillars, and the fairy tracery of the cupola, there was an air of gloom over the whole apartment. It seemed a fitting scene to communicate tidings of approaching sorrow, separation, silence and death.

"Look on this dark water," said their conductress, "it shall speak to you of the future. If death be at a distance, it will sink some feet in every second that you gaze upon it. If your parting hour approaches, it will rise rapidly; and if the very last sands in life's hour glass be running, with unerring skill it be checked only by the autograph. If death shall approach you in the guise of violence, the water will instantly bubble up. If caused by accident, it will change color once, twice, thrice,—fast as the hues of the rainbow melt into each other and vanish, even while you gaze on them. If death overtake you by gradual decay, and in the common course of nature, other than a gentle ripple over its surface, no change will the still water know or tell. You understand me?"

"I do, I do."

"Fully I. Approach then. Gaze steadfastly on that dark surface, and it shall mirror to thee fully and faithfully, the future."

The calmer, graver and sadder of the two advanced slowly to the margin with a look of mingled curiosity and incredulity which sat strangely on his heavy massive features. In an instant the water rose at least two feet; changed color rapidly, more than once, and then became dark and motionless as before.

"All, not far distant—and by accident!"

The spell made no reply, but merely motioned him by a gesture to gaze on. He did so, and as he looked he beheld a mimic representation of a scene of great confusion. Populous multitudes were assembled—there was running to and fro—persons were riding in all directions—and deep terror set on many a countenance. This faded from the scene, and there appeared to him a small room in what appeared to be a country inn. Three or more individuals appeared on whose persons he was a perfect stranger. But there was one present whose features he instantly recognized, one who lay near door to him—his wife. Her countenance was calm, but there was stamped on it deep and indescribable distress. Propped up by pillows in the foreground, was a figure, which his features told him was himself. The face was overspreading with death. Every feature bore the impress of intense agony; and the face was overspread with that cold pearly hue which so surely foretells impending dissolution. He looked as it steadily for a few seconds. A sort of mist came over his vision. He withdrew his gaze for an instant from the fountain, and when he again resumed his observation, the painful scene had vanished. His inquiring look of astonishment and emotion the sybil returned with indifference. The agitation manifested in his countenance was strangely contrasted with the fixed, rigid expression of hers. Disappeared a painful struggle with conflicting feelings; her countenance wore its usual air of cold and impressive indifference.

"That I should see her—that she should be so clearly, accurately, and faithfully portrayed, is most bewildering!"

"What! it's past a joke!" said the younger of the two advancing gaily towards the fountain. The answer of the oracle is not palatable, eh! But now of me, and to me, what says the future?"

The water rose a few inches and then became stationary. On its surface next appeared a small chamber, insignificant in its dimensions—scanty in its accomodations—meagre in its furniture—and altogether humble in its comforts and appointments. Gardens seemed to stretch around it; and on the mantle-piece he remarked a small bronze clock of singular shape.

"Charles, I live!" he exclaimed as his eye rested on the lineaments of a youth, who was holding the hand of a sick person, in the full vigor of life, but racked with bodily agony. "The other figure I conceive to be that of Charles' dying father," said he, after a pause. "'Tis a painful spectacle!" he continued turning from the fountain, "and I know not what benefit into be derived from a lengthened contemplation of it. Come the day breaks. We will leave this singular and comfortless abode of the oracle."

He took his friend's arm as he spoke, and advanced to te der his parting devoirs to the mystic, and with them her fee. The first she returned coldly, the latter she peremptorily refused. "I am already remunerated!" was her startling declaration. "Sufficient honor for me if I have administered to the amusement—the passing amusement"—the bitter emphasis on this last word conveyed a meaning which those whom she addressed seemed to feel and shrink from—"of his most gracious majesty as Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Canning."

Again, with exquisite mockery, she curtsied still deeper and more deferently than before, and ere they could recover from their surprise, left them.

[It will be recollected that Mr. Huskisson was killed by one of the cars on the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Rail Road.]

Potatoes.

The potatoe with me for ten years, the last excepted, has been of fair crop, but by adhering to the old method of tillage, has been more expensive than is necessary, as I find by the course I have adopted this season. I planted three acres the 29th and 30th of May; first ploughed, then manured with coarse barn-yard manure; then ploughed again and harrowed. Struck out the rows three feet apart with a one horse plough say five inches deep; dropping the seed eighteen inches apart; turned back the first row, and the work was done. For hoeing first time used a small hoe, the cultivator, as urged as to all the whole space between the rows, was passed through, followed by the hoe, giving a slight dressing, but making little or no hill, and the whole labor, after the ground was fitted, did not exceed three and a half days' work persons. By the use of the plough the seed was planted deep; the potatoe never takes a downward direction. The cultivator loosened and mellowed the soil, and served the double purpose of hoeing and hilling nearly the whole row. Get an excellent corn cultivator. Get one! get one! The product was over 430 bushels per acre, and 1300 bushels from the three acres.

We copy the following report of Mr. Wall's just remarks during the debate on Mr. Calhoun's resolutions, from the National Intelligencer.—

Mr. Wall said that he had hoped the subject would have been referred to a committee, as he was clearly incompetent to the Senate to sit day after day, making abstract creeds, and establishing particular interpretations of the Constitution; all of which was foreign to the purpose of legislation. He would ask, on whom are these codes creeds, and abstraction, to operate?—They could have no force whatever as law; whom then, would they bind? No one person whatsoever! Did, then, the Senate expect to settle a thousand disputed constitutional questions by propounding these abstract abstract propositions? Legislation was the duty of legislators, not to broach or to promulgate abstract opinions and theories—If a law were introduced on the subject, he (Mr. W.) would be able to act; or, if the report of a committee had been come up, it might be received or rejected. As it was, however, the course pursued appeared to him irregular, anomalous, and fraught with bad consequences, converting the Senate into a mere arena of theoretical disputations.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

(Concluded.)

While the rights of no man are impaired, you have saved your own institutions from a forbearance arising from a common calamity wholly beyond their power to avert, and have provided for the very object the public most desire, to wit: a full development of their actual state and condition. I am happy to say that this law has, so far as I have had the means of judging, received very general approbation. Immediately after the passage of this act, my duty under it was performed by transmitting to each of the banks a copy of the interrogatories propounded. Answers to those interrogatories, so far as received, are herewith respectfully submitted. I recommend the careful examination of these answers to you all as a duty to the public, and as calculated to have a decided influence in your deliberations up on this all important subject. From the little opportunity I have had of looking into them, I am favorably impressed with one important fact. It appears that the banks, instead of availing themselves of the suspension, as was at first apprehended, to flood the country with increased issues of paper, have greatly diminished their circulation and curtailed their discounts. This prudent caution has been exercised no doubt with an eye to the resumption of specie payments, which is as essential to the true interests of the banks as to the public. That they must and will resume at no distant day, is now quite certain. Nothing can excuse a continuance in their present state a day Linger, except the necessity of the case, and notwithstanding any prejudice which may exist on this subject, I have the confidence in the banking institutions of our state, and in the men who conduct them, to believe that they will do so at the earliest practicable period. It is the duty of the legislature, it is the duty of the banks and of every man in society, to co-operate in bringing about so desireable a result. Can the banks of this state return to specie payments alone, or until the larger institutions in the great emporiums of trade shall lead the way? It is my firm conviction that they cannot, without hazarding the greater calamity of a second suspension, a disaster every way to be deprecated. From looking carefully at the act before referred to I do not see why a continuance of the first section for a longer period may not answer all the purposes of legislation on the subject, unless before the close of your present sitting, a general resumption by the banks in other states should supervene on the necessity of any further action on the subject.

The next important subject to which your attention will be asked by the people, concerns the expediency of repealing the act restraining the banks from issuing bills of less denomination than $5. Without entering into the question how far that law may or may not have been wise under a state of things formerly existing, I have no hesitation in saying that there is in my judgement, no public necessity for its repeal, at least for the present. It can be revived at any time hereafter if thought advisable. It is a singular fact that the banks of this state, which now pay into the treasury annually, a tax of rising $22,000 for the privileges, have been prohibited by the course of legislation from circulating small bills, while the banks of other states, which pay us nothing, and of whose solvency the public have no knowledge, occupy almost exclusively the circulation of the state. It should be remembered also, that by the charters of most of our banks, the directors are personally responsible for the redemption of these bills, which affords an additional security to the public. I cannot ascertain a doubt that the issuing of small bills, by the banks will greatly facilitate the great object now to be attained that of resuming specie payments. The demand for specie would be proportionably diminished.

I leave this whole subject to your sound discretion, bearing in further respect for the wages of those [illegible] such as a your enlightened [illegible] to demand. They [illegible] upon the prosperity of your being active. [illegible] banks. If any should [illegible] he promptly [illegible] ver to present [illegible] to the [illegible] $2,065,86, leaving [illegible] 17 25 has been [illegible] the completion of [illegible] $15,776 40 has been [illegible] the year for the support of the Government. In addition to this there are claims on the Treasury for the last year, which have already been presented to the amount of $7,232 25. To pass the Treasury in a prudent manner, you will find it, I think, indispensable to raise the usual amount of $40,000 by tax; and as collections from that quarter will not be received until a year from this time, the Treasurer must be authorized in the mean time, to anticipate so much of those funds as he may have occasion to use, by loan. I do not enter into particulars, as you will no doubt, according to common practice, require a statement from the Treasurer on the whole subject. It is very desirable that the legislature should, as soon as the means can reasonably be done, provide means in advance for the payment of all legal and just demands on the treasurer, without the necessity of fear to borrow money.

There has been for some years an increased disposition, in many parts of the state, to reform the judiciary; and certainly no subject has a stronger claim to your consideration. The difficulty always has been to agree on a plan. For my own part, I cannot consent to disturb in any manner, the present Court of Common Pleas. That court should be left with its present jurisdiction and powers. I would suggest whether all the objects of the proposed changes might not be attained, by increasing the numbers of the justices of the Supreme court, and requiring them to hold four circuits instead of two, annually, in each county. There is great delay to the suitor under the present system of holding circuits half yearly instead of quarterly. I would further recommend, that the law should be so modified as to allow the successful party the same costs in the Supreme Court as in the Common Pleas, in case of the recovery of an amount over one hundred dollars and not exceeding two hundred dollars. This slight modification, I do not doubt, would remedy all the evils in the system now complained of.

I unite in the suggestion heretofore made to the legislature on the impropriety of changing the intention of land titles by testament, by legislation. The frequent solicitations for this purpose of late, should excite your serious attention to the subject. The right to dispose of his property at death by will, is one of the most sacred rights of the citizen, and the power of the legislature to violate or disregard it may well be questioned. Legislative acts to authorize the sale of lands bequeathed by will, contrary to the intention of the testator, neither accord with sound legislation nor with the fundamental principles of the social compact.

I cannot forbear to call your attention to the subject of dioreses. The facility with which they are procured and the number which are granted from time to time, hold out inducements for domestic discords lead to much fraud and corruption, and have become a means of reproach to us as a state. The easy relaxation of the marriage tie is calculated to demoralize society, and loosen one of the chief foundations of social order. The exercise of this high power therefore, should be confined to very extraordinary cases.

In the present state of the business of the country, there can be no good reason for increasing the banking capital of the State; and if you should agree with me that applications for banks, for divorces, and for the construction or alteration of wills, ought not to be entertained at the present sitting, nearly one third of the usual amount of business would thereby be dispensed with. Thus affording you time and opportunity for attending to the more important matters of public concern.

During the recess, I have been favored with the views of the Principal of the New York Institution for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, concerning the interests of the beneficiaries of this state, under the law providing for the education of that unfortunate class of persons, some of whom are now in this institution. I have become fully persuaded that one important change in the law is desirable. For the purpose of better securing the benevolent intention of the act, I would therefore recommend, that the provision which admits children at six years of age, be so amended, as to make twelve years the lowest limitation. I would also recommend, that the term for a whole course of instruction be extended to 5 or 6 years. It is proper too that parents who are able should be required to bear at least part of the expense. The reasons for these modifications with others, will hereafter be presented to you, in a petition from a young man, who was educated under the law and he has had the benefit of much experience on the subject.

The last subject to which I shall invite your attention deserves your highest consideration. Public sentiment and the public interests alike demand a thorough revision of our common school system. In the judgment of those who have looked into the subject, it has failed to accomplish the useful purposes for which it was established. As the mass of our population must depend on the common school for the instruction necessary to fit them for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, it is of the very first importance that these schools should be such as to furnish a sound, thorough, and practical education. That they are not such under the present system is now universally acknowledged. The system is believed to be essentially defective, and it should be revised without any unnecessary delay. Education is not one of the interests which can be safely left to take care of itself. It needs the fostering care of government, and I have no clearer conviction than that it is both the duty and the interest of a free state to provide for the education of its children. There are very gratifying evidences that the subject is awakening a second degree of public interest, and the speedy adoption of the popular will very clearly indicate the path of duty.

Permit me, in conclusion, to express my earnest hope that the enlightened deliberations of your honorable bodies, under the smiles of that benignant being who has this far protected our country through every vicissitude, and in whose Providence it should be our highest glory to confide, may contribute to secure to us that state of prosperity which the enterprising and generous character of our citizens so richly merits.

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the improvement and happiness of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are constantly held up as the standard of morals; and while full instruction is given without leading the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year's. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May, —the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easily of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Foreign Ethyl and the British Statesmen.

At Paris, during the early part of the year 1827, and the winter of 1828—29, resided a lady whose pretensions and performances caused no slight sensation among the novelty seeking notaries of that capital. Madame du Frambaud was a woman advanced in years, plain in appearance and grave in address. She spoke in the tone of one accustomed to move in the higher grades of society; but of her descent, connections, plans, and resources, no one seemed able to glean the slightest information. She professed to unveil the future; and though her fee was gold, and though she saw those only who waited upon her with a formal introduction from a previous client the equipages that were found loitering near her spacious dwelling in Rue de la Paix chez la Barriere du Roule contained half the beauty and fashion of Paris.

And yet the information she gave was partial, and related to two epochs only in the life of those who consulted her—death and marriage. She would place before you the lively scene and gay appendages of the one, and the languor, gloom, and restlessness of the other. On neither spectacle was it her custom to offer a single syllable of remark.

Among the strangers then in Paris were two Englishmen of great, but opposite talents, both ambitious of fame—each idolized by his respective party—both high in the favor of the sovereign whom they served, and aspiring to the highest rewards which talent and energy could win.—They heard from fifty fair tongues the fame of madame de Frambaud; and as a mere whim of the moment—an impromptu extravagance, they resolved to visit the mystic in disguise, and test her pretensions. They were described, in the note of introduction which they presented as two American gentlemen, whose stay in Paris must be under the circumstances, short—whose errand there was some commercial speculation, the issue of which might recall them to Philadelphia at a few hour's notice. They entreated, therefore, the favor of an immediate audience.

It was granted at once. She received them in perfect silence, as was her wont. But upon the first who entered her apartment (the younger and by far the more intellectual-looking of the two,) she gazed long and earnestly. "You are married and have two sons and a daughter," was the ominous declaration with which she met his bow; "the scene of your nuptials, therefore, you cannot well have forgotten. That of your demise is the spectacle which I presume you wish to have brought before you."

"I do not anticipate one, madam," was the reply; but such is undoubtedly the object of my present visit."

"And you, sir," said she turning to his companion, "are married, but childless. Do you wish to gaze upon the closing scene of your busy life? Perhaps," added she, with more of interest and feeling than she generally exhibited, "you will abandon your intention. Re-consider it."

"By no means; the ideal which is gaily courted by my companion, I would also brave."

"Have you firmness and resolution? Have you nerve to gaze upon a harrowing spectacle?"

"Without it ought! I to have come hither?

"I am answered. Follow me."

She led the way as she spoke, out of the apartment, and the Englishmen followed her. They crossed a small, low passage, passed through a narrow portal, and found themselves in a hall of very considerable extent. It was paved with black marble, and decorated at each end with four slender pillars of the same material. In the centre rose a very large jet black basin, filled with dark water to a considerable depth. A cupola admitted a tempered light from above; and the deep basin was so placed that whatever daylight the dome admitted, fell upon it. But despite of the noble proportions of the hall, the lightness of the pillars, and the fairy tracery of the cupola, there was an air of gloom over the whole apartment. It seemed a fitting scene to commune tidings of approaching sorrow, separation, silence and death.

"Look on this dark water," said their conductress, "it shall speak to you of the future. If death be at a distance, it will sink some feet in every second that you gaze upon it. If your parting hour approaches, it will rise rapidly; and if the very last sands in life's hour glass be running, will mount till it be checked only by the margin. If death shall approach you in the guise of violence, the water will instantly bubble up. If calamity or accident, it will change color once, twice, thrice,—fast as the hues of the rainbow melt into each other and vanish, even while you gaze on them. If death overtake you by gradual decay, and in the common course of nature, other than a gentle ripple over its surface, no change will the still water know or tell. You understand me?"

"I do."

"Fully? Approach then. Gaze steadfastly on that dark surface, and it shall mirror to thee fully and faithfully, the future."

The calmer, graver and sadder of the two advanced slowly to the margin with a look of mingled curiosity and incredulity which set strangely on his heavy massive features. In an instant the water rose at least two feet; changed color rapidly, more than once, and then became dark and motionless as before.

"Ah, not for distant—and by accident!"

The sybil made no reply, but merely motioned him by a gesture to gaze on. He did so, and as he looked he beheld a mimic representation of a scene of great confusion. Countless multitudes were assembled—there was running to and fro—horsemen were riding in all directions—and deep dismay sat on many a countenance. This faded from the scene, and there was presented to him a small room in what appeared to be a rural side lane. Three or more individuals appeared to whom pressing haste was indicated strongly. But there was one upmost whose features he instantly recognized, one who was dear to him—his wife. Her countenance was calm, but there was stamped on it deep and indescribable distress. Propped up by pillows in the foreground, was a figure, which his features told him was himself. The eyes were shadowing and restless. Every feature bore the impress of intense agony; and the face was at one moment flushed, at the next cold and pale as marble. Gradually the figure sank into a state which so nearly resembled death, that the wife, with a sort of fond confidence, ceased to look at him. She looked at it steadily for a few seconds. A sort of mist came over his vision. He withdrew his gaze for an instant from the fountain, and when he again resumed his observation, the painful scene had vanished. His inquiring look of astonishment and emotion the sybil returned with indifference. The agitation manifested in his countenance was strangely contrasted with the fixed, rigid expression of hers. She appeared to paint all struggle with conflicting feelings; her countenance wore its usual air of cold and impressive indifference.

"That I should see her—that she should be so clearly, accurately, and faithfully portrayed, is most bewildering!"

"What! it's past a joke?" said the younger of the two advancing gaily towards the fountain. The answer of the oracle is not palatable, eh?—But now of me, and as me, what say ye the future?"

The water rose a few inches and then became stationary. On its surface had appeared a small chamber, insignificant in its dimensions—scanty in its accomodation—meagre in its furniture—and altogether humble in its comforts and appointments. Gardens seemed to stretch around it; and on the mantle-piece he remarked a small bronze clock of singular shape.

"Charles, as I live!" he exclaimed as his eye rested on the lineaments of a youth, who was holding the hand of a sick person, in the full vigor of life, but reached with bodily agony. "The other figure I conceive to be that of Charles' dying father," said he, after a pause. "'Tis a painful spectacle!" he continued turning from the fountain, "and I know not what benefit is to be derived from a lengthened contemplation of it. Come the day hence. We will leave this singular and certainly puzzling exhibition."

He took his friend's arm as he spoke, and advanced to bid his parting devoirs to the sorceress, and with them her fee. The first she returned coldly, the latter she peremptorily refused. "I am already remunerated," was her startling declaration. "Sufficient honor for me if I have administered to the amusement—the passing amusement"—the bitter emphasis on this last word conveyed a meaning which those who addressed seemed to feel and shrink from—" of two such state servants of his Britannic majesty as Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Canning!"

Again, with exquisite mockery, she curtsied still deeper and more reverently than before, and ere they could recover from their surprise, left them.

[It will be recollected that Mr. Huskinson was killed by one of the cars on the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Rail Road.]

Potatoes.—The potatoe with me for ten years, the last excepted, has been a fair crop, but by adhering to the old method of tillage, has been more expensive than is necessary, as I find by the second year we adopted the system. I planted three acres the 29th and 30th of May; first ploughed, then manured with coarse barn-yard manure; then ploughed again and harrowed. Struck out the rows three feet apart with a one horse plough say five inches deep; dropping the seed eighteen inches apart—turned back the furrow, and the work was done. For hoeing first and second time, the cultivator, so urged by me, fill the whole space between the rows. It was passed through followed by the hoe, giving a slight dressing, but making little or no hill, and the whole labor, after the ground was tilled, did not exceed three and a half days' work per acre. By the use of the plough the seed was planted deep the potatoe never takes a downward growth. The cultivator loosened and mellowed the soil so as to allow the roots to extend, and they were nearly clear when the rows, 6 feet apart, were ploughed together. Get seed; get good seed. The product was over 430 bushels per acre—and 430 bushels from three acres.

We copy the following report of Mr. Wall's just remarks during the debate on Mr. Calhoun's resolutions, from the National Intelligencer.

Mr. Wall said that he had hoped the subject would have been referred to a committee, as it was clearly incompetent to the Senate to act day after day, making abstract opinions, and establishing particular interpretations of the Constitution; all of which was foreign to the purpose of legislation. He would ask, on whom are these codes, creeds, and abstraction, to operate? They could have no force whatever as law; whom then, would they bind? No one person whatsoever! Did, then, the Senate expect to settle a thousand disputed constitutional questions by propounding theories and abstract propositions? It might as well expect the revolving of a mill to produce corn, as to legislate in abstract opinions and theories. If a law were introduced on the subject, he (Mr. W.) would be able to act; or, if the report of a committee had come up, it might be received or rejected. As it was, however, the course pursued appeared to him irregular, unprecedent, and fraught with bad consequences, converting the Senate into a mere arena of theoretical disputations.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

(Concluded.)

While the rights of no man are impaired, you have saved your own institutions from a forfeiture arising from a common calamity wholly beyond their power to avert, and have provided for the very object the public most desire, to wit: a full development of their actual state and condition. I am happy to say that this law has, so far as I have had the means of judging, received very general approbation. Immediately after the passage of this act, my duty under it was performed by transmitting to each of the banks a copy of the interrogatories propounded. Answers to these interrogatories, so far as received, are herewith respectfully presented. I recommend the careful examination of these answers to you as a duty to the public, and as calculated to have a decided influence in your deliberations on this all important subject. From the little opportunity I have had of looking into them, I am favorably impressed with one important fact. It appears that the banks, instead of availing themselves of the suspension, as was at first apprehended, to flood the country with increased issues of paper, have greatly diminished their circulation and curtailed their discounts. This prudent caution has been exercised no doubt with an eye to the resumption of specie payments, which is as essential to the true interests of the banks as to the public. That they must and will resume at no distant day, is now quite certain. Nothing can excuse a continuance in their present state a day longer, except the necessity of the case, and notwithstanding any prejudice which may exist on this subject, I have the confidence in the banking institutions of our state, and in the men who conduct them, to believe that they will do so at the earliest practicable period. It is the duty of the legislature, it is the duty of the banks and of every man in society, to co-operate in bringing about so desireable a result. Can the banks of this state return to specie payments alone, or until the larger institutions in the great emporiums of trade shall lead the way? It is my firm conviction that they cannot, without hazarding the greater calamity of a second suspension, a disaster every friend to them required. From looking carefully at the set before referred to I do not see why a continuance of the first section for a longer period may not answer all the purposes of legislation on the subject, unless before the close of your present sitting, a general resumption by the banks in other states should supercede the necessity of any further action on the subject.

The next important subject to which your attention will be asked by the people, concerns the expediency of repealing the act restraining the banks from issuing bills of less denomination than $5. Without entering into the question how far that law may or may not have been wise under a state of things formerly existing, I have no hesitation in saying that there is in my judgement, a public necessity for its repeal, at least for the present. It will be reviewed at any time hereafter if thought advisable. It is a singular fact, that the banks of this state, which now pay into the treasury annually, a tax of rising $22,000 for the privileges, have been prohibited by the course of legislation from circulating small bills, while the banks of other states, which pay us nothing, and of whose solvency the public have no knowledge occupy almost exclusively the circulation of the state. It should be remembered also, that by the charters of most of our banks, the directors are personally responsible for the redemption of these bills, which affords an additional security to the public. I cannot entertain a doubt that the issuing of small bills, by the banks will greatly facilitate the great object now to be attained that of resuming specie payments. The demand for specie would be proportionably diminished.

I leave this whole subject to your sound discretion, desiring no further respect for the suggestions I have made than as to your wisdom they [illegible] They [illegible] on the prosperity of your being extin- [illegible] banks. If any should [illegible] be promptly [illegible] ear to presen- [illegible] of the condi- [illegible] 25 has been [illegible] the expenses of the [illegible] $15,773 46 has [illegible] year for the sup- [illegible] of the Government. In addition to this there [illegible] claims on the Treasury for the last year, which have already been presented to the amount of $7,239 29. To place the Treasury on a proper footing, you will find it [illegible] to raise the usual amount of $40,000 by tax; and as reflections from that quarter will not be received until a year from this time, the Treasurer must be authorized in the mean time, to anticipate so much of those funds as he may have occasion to use, by loans. I do not enter into particulars, as you will go into details, according to custom, for the purpose, and submit a statement from the Treasurer on the whole subject. It is very desirable that the law relative to the militia, as well as the [illegible] be done, provide means [illegible] advance for the payment of all legal and just demands on the treasurer, which will obviate the [illegible] of fines to borrow money.

There has been for some years a very increased disposition, in many parts of the state, to reform the judiciary; and certainly no subject has a stronger claim to your consideration. The difficulty always has been to agree on a plan. For my own part, I cannot consent to disturb in any manner, the present Court of Common Pleas. That court should be left with its present jurisdiction and powers. I would suggest whether all the objects of the proposed changes might not be attained, by increasing the numbers of the judges of the Supreme court, and requiring them to hold four circuits instead of two, annually, in each county. There is great delay to the suitor under the present system of holding circuits half yearly instead of quarterly. I would further recommend, that the law should be so modified as to allow the successful party the same costs in the Supreme Court as in the Common Pleas, in case of the recovery of an amount over one hundred dollars and not exceeding two hundred dollars. This slight modification, I do not doubt, would remedy all the evils in the system now complained of.

I unite in the suggestion heretofore made to the legislature on the impropriety of changing the intention of last wills and testaments, by legislation. The frequent solicitations for this purpose of late, should excite your serious attention to the subject. The right to dispose of his property at death by will, is one of the most sacred rights of the citizen, and the power of the legislature to violate or disregard it may well be questioned. Legislative acts to authorize the sale of lands bequeathed by will, contrary to the intention of the testator, neither accord with sound legislation nor with the fundamental principles of the social compact.

I cannot forbear to call your attention to the subject of divorces. The facility with which they are procured and the number which are granted from time to time, hold out inducements for domestic discords lead to much fraud and corruption, and have become a means of reproach to us as a state. The easy relaxation of the marriage tie is calculated to demoralize society, and loosen one of the chief foundations of social order. The exercise of this high power, therefore, should be confined to very extraordinary cases.

In the present state of the business of the country, there seems to be no good reason for the sitting of the banking capital of the State; and if you should agree with me that applications for banks, for divorces, and for the construction or alteration of wills, ought not to be entertained at the present sitting, nearly one third of the usual amount of business would thereby be dispensed with. Thus affording you time and opportunity for attending to the more important matters of public concern.

During the recess, I have been favored with the views of the Principal of the New York Institution for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, concerning the interests of the beneficiaries of this state, under the law providing for the education of that unfortunate class of persons, some of whom are now in that institution; and I have become fully persuaded that some important changes in the law are desirable, for the purpose of better securing the benevolent intention of the state. I would therefore recommend, that the provision which admits children at six years of age, be so amended, as to make twelve years the lowest limitation. I would also recommend, that the term for a whole course of instruction be extended to 5 or 6 years. It is proper too that parents who are able should be required to bear at least part of the expense. The reasons for these modifications, with others, will hereafter be presented to you, in a petition from a young man, who was educated under the law and he has had the benefit of much experience on the subject.

The last subject to which I shall invite your attention deserves your highest consideration. Public sentiment and the public interest alike demand a thorough revision of our common school system. In the judgment of those who have looked into the subject, it has failed to accomplish the useful purposes for which it was created. As the mass of our population must depend for their science school for the instruction necessary to fit them for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, it is of the very first importance that these schools should be such as to furnish a sound, thorough and practical education. That they are not such under the present system, is now universally acknowledged. The system is believed to be essentially defective, and it should be remedied without any unnecessary delay. Education is not one of the interests which can be safely left to take care of itself. It needs the fostering care of government, and I have no clearer conviction than that it is both the duty and the interest of a free state to provide for the education of its children. There are very gratifying evidences that the subject is awakening a second degree of public interest, and that those are the most popular will very clearly lead the way.

Permit me, in conclusion to express my earnest hope that the enlightened deliberations of your honorable bodies, under the scales of that benignant being who has thus far protected our country through every vicissitude, and in whose Providence it should be the highest glory of a people to confide, may contribute to restore that state of prosperity which, for the enterprising and generous character of our inhabitants richly merits.

Lines
To the Plainfield Union.

When first on the ocean of Fame thou wert launched,
'Twas with trembling hope of success;
And brief was the distance thy bark had advanced,
Before war hoisted the "flag of distress!"
For o'er the horizon there spread a dark cloud,
And tempests came howling around:
The voice of the thunderbolt sounded aloud,
And no haven of shelter was found:
Above, all was darkness, dismay and commotion;—
Around, but a troublous and wide-spreading ocean!

But, thy signal was answered; a pilot appeared!
And fearless thy helm did he guide,
'Till the storm was o'erpast, and the snowy sail reared,
As Hope was again to you side.
Yet many a vessel of costlier freight,
Was made but the sport of that storm;
'Till tempest-tost, harrassed, and cheated by Fate,
Nought remained but a wreck of its form:
O, numberless hearts, by adversity riven,
Will remember the storm, of the year "thirty-seven!"

But our greetings be thine; that thy first voyage is made,
In safety, through perils so great;
And though o'er the future, hangs ever a shade,
We'll trust that good fortune await:
At least that no dangers lie hence in thy course,
More threatening than those which are past;
Nor seek as can triumph o'er industry's force.
While wisdom and patience shall last;
And if in thy pilot these gifts are united,
The hopes we now cherish, are not to be blighted.

Then "success to the Union!" a pledge do we give,
And greetings to patrons and friends!"
In peace and prosperity long may each live;
And as all is deemed well, that well ends,
May the year thirty-eight close with honors attained,
By those who shake hands with the cause,
As the Union shall proffer the treasures* than gained,
To be weighed by the critic's stern laws.
And now with emotions of kindest communion,
We take for the present, our leave of "the Union."

* Wealth of the mind.

To E. C. S.

The Muses oft times woo me to their arms,
Nor am I quite insensate to their charms,
Yet when I take my lyre to string along
The flowery paths that deck the fields of song,
They fly and I am left untaught and alone,
My task unfinished, and my song unsung.

It is not thus with thee—when thou dost sing,
Their choicest graces they around thee fling,
Each thought is clothed in robes of their own choice,
And every word is taught thee by their voice.
What art hast thou their visits to prolong?
How dost thou gain their constant aid fair child of song?

While Mr. Springer was giving the introductory lecture on astronomy in the Baptist Church in this place, he related the following anecdote; The great astronomer, Galileo, at the age of 70, was compelled by the Inquisition to recant his opinion of the motion of the earth, which the theology of the day had declared to be "false and absurd in philosophy, and erroneous in faith, being expressly contrary to the Scriptures." Having abjured his belief as an error and heresy, with his knees on the ground and his hands on the Gospel, as soon as he rose up, he struck the earth with his foot, and muttered, "E pur si muove,"—"it moves nevertheless."

To the Ladies of Indiana.

We are the wives of drunkards—the mothers of the children of drunkards. Our property has been squandered, our families left destitute, we have been compelled to struggle against poverty and want, brought upon us by the intemperance of those for whom we abandoned all the endearments of the paternal roof. We ever have, and ever must regard the makers and vendors of ardent spirits, as the authors of our misery. They enticed our husbands into the paths of intemperance, and reap the profits of their ruin. Their riches and pleasures are purchased by our poverty and sorrow. It is their daily business to make drunkards, and to destroy the peace and happiness of families. They cast around them with a reckless hand "fire brands, arrows and death." We have gone to them and on our bended knees implored them to no longer furnish our husbands with the intoxicating draught; but they have driven us from their houses with curses and abuse. And now impoverished and heart-broken as the last resort, we appeal to you the Legislators of the state. You, whose high privilege, whose imperative duty it is to protect the weak and innocent—we appeal to you to save us and our children from the rapacity of those who live by a traffic the effects of which are "evil, wholly evil" and that continually."

We do not consider it necessary to enlarge upon the evils that result from the sale of ardent spirits, they cannot have escaped your observation. They daily thrust themselves upon your notice in all the forms of human wretchedness. How much would the catalogue of crime, and the amount of human suffering be diminished; how greatly would the wealth and happiness of the community be increased, if there were no groggshops in the land! And yet the Legislature countenances and encourages these sinks of pollution, by granting them license! We can see no better reason why you should license groceries than brothels, or gambling houses. We pray you therefore, so to amend the law respecting the sale of ardent spirits, as to prevent that traffic to the extent which it now exists. And this we conjure you to do by the love you bear to the peace and happiness of your own fire-sides; by your desire that your children should grow up sober, industrious and respectable, and that they should be useful and honorable members of society. If you disregard our petition, you may yet have to follow your own sons to the drunkard's grave, or see your own daughters cursed with drunken husbands. But if you regard our petition, the destroyer shall not enter your households, and thousands shall rise up and call you blessed.

In the house, a memorial praying congress to amend the naturalization laws was taken up. After debate, it was referred to the judiciary committee.

Tuesday, Jan. 16th.

Mr. Swift in seconding with previous notice, brought forward the resolutions of the Vermont Legislature, relating to the abolition of slavery.

Mr. Cuthbert contended that the resolutions had no more claim upon the courtesy or respect of the Senate than if they came from individuals, or any other body of men.

Mr. Preston followed in a most vehement and passionate speech, against the reception of the resolutions.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the report of the committee on elections, in relation to the Mississippi election, assigned for this day.

Mr. Bronson offered a resolution declaring that Messrs. Prentiss and Word are not members of the 25th Congress, and not entitled to their seats.

Mr. Wise offered the following:

Resolved, That S. S. Prentiss and T. G. Word have leave to appear at the bar of the House, in defence of their claim to their seats, as representatives from the state of Mississippi. Mr. W. remarked that he did this in conformity with usage, though he protested against the right of the House to refuse admission to the representatives sent to it from the State of Mississippi, as members of this House.

Mr. Foster said he was willing to give these gentlemen every facility for the support of their application, and his only object was to prevent them from mingling in the general debate which might follow after they had closed their argument.

Mr. Bond moved the previous question, which was seconded, and the resolution was agreed to.

Seats were then prepared within the Bar for Messrs. Prentiss and Word.

Mr. Howard moved, in behalf of Mr. Claiborne and Mr. Gholson, the sitting members, that a statement by them prepared, in reply to a statement laid before the House by the claimants, be read.

Mr. Wise made some opposition to the motion, on the supposition that Mr. Howard had moved that it be printed. The statement on the tables of the members from Messrs. Word and Prentiss were, he said, voluntarily printed by them.

Messrs. Prentiss and Word appeared and took the seats prepared for them, and the resolution just adopted was read.

Mr. Gholson, who had just appeared in the House, after long absence from sickness, rose under apparent excitement, and said he wished the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wise) to understand that he and his colleague asked no favors of the House, though they might not be willing to pay for what the gentleman was. They had not asked the printing of the paper. Mr. G. was going on, in a tone of some excitement, directing his remarks to Mr. Wise, when

Mr. Wise rose and said, "if impudence, and ignorance can make a blackguard, there, (pointing to Mr. G.) is one.

Mr. Gholson. "None but a scoundrel could use such an expression in this house. He is a scoundrel and he knows it."

Mr. Howard then presented the paper and it was read.

Wednesday Jan. 17th.

In Senate.—Mr. Webster offered the following resolution—

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to obtain information, and lay the same before the Senate, with as little delay as possible, respecting any payments of pensions, by the late pension agent of Boston, or of fishing bounties, recently made by the collector at Boston, in bills of the Commonwealth Bank of that city; and the whole amount of such payments; that he further inform the Senate by what authority or direction payment of such pensions and bounties have been made in such bills; and that he further inform the Senate whether any, and, if any, how much, of the public money of the United States is in deposite at said bank; and, if any of such money be therein deposited, at what time or times such deposites were made.

The resolution was, in the end, adopted.

Mr. Webster stated that the pensioners in Massachusetts had been paid in the bills of the Commonwealth Bank, he wished to know on what authority such payment had been made. In his view, it was clearly against the law of 1816, and the law of 1839.

After this subject was disposed of, the Senate took up the bill providing for the maintainance of our neutral obligations on the inland frontier, and was ordered to a third reading.

The House resumed the consideration of the Mississippi election case. The following resolution was taken up.

Resolved, That Messrs. Gholson and Wise, members of the house, between whom warm words have passed in debate, be required by the speaker to declare in their places, that they will not prosecute further the quarrel which has arisen between them.

Laid on the table, 126 to 24.

Mr. Prentiss, one of the new members, then arose and addressed the house at length.

Thursday, Jan. 18.

In Senate, the bill for compelling the observance of our neutral obligations was taken up and finally passed.

The sub Treasury bill was taken up.

In the house, Mr. Prentiss continued his speech which he commenced yesterday.

From the Jerseyman.

Professor Morse's Electro-Magnetic Telegraph—It is with some degree of pride, that it falls to our lot first to announce the complete success of this wonderful piece of mechanism, and no place could have been found more suitable to pursue the course of experiments necessary to perfecting the detail of machinery than the Speedwell works. Replete as they are with every convenience, Professor Morse quietly pursued the great object, and has fitfully succeeded. Others may have suggested the possibility of conveying intelligence by electricity, but this is the first instance of its actual transmission and permanent accord.

The Telegraph consists of four parts:

1st. The Battery.—A Cruikshank's Galvanic Trough of 60 pair of plates, seven by eight and a half inch each. 2d. The Portrule—An instrument which regulates the motion of the rule. The 3d answers to the stick of the printers, and is the type representing the numbers to be transmitted are passed beneath the lever which closes and breaks the circuit. 3d. The Register—An instrument which receives and records the numbers sent by the Portrule from any distant station. 4th. A Dictionary, containing a complete vocabulary of all the words in the English language regularly numbered.

The communications which we saw made through a distance of 2 miles was the following sentence; Railroad cars just arrived, 345 passengers."—Those words were put into numbers from the Dictionary; the numbers were set up into the Telegraphic type in about the same time ordinarily occupied in setting up the same in a printing office. They were then all passed complete by the Portrule in about half a minute, each stroke of the lever of the Portrule at one extremity marking on the Register at the other, a distance of 2 miles instantaneously. We watched the spark at one end and the mark of the pencil at the other, and they were as simultaneous as if the lever itself had struck the mark. The marks of numbers were easily legible, and by means of the Dictionary were resolved again into words.

The superiority of this Telegraph over all hitherto invented is, that day or night, in clear or foggy weather, intelligence can be sent instantaneously. The advantages to the government and the country of such a means of communication are incalculable.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, January 24, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

We this day present to our patrons and friends the first number of another volume of the Union, and at the same time a specimen of what we intend the Union shall be during the whole of the volume. In every respect it shall hereafter not be inferior to the number before you, neither do we pretend that it will be materially superior.—By the public spiritedness of the citizens of this village and vicinity, the Union is now placed on a firm basis,—its continuance is now certain, beyond the shadow of a doubt. It has sustained a season of difficulty which, it cannot reasonably be expected, will again befal it,—and if it could have been suspended, it would have been, months ago.

In order to enable us to do as we have just promised, without loss, our terms, which will be found on the first page, must be complied with. By reference to them it will be seen that payment is required near the commencement of the year, or an increased price is charged,—this practice is found necessary by nearly all publishers of the present day.

In conclusion we freely offer our thanks for the good will and support of late afforded to us,—pray for a continuance,—and promise that we will endeavor to deserve it.

☞ The editor of the Rahway Herald, in his last number, speaking of one of the productions of "E. C. S." selected from the Farmer's Cabinet, says, the author is "a lady of sterling talents of our own state." Very true, Mr. Green, but every body was aware of that before. That "E. C. S." has not many superiors as a poet, in our state, might have been added with equal truth, as her numerous poems will testify.

We tender our thanks to "E. C. S." for the extremely well written, and rather complimentary article from her pen, which adds so much to the interest of our present number. Having hereto fore frequently received communications from her prolific pen, we hope for a continuance of favors in our increased prospects of success.

The Commonwealth Bank of Boston has failed, also the Franklin and Lafayette banks. Most of the other eastern banks are, as yet, good.

It is at length officially decided that Kent, the Whig candidate, is elected Governor of Maine, by a clear majority of 169 votes.

It is generally agreed now that the Whigs are to have a National Convention to nominate their Presidential candidate. All seem willing to abide by the result.

Several of the New Haven banks have also resumed: and it is supposed that all the banks in New York, will soon.

☞ There are many very small accounts due us from individuals for the paper, advertising, &c. for the last year. As we are exceedingly in want of the money, or produce of some kind we most earnestly request it. So small an account you will not feel but the aggregate is to us of great importance—indeed we cannot do without it.

The Rahway Herald is discontinued as a semi-weekly paper, and in its place a weekly journal is issued, on a sheet of the same size as ours.—The editor says, that when specie again becomes the leading article of the day, to the total exclusion of the vile shinplaster system, he will again resume his semi-weekly Herald. It still continues neutral in politics.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

To Juvenis. In the communication of yours, which we published last week, you, "solitary and alone set a ball in motion, that others might pick it up, and give it a kick that should send it round the earth," &c. We accordingly pick it up to give it a kick agreeably to request, hoping to give it a velocity which shall send it, not through the length and breadth of the land, but into non-entity, or at least to the moon, the proper residence of such enlightening sciences. We would wish, had we the requisite talent, (not lazziness,) not only to kick it to the remotest corner of the earth, but a very little farther, that is, of, where from its leady nature, it would sink, sink, forever in the regions of interminable space.

Why, Juvenis, every body says you must yourself be superlatively lazy, not entirely on account of genius displayed, for by your own proffering to obtain a reputation for genius, when in fact you only possess the other thing, viz., laziness.

As we have given the ball a kick, we will conclude with thanks for past contributions, and a request for a continuance of the same.

"A. C. D." is received, and will probably appear in our next.

"Collis," is welcome. Being but a youth, he exhibits a good degree of mathematical talent.

"Y." will be published next week.

"Xanthus," is most respectfully declined—a little knowledge of grammar, or orthography at least, we always supposed necessary to one willing for publication.

"Jemima," is under consideration, what will be its fate we are at present unable to say.

From 'X,' or 'Sebastos,' we have not heard of late.

New Jersey Legislature.

Met at Trenton, Tuesday, Jan. 9th. On the 10th, the Governor's Message was received, and 1000 copies ordered to be printed. On Thursday, 1000 copies of the Treasurer's report was ordered to be printed—it presents the alarming fact that the state is $69,000 in debt.

Nothing important occurred until Jan. 17th, when a bill was introduced in council, to repeal the act that provides that no county shall have more than five representatives.

Petitions for small bills come in quite rapidly, also for and against a new county from Hunterdon, and on the subject of Common Schools.

On Thursday, Jan. 18th, in council, a memorial from the Elizabethtown and Somerville Rail Road Co. praying for an extension of charter was presented, and referred to the committee on corporations.

The sup. to act incorporating Mechanics' Fire Ins. Co. of Essex co. was carried by sections, and ordered engrossed for 3d reading.

Sup. to N. J. Turnpike co. also engrossed for 3d reading.

In Assembly, many memorials on the subject of Common Schools were presented. A memorial from Rahway and vicinity, against the annexation of Texas was received. Memorials and petitions for a law to prevent the desecration of Lord's day by Canal and Rail road companies, were referred to committee on corporations.

The bill to incorporate the Jefferson Machine works was passed.

The bill to repeal the act prohibiting the issue of small notes, was postponed till Tuesday next.

The bill to erect the new county of Delaware, was made the order for Wednesday next.

Friday, Jan. 19.

In Council, The act incorporating the Mechanics' Ins. Co. of Essex, was passed. The Sup. to act incorporating N. J. Turnpike company was also passed. An act to incorporate the Bound Brook Mutual Assurance Fire company was ordered to a 2d reading. The Sup. to the Elizabethtown and Somerville Rail road was ordered to a 3d reading.

In Assembly, the bill providing for the appointment of commissioners to investigate the affairs of the Patterson Bank, was read a 3d time and passed, 51 to 2.

The bill to repeal the bank charters, passed at the last session was taken up, and the further consideration postponed.

Both Houses went into Joint Meeting; many appointments were made, among which were the following:

ESSEX.

Judge.—Stephen P. Brittain.

Justices.—Abraham Baldwin, John T. Mank, Abraham V. Speer, Samuel H. Gardner, William Gould, Abraham Van Riper, Jonathan S. Williams, Stephen P. Brittain.

Commissioners.—Cyrus Baldwin, for Orange—William Gould, for Caldwell—Jonathan T. Squire, for Clinton—Dennis Coles, for Westfield—David Martin, for Springfield—Amos Morse, for Rahway.

SOMERSET.

Surrogate.—Peter Vredenburg.

Judges.—Peter J. Stryker, John Terhune, John Lowrie, Peter Voorhes, Peter Z. Elmendorf, Henry H. Wilson, Samuel S. Doty.

Justices.—John Terhune, Samuel S. Doty, Frederick Cook, Peter, Voorhes, Henry H. Wilson, Peter Z. Elmendorf, Peter J. Stryker, Samuel Reynolds.

THE NEW YORK MIRROR.

The last number of the Mirror which has come to hand, (Jan. 13,) contains a beautiful poetical article from the pen of Mrs. Sigourney, on the anniversary of the conflagration in New York. It also contains many other original articles of interest, as well as several selected pieces.

We think business must be a little reviving, at least in Plainfield. We have eight or ten new advertisements this week, a very unusual number for us, which is a pretty sure sign. The Eagle says, the prospects for business in Newark, are exceedingly good.

The Patterson Bank in this state has failed.

The Middling Interest Bank, Kilby, Fulton, and Roxbury banks, and the Middlesex Bank at East Cambridge, all in Massachusetts, are in rather bad repute,—but whether they have failed or not, we know not.

The R. Island Temperance Society, at a late meeting, resolved to petition Congress to repeal the law allowing seamen in the Navy a daily ration of ardent spirits.

By reference to our Congressional proceedings it will be seen that Mr. Calhoun's last resolution was laid on the table by a large majority. This we are very happy to see—may it there sleep the sleep of death. The resolution related to the right of the Southern States to annex territory to our republic for the purpose of strengthening their "peculiar institutions" against all those in the free states, opposed to them. As might have been expected, such a resolution was "no go," in the Senate. Mr. Calhoun said that he had no reference to Texas in his resolution, but it evidently includes the right of the South to have that country annexed to our republic, for the purposes above mentioned.

TEXAS.—By the last accounts from Texas it appears that the Mexicans have actually invaded that country. An extra of the Houston Telegraph, Dec. 25th gives an account of a battle between the parties, at San Antonio de Bexar, on the 20th, with doubtful results. It lasted 7 hours.

The Texans have purchased a brig of war, and are organizing their militia.

A Common School State Convention was held in Trenton on the 16th inst. It was large and influential, even beyond expectation. The State Gazette says that not less than 300 were present, and that it was manifest that a deep feeling on this important subject pervades the whole State.

A bill has been presented to our state legislature to permit all our banks, except the Patterson Bank to issue small notes—they all being in a safe and sound condition, with the above exception.

Highly Important from the CANADAIAN Frontier.

By express this morning we learn that during the night the Patriot army retreated from Navy Island—after having conveyed the cannon belonging to the State and the United States to Grand Island, and left them under the care of Col. Ayres of the Militia.

From the Buffalo Com. Adv. of Monday Evening Schlosser, Monday Morning, Jan. 15, 1838.

Navy Island was evacuated last night. The cannon belonging to the U. S. have been returned, and are lying at Schlosser.

It is believed that the larger portion of Van Rensselaer's men have landed on the adjacent parts of Grand Island, having previously sent across the muskets, &c. belonging to the State which were committed to the custody of Col. Ayres. The further movements of the disbanded force are left to conjecture.

Our informant passed Schlosser, form the Falls at half past 8. As he approached Tonawanda, the steamboat Barcelona was putting on steam at Whitehaven. But when he arrived opposite she had left, in what direction he could not tell.

A boat from the Canada side lay in the river opposite Navy Island, early this morning on her oars, apparently reconnoitering, for about half an hour.

Two schooners with British flags flying, were lying about one mile below Waterloo, which were observed by the cen ries below Black Rock, to have made their way up from below, early this morning. Another is lying at Waterloo. They are undoubtedly those which have been at Black Creek, just above Chippewa, for a week or more.

The object of their new position can only be surmised.

Two o'clock. P. M.

Gov. Marcy and Gen. Scott, who came up from the falls last evening, left in extra cars, accompanied by Gen. Wool, about half past 12 today, for Black Rock, and will perhaps proceed to Grand Island. Two companies of artilery, with two field pieces, also left here for that quarter.

This step, we understand, is in consequence of intelligence that an armed British schooner, (probably one of those cited to above,) is lying in our waters, down the river, with hostile intentions towards the steamboat Barcelona, or any craft that may have been employed in the aid of the Navy Islanders.

While writing the above, several discharges of cannon have been heard in that direction. A gentleman, just arrived, says that the schooner alluded to, had been firing at, he supposes, either the Barcelona, or squads of disbanding Navy Islanders.

On board the packet brig Moses, yesterday, as the crew were stowing away a cask, as it was supposed of beef, the head burst out, and it was discovered to contain the bodies of two full grown negroes, preserved in salt! The Coroner was holding an inquest on them at 2 o'clock in the Bridewell yard.—Com. Adv.

Jersey Produce.—We have been informed of a fact which we think deserves a passing remark. On Tuesday, 16th inst. that there were received at the depot of the Camden and Amboy Rail Road Company at the Sand Hills, N. J. 362 hogs, weighing 102,579 lbs—they were all weighed, paid for at 8 cents per pound and delivered at New York in 16 hours from the time the first one was received. Exclusive of the above, there has been received and paid for at the same place since Dec. 5,324,256 lbs. amounting with the above to over $35,000. In addition to the pork, there has been large quantities of poultry, flour, meal, &c. sent to the New York market thus proving that our work of internal improvement—so unjustly called monopolies—are beyond dispute of great advantage to individuals in affording them facilities for getting their produce to market which they could not otherwise have and also increasing its value.—N. Y. Gazette.

For the Plainfield Union.

Mr. Conley:

I have been thinking lately, at intervals, on a subject which I am anxious to bring before the minds of my companions. If you approve my views, and think the public good would be promoted by giving publicity to them, do so. If not —suppress them.

We have in our flourishing village, four taverns. This is just the number needed for the accommodation for every class of our citizens.—"A place of every thing, and every thing in its place." What I would be at is this, viz: I would have three public meetings, in three successive weeks. Each of these meetings should be composed exclusively of those who may be described in the call. Each class can thus at their own meeting adopt rules for their own government, and choose their own tavern. Having given this general outline of my plan, I proceed to recommend an early meeting of the real bona fide DRUNKARDS. There are several reasons why WE are entitled to the first meeting and consequently to our choice of houses.* The 1st is, we are 'bruisers' of the 'old school,' and have been 'bred at the bar.' The 2d is, that we are few in number, and have but few days left for reeling. Other reasons might be offered if necessary. At this first meeting then we wish none but the bloated and acknowledged drunkard, we want the mere wrecks of what were men, we wish those who have already gained a triumph over all sense of shame, those whose long and filthy beards, blood-shot eyes, trembling limbs, bloody noses, bloated faces, and flattering rags proclaim at once, and to all, their right to this meeting.—The advantages of such a meeting, to us my fellows, would be immense. We are not only few in number, but we are divided. Should we meet and fix on some house that we would patronize, we might buy our whiskey by the gallon and consequently much cheaper. We should also screen ourselves from the insulting looks of sober travellers—and further we would keep each other in countenance, by listening to each other's tale of family grievances, and by assuring one another that 'rum-seeking' is the only rational cure of domestic evils.

After our meeting and election, I recommend that they assemble who are in the habit of daily dram drinking. To this meeting I would invite only those who themselves know that they are in the habit of drinking distilled liquors, but do not suppose that others know it. I mean those of each of whom it is said "I am afrain his drame will ruin him." This meeting should be called not by any public announcement, but by private notes of invitation. The reason is obvious. Each to a man, is perfectly ignorant of what is rumored concerning himself; though he knows all that is said of all the others.

After this meeting let there be a meeting composed of those who spend their evenings or their Sundays, in the bar rooms, not so much because they love rum, as because they love what they would call fun. Those who can drink a glass of the 'ardent,' only to prove that they are free from the shackles of a pledge. Let each of these classes select a tavern. There will then be left one for the accommodation of travellers and for the transaction of public business. Should these suggestions be generally approved, the time and place of each meeting may be made public on some future occasion.

Teachers Wanted,

AT THE

PLAINFIELD CLASSICAL INSTITUTION

THE above Institution, situated in Plainfield, Essex Co., N. J., is offered for rent after the 1st of May next, when the lease of the present teacher, who intends relinquishing the business, will expire. There are at present in it, two flourishing English Schools, one male and the other female; also a Classical and Mathematical Department in an incipient stage. The number of pupils for the current year averages in all 140, and the patronage is increasing. The building is an excellent one, beautifully situated in a healthy and enterprizing village, within 25 miles of New York city. There are now five teachers employed in the institution. It will be rented on fair terms, to a competent and well qualified person, and it is considered as offering superior advantages to first rate Classical and English instructors. Teachers are invited to visit the place, and by personal examination to satisfy themselves of its advantages. Applications may be made personally, or by letter, post paid, to WM. W. TODD, one of the Trustees, No. 77 Front st., New York, or to ALLEN WILSON, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, Plainfield, N. J.

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from the pen, and the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no sediment to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great-er Durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to de-stroy the ink on records, particularly adapting it to Record, for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW informs the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public,

Were being struck through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove line, we are willing to recommend the following as in per opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,
G. Pastley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbooh cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hosm's and Plain's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patteons we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

HENRY V. NEVIUS, (formerly Keeper of the County House, in Somerville,) would respectfully inform his friends and the public, that he has taken the large and commodious Tavern Stand, in the pleasant and thriving village of Boundbrook, lately occupied by Mr. Charles Wyckoff—where he is prepared to entertain in a comfortable and satisfactory manner all who may favor the establishment with their patronage. The Stabling and other accommodations are extensive and convenient, and the attendants careful and obliging. From his former experience as a public innkeeper, and the well known character and celebrity of the Stand he has taken, the subscriber feels assured that no one who calls upon him will be disappointed. It will be his ambition to furnish an agreeable stopping-place to the public, and to merit a liberal favorable consideration and liberal support.

☞ The Easton, and the Somerville and New Brunswick Mail Stages pass through this place twice daily, and the Elizabethtown and Somerville once a day; making their stops at this house.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents employed expressly for this purpose for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful reviews of the engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessor in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The same liberality will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its present distinction among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstruction in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by personal sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and can-not produce any other than a salutary effect in any.

Their effects will be taken gradually according to the directions, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize arterial action—and to call all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the southeast bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adopted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Reflections and Reminiscences,

BY CAPT. MARRYAT.

I am grave to-day; it is my birth-day—the period so joyful in youth, in more advanced life so teeming with thought and serious reflections. Not that I am about to make my confessions or reveal those reminiscences of my venturous life, which, as my forehead has been pressed within my hands, have for some time been passing in diorama before me. Few, I believe, are they who can look back and not wish that they could command the time which they have lost, or recal that which has been done.

How changed are our feelings as we advance in life! Our responsibility is increased with each year. In youth we live but for ourselves—self predominates in every thing. In mature age, if we have fulfilled the conditions of our tenure, we feel that we must live for our children. Fortunately, increase of years weans us from those selfish and frivolous expenses which youth requires, and we feel little or no sacrifice to devote to our children the means which, before, we considered so important; the gratification of our pride or our ambition. Not that we have lost either our pride or our ambition, but they have become centered in other objects dearer to us than ourselves—in the race springing up, to whom we shall leave, our names and worldly possessions when our own career is closed.

Worn out with the pursuit of vanity, we pause at a certain age, and come to the conclusion that in this life we require but little else than to eat, drink, prepare for a future existence, and to die.

What a miserable being must an old bachelor be!—he vegetates, but he cannot be said to exist—he passes his life in one career of selfishness and dies. Strange, that children, and the responsibility attached to their welfare, should do more to bring a man into the right path than any denunciations, from holy writ or holy men. How many who might have been lost, have been, it may be hoped, saved, from the feeling that they must leave their children a good name, and must provide for their support and advancement in life! Yes, and how many women, after a life so frivolous, as to amount to wickedness, have from their attachment to their offspring, settled down into the redeeming position of careful, anxious, and serious-minded mothers!

Such reflections will rise upon a birth-day, and many more of chequered hopes and fears. How long will these flowers, now blossoming so fairly, be permitted to remain with us?—Will they be mowed down before another birth-day, or will they be permitted to live to pass through the ordeal of this life of temptation? How will they combat? Will they fall and disgrace their parents, or will they be a pride and blessing? Will it please Heaven to allow them to be not too much tempted, not overcome by sickness, or that they shall be severely chastised! These germs of virtue now appearing, those tares now growing up with the corn—will the fruit bring forth good or ill? will the latter be effectually rooted up by precept and example? How much have we encouraged! and how much to check! Virtues in excess are turned to vice—liberality becomes extravagance—prudence, avarice—courage, rashness—love, weakness—even religion may turn to fanaticism—and superior intellect may, in its daring, mock the power which granted it. Alas! what a responsibility is here! A man may enjoy or suffer when he lives for himself alone; but he is doubly blessed or doubly cursed when, in his second stage, he is visited through his children. What a blessing is our ignorance of the future! Fatal, indeed, to all happiness in this world would be a foreknowledge of that which is to come. We have but to do our duty and hope for the best, acknowledging, however severe may be the dispensation, that whatever is, or is to be, is right.

And now for myself: how have I passed this last year?—Humph! I don't know, but I think on the whole I am improved: at the same time, I must acknowledge that there is plenty yet to amend, to learn, and to obtain. A few more virtues would be desirable, and among others one very hard to learn, which is economy. It is to be hoped even that will come in time.

How strange, although we feel in the midst of life we are in death, that mortals should presume to reduce it to a nice calculation, and speculate upon it! I can sell my life now to an annuity-office for twenty years purchase or more, and they will share a dividend upon it. Well, if ever I do insure my life, I hope that by so doing I shall not only secure my family, but every body else in his world, I have a great many things to do before I die. There was but one man I ever heard of who could lie down and die, saying, "Now, Lord, let thy servant depart in peace." I have no warning yet, no screw loose in this complex mechanism; and yet, this very day, a chimney-pot may fall on my head, and put an end to all my calculations.

It is right that the precarious tenure of our existence should not be wholly forgotten, but certainly was never intended that it should be borne on the mind, for, if we had ever to our memory that we may die this very hour, what a check there would be to all energy, and enterprize, and industry.—Who would speculate with the anticipation of large returns upon some future day, if he did not calculate upon living to receive them? We should all stop to say Cui Bono? If it were not that our hopes support us, not only support us in all reasonable, but even unreasonable calculations, the world would be at a stand still. No, no, we have our duty to perform towards our God: but we are also enjoined to perform our duty towards our neighbor. The uncertainty of life is to be remembered as a check to our worldly passions, but not as a drag-chain to our worldly career. Chimney-pots, or no chimney-pots, I shall write on, and fight on, such being the path of life to which it hath pleased God to call me.

I never can be grave long; and why should I? I surely being pleased with this world is no unacceptable sacrifice. I have suffered much; I have found that friends can deceive; that people borrow money, and never pay it; that slander can wound; in short, that it is a very wicked world, and that all is vanity. Nevertheless, the world is quite good enough for me; for I have a most treacherous memory, and, forgetting all, I forget the injuries I have received through life; and they are, like the chimney-pots, but called to mind at certain intervals of time.

I have often wondered at the capriciousness of memory.—She must be of the feminine gender. Now, for the benefit of the craniologists, I will state the alteration which has taken place in my head within the last few years that I have taken up the pen. I once had a remarkable memory, especially for the faces of people I had seen before. If I joined a line-of-battle ship, I would, in a fortnight, be able to call every man by his name, which, as there were six or seven hundred, it is no very easy task; but having worked my imagination lately (I presume that to be the cause) my memory has completely left me. I do not mean to say that I have forgotten what was impressed upon it when I was young: but it is certainly with great difficulty that I can recollect what I have been doing, or what may have passed the day before; and it is singular that the recollection of faces, which I was remarkable for, is entirely gone, so that I am very often in a scrape from having this unlucky deficiency. If I were introduced to a lady at a party, I should not recognise her again the next day in a bonnet and shawl. The leading questions I am obliged to put to old acquaintance are very absurd. I recollect the other day a person with whom I had, at a distant time, been very intimate, seizing me by the hand, quite enjoyed to see me, shaking at it for half an hour. I had not the least recollection of him, and I was in a great puzzle; for it is no compliment to tell a man who recollects you so remarkably well that you have forgotten him. I had, of course, nothing else to do but to meet him with equal warmth, trusting to luck for finding out who he was. I asked him where he had been, when it was that we had met last, to obtain a clue, but it was in vain. And then he had married since we had parted, and wished to introduce me to his wife. I promised to call upon him, and requested his card; at least I should have his name; but he had no card about im. I took out my tablets, and requested him to put down his address. He did so, but not his name, presuming, of course, that I knew it as well as he did. As he returned me the tablets, I observed that there were many directions in them, and that I might make a mistake if he did not put his name above the address. As soon as he did so, everything connected with him, and our former intimacy, came on me like a flash of lightning. We had been very intimate; and I was very glad to see him. A knowledge of this unfortunate deficiency makes a person very careful in saluting in return for you unwittingly affront many who accuse you of being capricious and proud. Now I positively declare that I would not cut a puppy dog, or wound his feelings, if I could help it.

A very absurb circumstance occurred to me the other day. I was standing near the Admiralty, when a gentleman came towards me, holding out his hand. Although I had no recollection of having seen him before, I immediately took his hand, and shook it as warmly as it was offered, as I thought, returning his "How d'ye do" as soon as he could release his hand, he passed on behind to the gentleman for whom it was intended; and we all three burst out into a laugh, I walking off one way and they the other. As, however, we had said "How d'ye do" we also touched our hats, and said "Good-bye." Now I have two reason for mentioning these facts although, in so doing, I am obliged to talk more of Number One, than I like, and perhaps more than the reader does. My first is, that I may take this opportunity of making public my unfortunate deficiency, and then, perchance I shall be forgiven by many who may have thought me rude; and others will, in future, be aware of my unintentional omissions; and the second is, that, having the greatest respect for the science of craniology to a certain extent, I would inquire whether the calling into action one organ, which has been but little exercised before, may not have the effect of destroying, to a certain extent, one that has been previously well exercised, in short, whether raising the bump of imagination, will not cause the bump of memory to decrease. An answer addressed to me from any disciple of Gall or Spurzheim will be esteemed a favor.—New Monthly.

Prospects of Chicago.—The boats that leave Buffalo for Chicago start with from 200 to 600 passengers, which they distribute throughout the Lakes. The price of passage from Buffalo to Chicago, in the cabin and found, is $25; deck passengers half price. The price of freight on board schooners is $1 per bbl bulk; on board steamboats it is $1,50.

The amount of various kinds of Merchandise transported from the East, principally from the city of New York, may be estimated as follows for 1836: Amount sold in Chicago say $1,000,000—and destined for the interior an equal amount.

Chicago will be connected with the waters of the Mississippi by the Illinois and Michigan canal, now being constructed. The length of this canal is about 100 miles, 60 feet wider at top and 6 feet deep. Its estimated cost is $7,000,000.—This canal is a State work, and will be vigorously prosecuted. The U. S. have appropriated every alternate section of land for 5 miles, on each side of it, to aid in its construction. Its terminating points are Chicago, and Peru on the Illinois river. It will be supplied with water from Lake Michigan.

A large number of laborers are now and will continue to be wanted on the line of the Illinois and Michigan Canal. $20 per month with board is the price which has generally been paid during the past summer, a portion of the time $26 per month was paid. Mechanics wages are now about $2 00 per day at Chicago. Last year they obtained much higher prices. Labor of all kinds has always been in brisk demand.

The Steam Boat Michigan cost $60,000—her gross receipts in 1836 were $75,000. The net profit declared on her stock for that year was 50 per cent. Her receipts for one trip from Buffalo to Chicago and back were $14,500. All the well managed vessels and steamboats on the lake where no serious accident occurred are supposed to have paid an average profit of 50 per cent, on their cost in 1836.

Up to the Spring of 1833 Chicago was simply an Indian trading post, occasionally protected with a small garrison of United States troops. At that time an appropriation was made for a harbor at the mouth of the Chicago river. This gave the first impulse to the growth of the place. It then contained about three hundred inhabitants last autumn it numbered above 5030.

The commanding advantages which Chicago possesses as a commercial position arise from the fact that it stands at the head of the great chain of American Lakes, at a point from which a water communication can be made with the waters of the Mississippi with comparatively little artificial navigation.—Balt. American.

'Don't want you any longer,' said an employer to a tall clerk. 'I am very sorry for it, sir, I thought I gave you perfect satisfaction.' 'So you do, but we do not want you any longer.' 'What have I done?'

'Why, you have grown growing yet; and if you keep on, you will be as long as a May pole.'

"If I am not at home at ten o'clock," said a husband to his bigger and better half, "don't wait for me." "That I won't," said the lady, significantly, "I won't wait, but I'll come for you." He returned at ten precisely.

If you are travelling, never form any acquaintance with the inmates of a coach, car or boat; if you should, let it terminate with your journey. Never tell your business, nor be communicative about your own affairs. Never resign your seat or station to another, except to a lady; and at the inn table always help the ladies first, then yourself; and when you have your fill, assist your neighbors, if it should so be that there is any thing left. Endeavor to get through your meal as soon as possible, and never ply your neighbor with talk while he is paying his devotion to the shrine of Apicius. Always alight from the stage if you are near its door, to assist any lady disposed to alight or enter. Never sit on the back seat while there are ladies in the coach riding with their backs toward the horses; always, in such cases make a tender of your seat to such by saying—Perhaps you have a preference for the back seat? Nine to ninety nine they will refuse, with no unfavorable feelings toward you.

The Patriot Army Disbanded.—Night before last the soi distant patriot army on Navy Island, evacuated that position crossing in their boats to Grand island, surrendered their arms to the United States authorities, and dispersed their several ways. The cannon belonging to the state, was returned in a scow to Schlosser, and on the way, with all the men on board, came near going over the Falls. She had fallen far down the current, and the men had given up the case as hopeless, when a gale from the north-west sprang up and by the aid of their blankets, wafted them on shore.

The British flag was yesterday morning hoisted on Navy Island.

Gen. Van Rensselaer, of the late patriots army, Navy Island, was arrested last night by one of the U. S. Deputy Marshals, and liberated on giving bail for his appearance at the next session of the U. S. Circuit Court.

The U. S. Revenue Cutter, which lay at Erie was cut out of that place, and arrived here last night, in accordance with an order to that effect from the Secretary of the Treasury. The Lake is still open, and in fine order for navigation.

Paterson Bank.—The public are notified that the paragraph which appeared in the columns of the Journal of Commerce on Saturday morning, in relation to this institution, is totally destitute of truth in every form of its assertion.

Bill holders are earnestly requested not to sacrifice them, as the Bank will pay every dollar of their circulation Jan. 23d, 1838.

The Lumberman's bank at Warren, Pa. has stopped.

The New York Common Council have appropriated $2000 for a new City Hall bell.

Mr. Editor:

Some 2 or 3 weeks since, I was amusing myself by looking over a lot of old papers, which had long lain neglected, when my eye lit upon the following, which, if you think it will be amusing to your readers, you are at liberty to present to them. It seems to be connected with certain proposals to issue a paper somewhere down east, by one Jonathan Corkscrew. Whether the paper was ever published, I cannot learn.

Yours, &c. A. C. D.

Rahway, Jan. 1838.

"It is just the thing I want," said I, "nothing could suit me better—

"What's that you want?" inquired my spouse in a tone which was far from her sweetest.

"The paper, my dear," I rejoined, "I was thinking I could do something with a paper."

"What paper?" again inquired my wife, "you know Joel took the paper home this morning, and you don't want to borrow another before next week, I'm sure."

"No, no! woman, you don't understand me, I think I had better turn editor and publish a paper myself."

Didst thou ever gentle reader see the tell tale of thy village. That female biped with small inquisitive grey eyes, that peep into all privacies, and know all business but her own,—the handle of whose face is sharp and thin and long, turned up slightly at the point, and which seems to subserve no earthly or unearthly use, but to hold large quantities of snuff, and point out the road to mischief—whose lips seem half worn out with constant gabbling about matters which concern her not, and who knows of all that was, or is, or is to be, among ye, especially if it be evil,—who spineth threads of scandal over night, and weaveth them in the morning, and goeth from house to house in the afternoon to deal it out to all who are not thereby traduced? I say, gentle reader, hast thou ever seen such an one? if thou hast, perchance thou mayest fancy, although I fear but dimly, how my loving spouse did of a sudden stop, half way between the cupboard and the table, how she let fall the dish-cloth from her hand, and how with eyes rolled up she stood a moment motionless and mute. Soon, her tongue was loosened.—I got my crutches and hobbled out as fast as my one leg could carry me.

But hark thee, reader, I charge thee think no ill of Mrs. Corkscrew. She is a prudent housewife, and a notable woman, and when she has had time to think is as reasonable, I dare say, as any woman,—and though her tongue may be at times too limber or too long, I would not thou shouldst think worse of her than I have said.

When the conversation here alluded to occurred, she was washing the breakfast dishes, and when I came in to dinner, she was prepared to hear reason, and actually assisted me in the preparation of the following exposition of the principles by which I shall be guided as the editor of your paper.

* * * * *

But, gentle readers, your editor must be supported, consider, I beseech you, that editors as well as your dear selves, must be fed and clothed. If an other motive were required to influence your resolutions apart from the grandeur and sublimity of the object which we have in view, to wit, the renovation of the nation, in morals, literature and laws, you have that motive in the fact that your humble servant is now an old man, lame and poor. I batted in my country's cause, and when the fight was won, I was found minus one leg and two fingers. Since then, I've limped through the world, as you see me now, and have, I trust, done good,—I am now preparing to do more, if ye will not assist me, ye have hearts of steel, and pity hath no place within your souls. Besides all this remember that I am not alone in the world, would that I were! I have my wife and ten children to clothe and feed; but I am not disheartened, I know we shall be sustained, and our paper will flourish—and therefore, without any further circumlocution I subscribe myself,

Your most obedient and very humble servant,
Jonathan Corkscrew

Reply,—To "FLORIO."

The muse is but a fickle wight!
Who, (where she fancies to alight,)
Will never tarry long:
To me but "few and far between,
Like Angel's visits," her's have been,
As truthes my song.

But one thing, friend, I long since knew,
That gratitude has power to woo
What prayer has been denied!
Add so, when she deigns to bless,
Thanks for small favors I express,
By which, there's more implied:

And thus, she kindly takes the hint,
Well pleased to see the thoughts in print,
By her suggestion penned;
For if from sight, the same are hid,
Or cast in haste the flames amid,
Her pride it doth offend!

But when that gratitude is shown
Which makes her visits public known,
She's sure to call again;
For no coquette's more fond of praise,
Than she to send abroad her lays
Far, over hill and plain!

Now, if 'tis true, the muse but slights
When "FLORIO's" lyre her aid invites,
Whence came that plaintive strain?
Which, while of her neglect it sings,
Dcareth her music on its wings—
Her graces in its train?

Jan. 24th. Z. C. S.

The following is an Address, delivered before the Plainfield Debating Society, Feb. 18th, 1833. It was shown us by the author, who kindly consented to its publication.

The Early Formation of Good Habits.

Next to our nature, Habit seems designed
To mould the man, and sway his active mind,
Thus power misused, our moral strength o'erthrows—
Exerted right, great evils, 'twill oppose.

Impressions early made control for years
The life of him on whom the stamp appears;
The shallow channel of the petty stream,
By lengthened wearing may the deepest seem.
Small evils slighted, by neglect grow strong,
And then amendments path they thickly throng.
Whoever early treads in virtue's path,
With added years, great moral strength he hath;
The work neglected, time but renders hard,
And rolling years our happiness retard.
Good habits timely formed, will copious yield
The golden harvest of a well-tilled field.
This mighty cause of good or evil days,
A deep consideration well repays.

Experience proves this great important truth,
That vicious habits are the bane of youth.

Behold the man whose early life is stained
By deeds of sin—his moral power enchained—
Whose reason and whose conscience urge in vain
From vicious paths his footsteps to restrain,
Behold him going like a willing slave
To years of woe, or to an early grave;
Regarding not the sacrifice of health,
Of honor, reputation, friends or wealth;
Enamored by pleasure or debased in sin,
His greatest good he never strives to win.
His days are spent in idleness or crime
As if no end would ever be to time.
Perhaps at length he's startled, and would try,
From ruin's yawning gulf at once to fly—
'Tis then he finds the strength of habits grown,
And reaps the bitter fruit of what he's sown;
'Tis then he fully sees his wretched lot,
And feels the weight which he has decks begot.
Still, happy he, if power enough remains,
To break the thraldom of his habits' chains.
Still may he hope, if firmly he resolves,
To shun the ruin that his course involves;
But 'tis not often thus; for deep despair
May to his bosom come and settle there—
Reform may seem a hopeless task, and then
His thoughts will urge him to his course again.
Advice neglected, friendly counsel spurned
Will only feed the grief that he had earned,
His time misspent, his talents thrown away,
Will then weigh upon his mind with prey;
Some feeble efforts at reform he'll make,
Then yielding up, the hopeless task forsake,
And now he may with madness run his race,
Till death terrific stares him in the face.

Now view the youth, whose habits early formed,
With love of virtue have his bosom warmed,
Who lends a willing ear to wisdom's voice,
And makes at once a good and happy choice,
Who heeds the hints of conscience, and dis lays Reflection's work upon his early days;
He presses onward in his life's career,
Well armed for many ills that meet us here,
He gains esteem, excites the praise of all,
And admiration from his foes will call.
His time is well improved—his duty done—
Example bright he gives for every one.
If fortune smiles, 'tis sunshine on the gold,
And brighter still his virtues we behold;
If adverse tones be his, 'tis then we see,
The moral weight of his integrity.
If times of strong temptation do assail,
His moral habits help him to prevail.
The waves of life, his bark cannot o'erwhelm,
Is sides secure for virtue's at the helm;
From passion's rocks, and pleasure's vortex deep,
His chosen pilot will his vessel keep.
His years of manhood find him well prepared
To meet the ills that by the world are shared,
In life's decline he looks with pleasure back,
On perseverance in good habit's track.
The course of such an one we love to scan,
And name that one a good and useful man.

When such the profits, and such the prize
How strange that many will the means despise,
How strange they think not what they risk or lose,
When evil ways instead of good they choose.
'Tis want of thought that often ruins youth—
'Tis folly's din that drowns the voice of truth.

Their friends advise, and warnings give in vain—
The force of habit will prevail again.
The habit of reflection serves to keep
The mind of youth from a dread moral sleep—
If idlet-like, they thoughtless dash along,
Can any wonder if they do go wrong?
Experience teaches, but they listen not,
If heard by chance, how soon she is forgot!

With friendly voice unto the young I'd say,
Forsake the useless pleasures of the day.
Respect yourselves, and useful strive to be—
From evil habits try your best to flee.
Read and reflect, your elders' counsel take,
And suffer nought your good resolves to shake,
Waste not your time—industrious always be,
With greatest care preserve integrity,
Dissimulation shun, and without fear
In speech and actions show yourselves sincere,
With steady view direct your youthful eyes
To high examples of the good and wise.

Mr. Cushing:

Sir:—It was very kind in you no doubt to give my 'ball a kick' but I would thank you to pull off your boots before you repeat the operation, or else to confine your kicks to the ball itself for the future, and let me escape. I did not ask you to give it such a velocity as would send it to the moon. Although I have the strongest desire to do all in my power to benefit mankind yet I can by no means extend my charities to those non descript beings first made known to us by Sir Wm. Herschell, nor can reason or scripture be given to show that I ought. We have nothing to do with other planets. This earth is the field of our labors. Men and women are the objects towards which our benevolence should flow. It is therefore stretching our philanthropy too far, Mr. Editor, to desire that my science should be sent to 'enlighten' the Lunarians. But perhaps you were only jesting. And, indeed, judging from the context, there is much reason to lieve that you only meant to insinuate that the science itself, was unworthy of attention. If this be so sir, allow me to tell you in the politest manner possible, that you have done me great injustice. You have endeavored to weaken the faith of any disciples I may have already gained, by bare assertion and ridicule. Let an intelligent community decide between us. Have you proved the falsity of my first principles? Have you detected any fallacy in my reasoning? Have you showed any error in my conclusions? No, for you could not, and was therefore driven to the dernier resort of all foiled disputants, ridicule. But, sir, I am not to be forced from my ground with such weapons. I have learned to regard opposition and ridicule as obstacles which every discoverer must necessarily encounter. Galileo was imprisoned and persecuted. Columbus died neglected and broken-hearted, and the inventor of the art of printing was considered an agent of the devil. Can I then hope to escape? No, indeed, I am not so unreasonable. Let me advise you then if you would overthrow my system, to use argument. If it will not bear this test, it ought to fall.

But there are others interested in this discussion. As I said in my former communication, the reasoning which establishes my science is precisely the same, as that which supports Physiognomy, Phrenology, animal Magnetism, &c. The consequence is, that if one falls, all must fall.—Yes, my brethren, we must sink or swim together. Let us then repel with becoming zeal, any aspersions that may be cast upon the system of either,

But, Mr. Editor, there were some personal allusions in the paragraph that has elicited these remarks, which, duty to myself obliges me to notice. You roundly assert (and intimate that others do the same,) that I am endeavoring to obtain a reputation for genius, when in fact I am only lazy. Now do you not observe the absurdity of your language? You first assume that I am lazy, (oh, that it were true!) and in the same breath deny its consequence—genius. But your premises are unsound; I am not lazy. Alas! "I cannot lay that flattering unction to my soul."—Take a few facts. I am generally out of bed before nine. I am not too late for breakfast more than two or three times in a week. I never allow more than half of my time to be unoccupied. In short, I am so busy, that I seldom, if ever can be punctual in keeping an engagement. If these things are not proofs of industry, I know not what are.

No. VIII.

The darkest day ever known in the U. States was May 19th, 1780—the fowls went to roost, and people had to light candles to work by.

The first book that had the publisher's name in, was printed by Dr. Faust, 1457.

The crusades were expeditions undertaken for the recovery of the holy land out of the hands of the Saracens. They derive their name from the French word 'croix,' a cross, which the adventurers wore as an ensign of their cause. They began under Peter the Hermit, and continued 200 years. Six millions of people engaged in these holy wars, two millions of which perished.

The pulse in the time of Hippocrates beat 60 times in a minute; from which originates our smallest portion of time, denominated a second. As the human species refine, probably the pulse quickens, and so completely are we machines, that like a clock, the faster we go the sooner we run down.

Cape Horn is situated on Hermit's Island, in the Southern part of South America: it was named from Hoorn, a town in Holland, the birth place of Scouter, a Dutch navigator who first discovered it.

The ten figures are of Arabic origin; they are called digits from the Latin word "digitus," a finger. Digit also means 1-4th of an inch, and the sun and moon are divided into twelve equal parts called digits.

Bonaparte invaded Russia with an army of near half a million of men, exclusive of the auxiliary armies of Austria and Prussia. He made the following disposition of them: slain in battle, 126,000—died from fatigue, hunger and cold, 132,000; taken prisoners, 193,000; returned to France, 50,000.

"One murder makes a villain, millions a hero."

IMPORTANT FROM MICHIGAN.

The following letter, from a source of the first respectability at Detroit, conveys the particulars of important events which have just transpired in that quarter, in reference to the revolt in Canada.

DETROIT, Jan. 7, 1838.

Our city for the last three days has been in great confusion, in consequence of the extensive plan of invading Canada having been discovered.

Nothing of the movement w s known save that meetings had been held and resolutions passed, but it was thought the matter would stop there.

It has turned out d fferently, for on Thursday night all the state arms in our city arsenal were secretly taken away; on the same day 400 stand were openly sc zed at Monroe, and on the succeeding night another hall was robbed of all the arms and fixed ammunition which had been deposited there for safe keeping.

The next morning a vessel with about 800 stand and about 100 men departed from our wharf for Bois Blanc—a British island distant 19 miles hence, and opposite Malden, at the junction of the River Detroit with Lake Erie. Attempts were also to be made upon our city powder magazine at Dearborn, which were frustrated by a guard being despatched from the city in time.

Besides these daring operations, supplies have been purchased and sent down to Bois Blanc—subscription papers circulated, and now containing 1,000 names—commissions from Navy Island tendered and accepted—enrollments of about 700 men made in the different counties on the river—regular drill held—and, to cap the climax, a—Sutherland, from New York, is hourly expected with a force from Cleaveland, to arrive at Gibraltar, an island midway between—the point of rendezvous—and to take command of all the forces.

As Bois Blanc overlooks Malden, and has upon it the remains of an old breast work, the patriots design making it a depot, and intend, after leaving thereon a guard, to attack Malden, proceed to Sandwich and London, and effect a junction with Mackenzie, at Hamilton Upper Canada.

From the number of men engaged, the amount of money expended, and the concert of action shown in this enterprise, we conclude that some able head is at work.

Gov. Mason issued his proclamation three or four days ago, but it was disregarded. Yesterday the U. S. district attorney despatched a steamboat with the marshall and posse after the schooner; but they were defied and threatened with the contents of an eighteen pounder if they approached nearer than hailing distance.

Our citizens held a public meeting and passed resolutions expressing their disapprobation of the patriots' measures, and organised a guard of 100 men for the protection of the town.

Monday Morning, Jan. 8.—Sutherland has arrived at Gibralter, from Cleaveland, with 70 men, and attack upon Bois Blanc, of which the British are said to be in possession, is contemplated this day.

Later.

Capt. Clark left Michigan, on the 11th, and published the following important intelligence in the Baltimore papers:

According to Capt. Clark's statement the schr. left Monroe on the 7th with the rebel troops from Cleaveland and Detroit, under Col. Dodge, and was joined at Gibralter on the 8th by Gen. Sutherland with several large boats, scows, &c. having 250 stand of arms, 3 cannon, provisions, &c. The expedition designed to take Bois Blanc a British island opposite Malden, and thence proceed to Malden, Sandwich and London.

While on the way to the island, the schr. parted with its fleet and run along within gun-shot of the loyalists. A skirmish ensued in which it is said 60 loyalists were killed. On the evening of the 9th the schr. made another attempt to reconnoitre, when a sudden squall grounded her. The loyalists attacked her, and after losing 14 men, she surrendered.—Cols. Dodge and Sutherland both wounded.

Gov. Mason promptly demanded the Michigan arms which had been taken from Detroit, and they were surrendered, and the rebels disbanded. Notwithstanding these reverses, it is said the people still showed a disposition to carry on the war against Canada.

From the Detroit Free Press of Jan 8.

We learn that on the requisition of the U. S. district attorney for this district, two hundred men have been drafted in this city by order of the Governor, for the purpose of aiding the federal authorities in executing the laws of the United States, passed to preserve peace and neutrality with foreign nations.

There is a rumor that the patriots, on Lake Simeon, have risen in some force, seized the arsenal of the N. West Fur Co. and are marching towards Toronto.

The greater part of Gen. Burt's brigade of Infantry, and Gen. Randall's brigade of Artillery, have volunteered their services to Gen. Scott, for 3 months, and have been accepted.

One hundred and ten U. S. soldiers arrived at Buffalo on Wednesday evening.

From the Buffalo Daily Star of the 20th.

The cannon of the State have been embezzled, and we do not hesitate to say under circumstances altogether unjustifiable.

The facts are briefly these:—After the cannon had been restored, they were left in charge of Col. Ranson, at Tonawanda, and were yesterday obtained from him under the following circumstances. An order of which the following is a copy was presented to Col. Ranson:

"Buffalo Head Quarters, Jan. 18, 1838.

"Col. H B. Ranson, Command-Chief at Tonawanda.

"Please send on those pieces of cannon, which are stopt at your place. Let the team come on with them. Yours in haste, W. Scott Commander in-cheif on the frontier of Niagara."

The unmilitary style of the order created doubt of its genuineness, but "a person present," declared under oath that it was Gen. Scott's writing, and Col. R. after some hesitancy, let the cannon go!

The forged letter was received through the post office, and it is believed to have been written by a citizen of Buffalo who writes his name W. Scott. A number of citizens are implicated and an investigation was going on.

The Steamboat United States was about to leave Buffalo on Saturday, with a part of the Navy Island force, for Detroit, but a motion from Gen. Scott that he should fire upon the boat if it did reminded the heroes that discretion is the better part of valor.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, Jan. 19.

In the Senate, the day was devoted to private business.

In the House.—The morning hour was occupied with the reception of memorials and petitions on abolition, or relating to Texas.

The Senate Bill for the better preservation of the neutral relations of the United States, was read and referred to the committee on Foreign Affairs.

Bills Reported.—By Mr. Cambreleng, the bill to repeal the proviso to the 10th and 12th section of the Tariff Act of 1832.

Mr. Cambreleng explained that the proviso had had the effect to exclude all importations of brass, and of the articles enumerated in the proviso, and was so intended probably by the person who drew that part of the bill. He moved to postpone the further consideration till the day week. Agreed to.

At one o'clock the House resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee on the Mississippi Election.

Monday, Jan. 22d.

In the Senate, John Black resigned his seat.

A memorial from the Governor of Vt. for extension of the franking privilege to the Governors, was referred. Numerous petitions against Slavery and Texas were from various quarters. The rem nder of the session was consumed with Mr. Grundy's steam boat bill.

In the House, the first subject in order was a memorial from John Ross and other Cherokee Indians, protesting against the execution of a treaty said to ha e been fraudulently formed with certain unauthorised individuals of the Cherokee nation, and praying Congress to prevent the Executive from carrying it into effect. He states that only 80 out of 80,000 Cherokees were parties to it! Mr. Everett speaks in favor of the memorial until superseded by the orders, being the Mississippi election. Mr. Foster kept the floor till the adjournment.

Tuesday, Jan. 23d.

After the reception of sundry petitions and memorials, the senate proceeded to the consideration of Mr. Grundy's bill for preventing accidents from the explosion of steamboat boilers.

In the House, Mr. Cambreleng reported a partial appropriation for the suppression of Indian hostilities.

A communication was presented from the Secretary of War, representing the necessity of an immediate appropriation.

A report was also presented from the Acting Quartermaster General, declaring that the administration of this service was embarrassed for want of funds, and that money was required for the prosecution of the war against the Seminoles; and also for the protection of the Northern frontier.

Mr. Cambreleng stated that this bill proposed an appropriation of $2,800,000, upon which he supposed there would be much debate. He wished that the bill making the appropriation of a million should be at at once considered; and he therefore moved that it be referred to the committee of the whole, and that the House now resolve itself into committee.

The rules were suspended, and the house went into committee of the whole.

Wednesday, Jan. 24th.

The chair laid on the table of the Senate several estimates of the expenses of the several departments. Also resolutions from Georgetown against the suppression of small bank notes—against the discussion of slavery, and for the re-charter of their Bank. The Slavery subject was laid on the table, and the others were referred.

Mr. Grundy's bill to protect steamboat passengers was passed: as was that to test the usefulness of steam engines. Mr. Benton's bill to increase the army, after discussion, was ordered to a 3d reading.

The appropriation bill for the Seminole war occupied most of the time of the House, the question being to reduce the sum from a million to half a million. Mr. Bodle complained earnestly of the manner in which the public treasury was squandered. The main artery of the Treasury had been bleeding for a long time, and it only required a few gallons more to complete its exhaustion.

Mr. Underwood followed on the same side, and Messrs. Glascock, Bynum, and Cambreleng, in reply. The motion to reduce was lost, and the bill $625,500 for the protection of the Northern frontier.

The Spy in Washington writes that Mr. Calhoun is expected to lead in the discussion of the sub.treasury bill on Tuesday next, and that his friends confidently expect its success.

Thursday, Jan. 25.

In Senate. Petitions from Ohio, on Texas and abolition were received. The bill to increase the military establishment of the United States, was read a third time and passed.

In the House, the Mississippi election case was still under debate.

New Jersey Legislature

Monday, Jan. 22d.

In Assembly, a great number of petitions were presented, among them two in relation to common schools, and one for a law to prevent horse-racing.

Tuesday, Jan. 23d.

In Council. The bill to repeal the act that provides that no county shall have no more than five representatives, was taken up, read and postponed.

In Assembly. Mr. A. S. Pennington from the Com. on Corporations reported the bill from Council to authorise the Morris and Essex Rail. Road to borrow money, and for other purposes. Ordered 2d reading. Also the further sup. to the Mechanic's Insurance Co. of Essex. Ordered 2d. reading. The bill to authorize the banks to issue small notes was taken up. The first section being under consideration, Mr. Cassedy moved to insert at the close of the section a sentence providing that all the banks within the state shall at all times during regular business hours, redeem all such notes in specie on demand at their banking houses. Messrs. Pennington, Condict and Molleson opposed the amendment, and it was decided in the negative. Mr. Flummerfelt moved to strike out the word repealed, and insert "suspended until the next sitting of the Legislature, or until a majority of the banks in the cities of New York and Philadelphia resume specie payments, at which time this act shall become null and void and the said supplements suspended by this act shall again be in as full force as if this act had not passed." A debate of considerable length ensued, after which the question was taken and Mr. Flummerfelts amendment disagreed to, Ayes 16—nays 32. So the amendment was rejected. A further amendment was proposed by Mr. Cassedy and rejected by a similar vote. The bill was then ordered to a third reading. The bill to repeal the charters of certain banks incorporated last year was called up. An amendment to except the Hamburg bank was moved by Mr. Hall of Sussex, which gave rise to a debate of some length, after which the bill was postponed.

Wednesday, Jan. 24th.

In Council.—A message from assembly informed council that the assembly had passed the bill authorising the issue of small bills. Ordered to 2d reading. Sup. to Elizabeth and Somerville rail road was duly passed.

In Assembly—A remonstrance was presented from Clinton against any change in the boundary line. A bill was presented to reduce the capital of the State Bank at Camden. The bill to authorize the banks of this state to issue small bills was taken up, and after some objections had been made to including the Sussex Bank, on account of its not having answered the questions required by the act of the first session, the bill was passed by Ayes 30, Nays 18. The bill to set off a part of the township of Clinton and reannex it to Orange was read a third time and passed, ayes 28 nays 19.

Thursday, Jan. 25th.

In Council.—The bill to incorporate Bound-brook Assurance Co. was ordered to 3d reading.

The bill in relation to small notes was taken up and considered till council adourned.

In Assembly, two petitions from Rahway, one in relation to the license system, and one in relation to common schools were received. Several other petitions were received on the subject of the license law.

The unfinished business of yesterday was taken up, viz. to erect the new county of Mercer.

Aaron S. Pennington was appointed speaker pro tem.

The Boston Daily Advertiser announces that the associated banks of that city have commenced a system of action, in earnest, with a view to a speedy resumption of specie payments as can be effected.

The associated banks of Boston, after an examination into the affairs of each other by a committee, have made arrangements to secure the redemption of all the bills of each one in circulation. The N. Y. Gazette says this arrangement will dispel all apprehension in regard to certain banks in Boston, which have been the subject of conversation and distrust for the past week.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, January 31, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Our correspondents have taken so much of our room this week, that we have not opportunity of saying much ourselves, but there is not need. We have given all the important intelligence from the frontier, Congress and Legislature, and that comprises most that is stirring now-a-days.

The editor of the Newark Eagle, the only democratic print in this county, has discontinued for the present the publication of his semi-weekly paper, and now issues only a weekly journal.

Later from the Legislature.—On the 26th, in Council, the bill from the Assembly, in relation to small notes, was taken up, amended, and ordered to a third reading. The bill to incorporate the Round Brook Mutual Assurance Association was passed.

In Assembly, the bill to erect the new county of Mercer, was ordered to be engrossed, 26 to 13.

An article in another part of this paper, will be found to contain a list of most if not all of the uncurrent Eastern money now in circulation.—Take good heed to it. We have to add, that counterfeit $2 notes on the Mechanics' bank, Providence, have just made their appearance.

The New York American makes the following very just remarks on the subject of resuming specie payments:

As matters now stand, exchange on England having fallen below par, without—in the face of the increased price of our cotton in Europe, and the small orders for imports—the possibility of again raising above par, there seems to us no ground on which the naming a period for resumption can, even as a matter of expediency—of honesty we say nothing—be longer postponed. It is we suppose from a conviction of this sort, that our city banks have determined to send a committee to Philadelphia, to urge the concurrence of that city in fixing a day. That committee it is said will take their departure to-morrow. We are constrained however, by the tone of the Philadelphia papers, to express the apprehension, that the mission will be a fruitless one. It is nevertheless, well to make every effort to induce co-operation in that and other quarters, and having done so—whether with failure or success New York must act at any rate.

The Journal of Commerce, in an article on the same subject, says:

The present state of public opinion begins to be inconvenient to Mr. Biddle—and his newspapers are making a grand effort to turn the current. We hope our own Banks, and our commonwealth will look to their own dignity in such an emergency. The banks of Pennsylvania, in general, are in a good condition—and could resume specie payments now. We have no doubt they would be glad to do so, but for the Bank of the United States, which resists every movement in that direction.

Later From the Michigan Frontier.

Sutherland, having visited Detroit, after the loss of the patriot schooner, was arrested and acquitted by Judge Wilkins of the U. S. District Court. He plead his own cause, and when the decision was made known he was enthusiastically cheered by the multitude!!

A bill passed the popular branch of the Legislature of Michigan making provision for 2000 men to protect the frontier.

A letter in yesterday's Intelligencer says that there has been a serious dissension among the rebel Islanders, whose force is from 400 to 1000. After the capture of the schooner at Malden, the Patriots retreated to Sugar Island, whence they proceeded to Brownstown, in the vicinity of Gibralter where they are now encamped.

The Cleveland Herald of the 19th, says—"By the Detroit Advertiser of the 12th, we learn that on the 11th. Gov. Mason went down the river to remonstrate with the volunteers on one of the Islands. The Advertiser of the 13th, says—the Governor's expedition to Gibralter resulted, as we understand, in the dispersion of the Patriot forces. That paper has no other news from the seat of war."

The famous Gen. Sutherland, who led the forlorn hope is a journeyman printer from Ohio.

An amendment making the entire property of the stock-holders of Banks liable for debts of those institutions, has been adopted by the Ohio Assembly, by a vote of 41 to 28, as an appendage to Mr. Kelly's Corporation Bill. Six Whigs are among the Ayes.

It is stated in the Boston Medicial and Surgical Journal, that Greece, with a million and a half of souls, has only eighty five licensed practitioners of physic: the town of Chicago, on lake Champlain, with eight thousand inhabitants has forty physicians.

Hon. Henry Clay has been a member of Congress for thirty-one years.

The editor of the Eastern Democrat puts a dozen saucy questions to us, and concludes with calling us "a brandy barrel." If he has that opinion of us, no wonder he is so fond of pumping us. —Prentice.

From the Journal of Commerce.

Washington, Jan. 25th.

It is now understood that the Sub-Treasury bill reported by Mr. Wright, cannot pass the House, and that, in case Mr. Grundy should be instructed, it will not pass the Senate, a national bank being out of the question. Mr. Rives project will, in this case, be entitled to the favorable consideration of the Whigs, as well as of those of the friends of the administration, who, do not desire to keep things as they are.

Mr. Rives' bill, as it is now proposed to be offered, will obviate many of the objections urged, heretofore, against a National Bank, and against a system of local deposite Banks. The details of the bill have been published. But to state them more particularly than I did on a former letter.

1. The number of local deposite banks to be limited to twenty-five.

2. These banks to be selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the assent of the Senate; and, in case the Senate be not in session, when the selection is made, the selection to be submitted to them for approval, immediately upon the commencement of the session.

3. These Banks to keep the public money upon the conditions named in the bill.

4. The selected banks to receive in payment of all government dues such notes of all specie paying banks, as they may be willing to place to the credit of the Treasury as cash.

5. The Secretary of the Treasury to exert his influence to secure an arrangement among the selected banks, by which each of said banks shall take the notes of the others, in payment of all dues to the government.

6. The selected banks to pay all Treasury warrants and drafts, in cash.

7. The selected banks to receive payment for Patents, and for Public Lands, and to give certificates for the same, which certificates shall be receivable at the Patent Office and at the Land Offices.

There are many other provisions, but these, as I understand are the leading ones.

No[illegible] ...is entertained by the friends of the bill th[illegible] ...vision given above as the 5th. will be [illegible] ...ed into effect; and that the system will [illegible] ...uniform and as sound a currency, and [illegible] ...cilities for exchanges, as the late United [illegible] Bank afforded.

Alton Riot.—The Grand Jury of Alton have found bills of indictment against a number of individuals concerned in the affair of the 7th of November, including those engaged in the attack as well as defence of the building. The trial of Roek, one of the assailants, came on before the Municipal Court on the 3d inst. The jury returned a special verdict that the defendant in their opinion, was guilty of the various charges laid in the indictment, but that they return him not guilty on a question of jurisdiction.—Baltimore Rep.

TO JUVENIS.

That's right Juvenis! keep the ball rolling—you will get it so large ere long that it can be seen without glasses. It's the best joke we have seen this many a day, that 'perhaps we were only jesting.' You were never more out of the way. We, in good earnest wished to benefit mankind, not the Lunarians, in sending to them a sciench, so plausible, and apparently true but really pernicious, which has too many votaries already, and whi h we knew, if permitted by us to go abroad would be of incalculable injury to our fellow men.

Did you suppose, Juvenis, that we should sit still in our editorial chair and permit you so to bamboozle the people, within reach of our shot, with your abominable science, falsely so called? Indeed, you could not. But, a few words in respect to your reasoning, which you say was not touched; Your arguments are examples, and not very appropriate either. Horace was a wine-bibber, and possessed poetical genius,—what does that prove? Patrick Henry was so very industrious that he could not even find time to bait his hook, while fishing! and you call him lazy!!! So of all your examples,—your perverse science having turned your own brain. We will now, having overthrown all your arguments, bring a few arguments against your science, of the same kind. We will say nothing of Franklin, or Sir Isaac Newton, for they are always adduced by laborious plodders after fame, as very proper examples for themselves. We will say nothing either of Bonaparti, the greatest man that ever was, next to Gen. Jackson and Nicholas Biddle, all of whom we might bring forward in mighty array against your fallacious theory. But we will adduce one illustrious example, which you cannot but acknowledge will send your invention beyond the reach of eye or ear—we refer to no less a personage than Juvenis himself. Out of your own mouth we will condemn you. That you are industrious, we have your own word, well substantiated by facts,—and that you have genius, all will acknowledge who read your productions. We have besides your own word for this also. You place your name by the side of Galileo, Columbus and Faust; and reckon yourself to have benefitted mankind, as much as the inventors of Physiognomy, Phrenology, Nosology, Animal Magnetism, &c. &c. &c. &c. If these are not proofs of genius, we know not what are. We say, then, you being yourself a person not lazy, and undoubtedly a man of genius, your science is proved a non-entity.

Teachers Wanted,

AT THE

PLAINFIELD CLASSICAL INSTITUTION

THE above Institution, situated in Plainfield, Essex Co., N. J., is offered for rent after the 1st of May next, when the lease of the present teacher, who intends relinquishing the business, will expire. There are at present in it, two flourishing English Schools, one male and the other female; also a Classical and Mathematical Department in an incipient stage. The number of pupils for the current year averages in all 140, and the patronage is increasing. The building is an excellent one, beautifully situated in a healthy and enterprizing village, within 25 miles of New York city. There are now five teachers employed in the institution, it will be rented on fair terms, to a competent and well qualified person, and it is considered as offering superior advantages to first rate Classical and English instructors. Teachers are invited to visit the place, and by personal examination to satisfy themselves of its advantages. Applications may be made personally, or by letter, post paid, to WM. W. TODD, one of the Trustees, No. 77 Front st., New York, or to ALLEN WILSON, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, Plainfield, N. J.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 24 of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—sorry and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign gentrics, by a correspondent employed expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exce its predecess ors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian, and Spanish, and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve give it variety, and render it one of the most piquan fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant litera ture and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there is few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and all diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual suffering from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, regulate the discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matte they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalise arterial action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being made through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterboch cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size.

Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead,

Rahway, Nov. 1st. 41

Lumber.

THE subscriber has just received from New-York, a handsome assortment of Mahogany, viz:

Boards of various sizes; Plank, suitable for railing bannisters, Newell posts; Coffin Stuff; Spanish Cedar: Crotch-Veneers; shaded do; Cherry Table Legs mahogany do; French bedstead posts.

All orders will be executed to give satisfaction. Also on hand, and intends to keep, a general assortment of Lumber, such as Boards: Plank; Timber; clear 2 inch Plank; 1¼ do; 1½ do; wide do; clear Boards, 5, 8 do; do Boards; White Pine Plank; Yellow Pine Plank; Clap Boards; shingling Lath; ceiling Lath; Cedar Posts; Cedar Pailing; Whitewood Boards; Ash Plank, of various thicknesses.

Shingles of various kinds, all of which is offered on reasonable terms, at the Yard opposite the Mansion House. NEHEMIAH FINCH.

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, and its drying so quickly, rendering its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment: and lastly, its great-er durability, and its ability to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

MISCELLANEOUS.

If you would train up moral children, you must make yourselves moral. and if you become moral, yourselves, I take it your city will be moral. You complain that your city is immoral—do you? Pray, who have rendered your city immoral, and who keeps it in moral? Is it not your own work? Do not parents govern the city? Do not parents create, countenance and sustain every nuisance, and every species of noxious dissipation and degrading amusement which abound in our midst? What do you mean by complaining, and lamenting, and whining, and swearing, and fretting, and prenching, and praying, and denouncing? Why do you not arise, in all the majesty of your resistless and united strength, and resolve forthwith to purify your own premises; and to put down every stalking monster of iniquity and abomination which is rioting upon the heart's blood of your unprotected offspring? Will you get drunk, and expect your children to be sober? Will you profane the name of your Maker, and expect your children to hallow it? Will you desecrate the christian Sabbath, and expect your children to keep it holy? Will you frequent the theatre, the race-course, or the gaming table, and expect your children to shun and to abhor them?

Ah, no—you will reply—we perpetrate none of these enormities ourselves. We set a very good example, and we do not withhold seasonable counsel and reproof and admonition. But what can we do? The whole world is against us. Our city is full of grog-shops and groceries and other villainous establishments duly licensed and authorized by law to sell whiskey and to create drunkards, and to ruin our children and servants —and all this to support government, and to enable a few honest fellows to get a comfortable living. And this is your plea—is it? It shall not avail you. If your rulers misgovern you or abuse your confidence, turn them out, and elect better men. I defy any mortal to offer the semblance of a reason for the existence of a single grog-shop in all our land; or for permitting any man to retail inebriating liquors to minors or servants, or to others to be drunk at his own bar, or upon his own premises. This is one of the most deplorable evils of vicious and perverted legislation with which our country is afflicted. It is precisely the evil which has hitherto proved, and which is, at this moment, the most pernicious to the well-being of all our colleges without exception. It has been proclaimed a t. usand times; and legislators have been every where appealed to and entreated in vain to abate it. The late governor of South Carolina, in his last message to the legislature, animadverted, in the most indignant and eloquent language, upon the mischievous influence of the wine and whiskey shops of Columbia upon the morals and discipline of the State's University in that metropolis. The public complain of the dissipation of colleges and of the riotous conduct of the students, and none more loudly than our politicians, our judges and statesmen, and yet they very deliberately legalize and sanction and uphold the very agents and instruments which effect all the mischief. Verily, they are wise, sagacious, consistent, magnanimous gentlemen.

It would be useless therefore to seek for a college or school, in all the length and breadth of this mighty republic, where intoxicating liquors cannot be procured," or where the students may not indulge in their use, or get drunk, if so inclined. If we would educate our sons where rum and grog shops cannot be found, we must send them to Robinson Crusoe's Island, or to the Penitentiary, the only University which the government of Tennessee has condescended to build up and to patronize. This is our grand State University; and the work of education is said to be going bravely on within its walls. It is already the populous resort: and its accomplished graduates will no doubt in due time, occupy a prominent position in our most respectable and enlightened community.

——"We rejoice to say there are one hundred and twenty one towns in the state of New-York, comprising some large villages, where no intoxicating liquors are licensed to be sold.—And of the fourteen counties of Mass. six do not distance the sale of intoxicating drinks. And this circle of purity, and temperance, and peace is constantly enlarging.

Extracts from the remarks of Daniel O'Connel, Esq. M. P. at the Anti-Slavery Convention held at Exeter Hall, London, on the 14th of November last.

It is not the slave alone who suffers, but the man who supports and abets the system. There may be physical degradation to the slave, but there is moral degradation burnt in with iron into the soul of the planter. (Cheers.) He ceases to be a man when he claims to be a master of his fellow-man. I care not in what clime or country the inhumanity exists. I hate it in all countries—in the serfs of Russia, in the Helots, under the dominion of a tyrannic military despotism. (Cheers.)—and in the slavery of the unfortunate men of color, under the pretended freedom of liberty in the United States, (Cheers.)—Do as you have already done—be foremost in the race of humanity. Proclaim it all over the world, that as you have bought your freedom, you will have value for your money. (Loud applause.) Be an example to the nations of the earth. Let the slave, wherever he be, leap for joy, when he hears of the meeting of this day, and hail it as the advent of all that shall cheer him into life, into liberty. (Loud cheers.) Oh! we ought to make our exertions strongly, immediately, unanimously. Remember you have only to cast your eyes beyond the American waves, and see what is about to take place there. Behold those pretended sons of freedom, those who declared that all persons were equal in the presence of God that every man had an inalienable right to liberty—and proclaiming it, too, in the name of God—behold them answering it in the name of honor, their paltry hour. (Loud cheers.) they are at this moment organizing new slave-states. Remember that another country has been committed to slave holders. They have seized upon the territory of Texas, taking it from the Mexicans, the Mexicans having abolished slavery without apprenticeship. (Loud cheers) Remember that they have stolen, cheated, swindled robbed a country, for the horrible purpose of continuing it in slavery. (Hear, hear, and cries of "Shame.") Remember that there is a treaty now on foot, in contemplation, at least, and only postponed between the President of the United States and these cruel ruffians, till this robbery of Texas from Mexico can be completed. Oh! raise the voice of humanity against republicans who have sentiments of pride and feelings of self exaltation. (Cheers.) Let us tell these republicans, that instead of standing the highest in the scale of humanity, they are the basest of the base, and the vilest of the vile. (Immense cheers, waving of hats, and cries of "Hurrah.") There is a communion of sentiment all over the world, and on the wings of the press, whatever so humble and insignificant an individual as myself addresses to you, will be borne across the waves of the Atlantic—it will go up the Missouri; it will be wafted along the banks of the Mississippi, and it will reach the infernal Texas itself. (Immense cheers.) And though that Pandemonium may scream at the sound, yet they shall suffer from the lash of human indignation applied to their horrible crimes. (Loud cheers.) If they be not arrested in their career of guilt, four new slave states will flow from it, and from Texas to the Mississippi will be filled with slaves. (Cheers.) Gladeous breeders of human beings for slavery! (Cheers.) Such are the horrors of that system in the American States, that it is impossible in this presence to describe them, and it almost pollutes the mind to think of them. Should the measures now contemplated by the Americans be accomplished, these horrors will be increased four-fold. Every commandment of the Living God is to be trampled under foot by mammon, and the human soul is to be degraded worse than the degradation of the human body. (Cheers) Expect nothing from their generosity.

From the New York Mirror.

The Veiled Image.

To Sais once a youthful wanderer came; by thirst of knowledge brought to learn the secret wisdom of the Egyptian priests. Though quick he passed through many high degrees with ready spirit, curiously, still stateless, urged him on the more. In vain essayed his teacher to calm the impatient aspirant.

"What have I, if I have not all?" he cried. "Is there here a more and less? Is thy truth like the sense's pleasures then? A sum of which we may a more or less possess, yet always can possess? Is it not a whole—one—and undivisible? Come but a mote from a harmony; blot one colour from the bow; what we have left is worthless—wanting the beauteous whole to colour and to sound!"

And once discoursing thus, they chanced to be within a lonely temple—when lo! the youth beheld before him an image, veiled, of giant size. He turns in wonder to the Hierophant.

"What is this concealed beneath the veil?"

"The truth!" replied the sage.

"Hah!—after truth alone have I striven ever; and is it this indeed so long from me withheld?"

"The deity must that resolve," returned the priest—" for thus she speaks: 'This veil no mortal thing shall raise, till it myself remove.' Who so with unhallowed and guilty hand shall touch the holy, the inhibited, he, saith the goddess; he—"

"What?—proceed!"

"He the truth shall see!"

"Strange oracle! And hast thou never raised the veil?"

"I? Nay, indeed; nor ever the temptation felt."

"If this thin veil alone debar me from the truth—"

"And a law," interrupts the sage. "This slight gauze, my son, is weightier far than thou supposest it. Light to thy hand—but to thy conscience an enormous load!"

So his haste the youth full of deepest thoughts retired. The fiery lust of knowledge robbed him of his sleep, and on his couch, fevered, he tossed. At midnight he rushed forth. Unconsciously, his timorous steps conduct him to the temple. He scales the easy walls. One bold leap brings him within the sacred circle. He is alone, and around him horrid, lifeless stillness, broken only by the hollow echo of his footfall upon the secret vaults; while from the open cupola the moon, in her pale, silver light; and fearfully, like to a present deity, through the gloomy arch the veiled image shone! He approaches with uncertain steps. He reaches forth his sacrilegious hand to touch the holy vision, and a shock, as of fire and ice, ran shivering through his frame, and an unseen arm repels him! Unhappy youth! Within his inmost soul whispers a kindly voice—

"Wouldst thou then dare to usurp the all holy one! By the mouth of the oracle 'tis said, 'No mortal thing this veil shall raise, till it myself remove!'"

"But the same mouth hath said, 'whoso shall raise the veil, the truth shall see!' Be what there may behind, I will see it," with a loud voice he cried.

"See it!" yelled back in scorn the echo.

He spoke and raised the veil.

"What saw he!" thou demandest. I know not! Senseless and pale the priests found him on the morrow, outstretched before the feet of Isis's statue! What he saw or heard his tongue hath never told! Cheer from his life had fled forever, and melancholy bore him to an early grave!

"Woe to him!"—such was his warning word to each importunate question. "Woe to him that cometh at the truth through guilt! Truth will gladden him no more forever."

There are few topics of more importance, as it respects this life than the diet of children. Upon judicious management in this respect depends, in no small degree, their health both present and future; and upon this again, very much in their intellectual and moral condition.

But I do not undertake to write a treatise. It should be sufficient to inform parents, that children are in general healthy, when kept upon a simple diet, as bread and milk, or bread and potatoes with few condiments, without tea or coffee or any warm drink. But if you bring them to your own table, and feed them indiscriminately from whatever they ask, they are seldom well. In regard to meat, there may be room for difference of opinion; but I am confident that only a small quantity should be allowed before the age of six years, and afterwards less than is usually consumed.

Children were not made to be those sickly, puny creatures that we often see. It is the fault of parents and nurses that they are so; and this fault is no where more conspicuous than in the regulation of diet.—Newark Daily.

From Ward's Miscellany.

Importance of Moral Instruction.

By moral instructions we mean such as relate to integrity, piety, courtesy, courage, decision, modesty, prudence, cheerfulness, frugality, gratitude, humility, benevolence, moderation, patience perseverance, regularity, docility, veracity, temperance, and their opposites.

Who does not see that the happiness of the world is primarily dependent on the state of these mental qualities, which in most of our systems of education are not yet abandoned to the influence of chance? Who does not feel that the most valuable instruction on these subjects must be precious? And who will not admit, that it is from ignorance on these subjects that most of our young men miss their road in life?

If we had permission to enlarge we should prefer no theme to illustrate the importance of this subject to a review of the distinguished men, who have succeeded or failed, according to the state of their moral dispositions.

Lord Bacon is eternally disgraced for want of judicial integrity.

Dr. Johnson lost half his influence in life from want of courtesy.

James II. lost his throne from want of courage

Cranmer is contemptible from defective decision.

Newton's greatness is increased by his marvelous modesty.

Dr. Horsley's genius will be always dishonored by his violent temper.

Benjamin Franklin, and almost all men who have amassed fortunes, laid the foundation in frugality.

Burns was oppressed all through life by the effects of his unpru ned sea.

Napoleon might have been saved before he had fallen at all with a little humility.

John Howard has become immortal merely by his benevolence and industry.

Bis op Burnet, by his moderation, has secured the respect and confidence of all parties.

Columbus, by nearly thirty years perseverence through discouragements, brought to light a new world.

Bunyan, by patience in prison, overcame his persecutors, and performed a work which will never be forgotten.

Doddrige, by regularly rising at five, instead of seven, and devoting those two hours to one work, wrote his "Family Expositor." Irregularity is the besetting sin of genius.

Cromwell owed most of his greatness to his decision.

Instead of confining ourselves to the few instances we have just mentioned, illustrative of our remark, that the happiness of the world and the welfare of individuals chiefly depend on the moral state of the mind, we might have filled our pages with ten times the number but we forbear. What might Chatterton, Savage, and Pyrus have become if they had attended to this subject? And what did Whitefield, Defoe, and Marvel achieve by its pure influence!

But education in morals is purely the work of the individual himself. Knowledge may be imparted, but dispositions grow, and virtue must be acquired.

When a gentleman speaks coarsely, he is dressed clean to no purpose. The clothing of our minds is certainly to be regarded before that of our bodies. To entrap a corrupt imagination is a much greater offence against good breeding, than any negligence in dress imaginable.

Egyptian Architecture.—A new building called the Halls of Justice," or House of Detention, has been erected by the Corporation of the City of New York for the criminal Courts, Police, Debtor's Prison, House of Detention, City Watch, and Records; District Attorney, Sheriff, Clerk of the Cyurt, and other officers, belonging to the different branches of the Institution; together with the necessary effects for cooking, watering, washing, bathing, warming, &c. It occupies the whole of the block bounded by Leonard, Elm Franklin, and Centre streets, formerly the Corporation Yard, and is 253 1 4 feet in length, by 218 feet in width.

The whole structure was designed and erected by Haviland in the Egyptian style of Architecture, the Exterior being Hallowed granite. It will cost near $300,000, including its artificial foundation, machinery for pumping, cooking, watering, warming, &c. &c.

Mr. Haviland may have succeeded in giving proper effect to the massive architecture of Egypt in this instance, but his City Hall and Court House in this city is held to be a decided failure.—Newark Daily

Mr. Francis Dixon, of Salem, had discovered a process of refining common oil so as to render it almost equal to sperm oil.

Wild Cat.—A wild cat weighing 20 pounds, and measuring 3 feet 10 inches in length, was shot by Mr. McGuire, of Lazerene county, Pa. on the morning of the 14th inst. set far from his paper mill.

The three banks, whose bills are to be redeemed by the Association and withdrawn from circulation had bills out to the amount of $800,000.—Boston Advocate.

Trade with Texas appears to be brisk at New-Orleans. On the 10th 14 vessels were up for different ports in Texas, and on the same day there were six arrivals, with cargoes of cotton, hides, deer skins, &c. Two steamboats are running as regular packets, and perform the voyage in about 40 hours.

A New Orleans paper tells of a man who has worn out four pair of boots in 2 months, all in trying to collect the money to pay for them! Really these are the times to try men's soles."

He that undertakes to become high in the world should have a small conscience, and a long tongue, talking every thing and feeling nothing.

A person who was fond of relating his dreams observed in the presence of the late J. Randolph, that he dreamed that night of lice. "That was very natural," replied Randolph, "for a person almost invariably dreams by night of what has been running in his head all day."

DEPEND UPON YOURSELF.—At an Inn in Sweden there was the following inscription in English on the wall:—"You will find at Trolhate excellent bread, meat and wine provided you bring them with you." And this will almost every inn a description of human life, so much depends upon the temper that events are met with and on the prudence that foresees and provides against them.

Western Names.—The Ohinan is a "Buckeye" an Indianian a "Hoosier;" an Illinoisan a "Sucker;" a Missourian a "Pewk;" a Kentuckinn a "Corncracker;" and a Michiganian a "Wolverene."

General Debility.—An old lady was lately poring over a quack advertisement, and on being asked what news she found in the paper; answered that there was a great deal about General Debility, but she wondered who he could be. She had heard of General Harrison, General Washington and General Jackson, but as to this General Debility, she thought he must be a foreigner as she had never heard of him before.—Boston Herald.

A Long Yarn, Unravelled.—On Tuesday morning last, soon after three minutes had gained the top of a chimney (sixty yards in height) now being finished at the new saw mill, by some misfortune the rope connected with the blocks by which the materials were raised to the workmen, broke; and as it was only by the help of the same rope that the workmen could be enabled to descend from their perilous eminence, it will easily be conceived that their situation was no enviable one. Various means were tried to get a line within their reach, by the help of a kite and by other plans. At length three o'clock had arrived, and the three poor fellows were still roosting in their awful situation, when a distressed woman wife of one of the unfortunates, had the joyful felicity to remember that her husband had on a new pair of knit stockings. "Well the reader will probably say, and what was the advantage of the stockings being knit rather than woven?" Oh, a woman's wit united with a woman's love has often overcome much greater difficulties than that of communicating with the object of their affection seventy yards apart, whether the separation might be by height or by width; and so it was that the knit stocking was to be made the happy medium. "Use your knife," she cried out, "and cut the toe of your stocking, continue the ravelling until you get a length sufficient to reach the earth; then attach a small stone to it and knit it here." The man obeyed the oracle, as many (perhaps too many) before him have done, and in a short time he had a length of worsted long enough to reach the ground, which he let down

Well, the next business was to tie the worsted to a thin cord, which the man drew up, and by the men so adjusted as to enable them with safety to descend on terra firma. We were sure that great credit was due to the woman for the way in which she improved a lucky thought, and those persons who may perchance be subjected to a similar disaster on the one which befel those three men, should take care above all things never to forget the value of knit stockings in such an emergency.—Preston (England) Patriot.

Remarkable Death.—The York Republican of the 12th inst., gives the following particulars relative to the case of Daniel Johnson, a man of color, recently convicted in the court of that county for the murder of another colored man:

We mentioned in our report of the "trial for Murder" in our last paper, the Court had, on motion of the prisoner's counsel, suspended the decision of the case until Saturday last, (Jan. 13) —Their further action was rendered unnecessary by a singular circumstance. On Tuesday morning Daniel Johnson was found lying dead in his bed, without marks of violence, and with the appearance of having breathed his last, without a struggle, so smoothe, and undisturbed was the bed clothing. A Coroner's Inquest was called—the body was dissected, and no signs of the decease being caused by violent means having been found a verdict was returned that he "died by the visitation of God." A knife, well sharpened, was found in the stockings of the deceased, from which the inference has been drawn that he intended to commit suicide. Such an instance of the death of a prisoner between verdict of guilty and the sentence of a Court, has probably never before occurred."

Procrastination.—Sir Walter Scott, writing to a friend who had obtained a situation, gave him this excellent advice.

"You must be aware of stumbling over a propensity which easily besets you from the habits of not having your time fully employed; I mean what the women very expressively call dawdling. Your motto must be Hoc age. Do instantly whatever is to be done, and take the hours of recreation after business, and never before it. When a regiment, is under march, the rear is often thrown into confusion because the front do not move steadily and without interruption. It is the same thing with business. If that which is first in the hand is not instantly, steadily, and readily despatched, other things accumulate behind, till affairs begin to press all at once and no human brain can stand the confusion. Pray mind this; this is a habit of mind which is very apt to beset men of intellect and talent, especially when their time is not regularly filled up, and left at their own arrangement. But it is like the ivy around the oak, and ends by limiting, if it does not destroy, the power of manly and necessary action. I must have a man so well, to whom I offer such a word of advice, that I will not apologize for it; but expect to hear you are becoming as regular as a Dutch clock—hours, quarters, minutes all marked and appropriated. This is a great cast in life and, must be played with all skill and caution." [Lockhart's Life of Scott.

The expenses of the two houses of Congress exceed $3000 daily, two thirds of which are paid in specie, and one third in treasury notes.

Hogs and Manure.—I think that, branch of the "farmer's work" which embraces the fattening of pork, and making manure therefrom, is not enough attended to by farmers in general. If properly managed, it will afford the greatest profit from the same expense and labor.

My plan is this:—Yard the hogs through the year. Give each hog to work upon ten loads of mud from the swamp. Give them potatoes, apples, and waste food from the house, enough to keep them in good thriving order all the time, till about Septe mb r. Then attend them regularly, giving them all they will eat, perhaps some extra food, for about four months.

In this way, the expense will be about $20 or $25 per hog, for the whole time of growing and fattening.

Some men, thinking to avoid expense in keeping, permit their hogs to "run at large," or in a large pasture. This is a bad practice; the hogs "run away" so much of their flesh, that it requires nearly as much to keep them in a thriving state, as if they were yarded.—If it did not, the pasture would be much more profitable for other stock. More than this, the hogs will convert about four loads more of mud into good manure, which will more than twice pay the extra cost of yarding.

THE RESULT—COST.

Cost of growing and fattening each hog,	$25 00
Cost of hauling mud to the yard, 10 loads,	1 00
	$26 00

PROFIT.

There will be eleven loads of first rate manure, (the hog making one at the lowest calculation,) which if applied for the benefit of a corn crop, and the soil, will at least be worth $2 25 per load. This may seem a high estimate, but every experienced farmer must admit it.

Which will amount to	$24 75
Which sum deducted, leaves cost,	$1 25

The hog, if he has done well, will weigh four cwt., which, at present prices of pork, is worth ten cents per lb., $40 00

Who can make $1 25 nett him $40 00 in any other branch of agriculture.—Am. Silk Grower.

Bristol, Eng. Dec. 9.

Our great Western Steam Ship is getting on fast, and will probably have her machinery aboard in about two months. It is expected that she will make several experimental trips, and then come round to Bristol to take freight and passengers for New York. She is filled with four masts, and spreads as much canvass as a frigate. When she came round to London for her machinery, she outsailed every thing.

Lt. Hoskin, of the Royal Navy, arrived at N. York, lately to make arrangements for her reception there, and returns immediately to take charge of her, with which he expects to reach New York in April.

London papers to Dec. 25th are received at New York. Commercial matters were not much changed. The Cotton market looked rather better. Money affairs have not varied much.

The insurrection in Canada had produced a great sensation in London; and in consequence, Parliament, which had adjourned for the holydays was to be reassembled on the 16th of January. The London papers contain exaggerated accounts from Canada to the 28th of November—including the 1 of the first actual resistance to the constituted authorities.

A destructive gale visited England on the night of the 24th. In many of the streets in London, almost all the lamps were extinguished. In the western suburbs trees were uprooted. Also the steeples of three were dismantled in many towns. The Mersey and several other streams overflowed their banks, houses were blown down, bridges carried away, and several lives lost. In Bradford, the water was six feet deep in the streets.

Flood at Montreal. On the 21st inst. there was a flood in the city, higher than has been before known by the oldest inhabitants. Some of the streets were covered with water to the depth of from two to eight feet. Much damage was done in the destruction of flour, grain, salt, &c.—and in the suburbs, cattle. The steamboat to Princess Victoria, and two other vessels, suffered some damage.

The first division of the 85th Regiment of regular troops had arrived at Montreal from Quebec, and the second was on its way.

Among the improvements contemplated by the Legislature of Virginia, are a Railroad from the Tennessee line to Evanham in Wythe county, whence a branch to Danville, and another to Buchanan or Lynchburg; also several Macadamized and turnpike roads. It is proposed to make these various and important improvements on State account, by a loan of eight millions, which it is said can be obtained at 4 per cent.

Latest from Detroit.—By the Buffalo Advertiser of the 22d we have news from Detroit down to the 20th inst.—The excitement had nearly subsided. All the respectable portion of the citizens have returned to obey the laws. The authorities were active—several volunteer companies were under arms—guards were posted, &c. There is no patriot force whatever in arms, either in the province or on this side—unless it be some straggling Navy Islanders, along the lake shore, in this state. (New York.)

The number that were on Bois Blanc Island never exceeded 350—not ten of whom were Canadians.

To show the vigilance of the military at Detroit, the guards actually fired at a mob who were taking forcible possession of the steamboat Gen. Brady, wounding one of them, and compelling them to relinquish their lawless enterprise.

The persons taken in the schr Ann, captured by the British, and by the Detroit Post to have been "all intoxicated," appear to have been marched through the country to London, for safe keeping.

The Army Increase Bill.—This bill has passed the Senate, and passed with a unanimity or rare as it is gratifying. There was not a dissenting voice either at ordering the bill to be engrossed for a third reading, nor at the third reading itself. The bill presents five principal features; 1. An increase of the rank and file in all the infantry and artillery regiments. 2. An increase in the different branches of the staff. 3. An increase of the compensation of the officers, by raising the price of the army ration to the same price with the navy ration, and granting periodic ally an additional ration for every five years' service. 4. Extending the length of time of the enlistment. 5. A restoration of the bounty, and a slight increase of the pay to the private, musicians and non commissioned officers. It is a bill embracing improvements which have been recommended by every administration for nearly 20 years past. It is believed to be a bill which does more for the army than has been done for it by any bill since the formation of the Government.

Mail Robery and Murder.—The Mobile Mercantile Advertiser, of the 22d, says—

We hear that the driver of the United States Mail was murdered on Friday night last, within a mile and a half of Stockton, and the mail bags riped open and their contents rifled. The bags was found next morning in the neighborhood.—The stage contained the New Orleans mails of Wednesday and Thursday, and the mail of Friday from this city. The driver had two balls shot through his head. Suspicion rests upon two men who have been lurking about Stockton for some days previously.

Railroad Accident and Remarkable escape.—As the 2'o clock cars from Newark was rodaing Bergen Hill on Friday at the highest declivity of the road, the locomotive ran off the track, taking a diagonal course across the opposite track to the South side of the road, which was guarded by a stone wall four feet thick. The engine forced the wall down a declivity of from 30 to 40 feet, the first tender succeeding the following, and the second car taking a slide to the North side of the road, where no wall guarded from danger, and running within one foot of the declivity. The preservation nearly 70 lives, and the escape of every car from going over the precipice, were owing to the check given to the locomotive by the wall, and to the slow progress of the car at the time. The locomotive was much injured by the concussion, but neither the passenger cars nor passengers received any harm.—N. York Commercial.

Another misfortune befel the 6 o'clock train, on Saturday near the same spot. Rapid Traveling.—By the arrangement of the Rail Road Companies, made with the Post Office Department, which is entered upon to-day, it is said that passengers can leave Washington at 6 o'clock, A. M. arrive at Baltimore at 9 o'clock and breakfast; leave Baltimore at 10 o'clock by the new rail road line for Philadelphia, arrive at Philadelphia by half past four o'clock, and in time to proceed by the evening line to New York —thus affording travellers the facility of leaving Washington in the morning, breakfasting in Baltimore, dining at Philadelphia, and supping in New York on the same day.

Execution Stayed.—The execution of Isaac Dale, which was to have taken place near Nashville, on the 10th inst. was suspended by the passage of a law on the same morning by the Legislature, making it the duty of the Governor to commute the punishment in capital cases finally determined by the Supreme Court, to imprisonment for life in the State Penitentiary, when the Judges of said Court shall certify to him that they were, in their opinion extenuating circumstances attending the case, and that in their opinion the punishment of death ought to be commuted. All the necessary preparations were made for the execution of the culprit—the gallows erected, and shroud and coffin made, and not until after twelve o'clock was it known that the merciful arm of the Legislature had been interposed to save him. A large crowd which had collected at the jail were disappointed (agreeably no doubt) on the fact being announced.

Three Steamboats burnt.—The New Orleans papers of the 24th mention that at 1 o'clock, A. M. a fire broke out in the steamboat Marmora, lying at the wharf, and in a few minutes she was enveloped in flames. It was impossible even to save a portion of the cargo or furniture. The fire communicated with two other boats before they could be removed. Both, too, the flames were raging furiously in the Chickasaw and Cumberland. Attention was chiefly directed to the surrounding steamboats and flat boats, many of which were in eminent danger. The Marmora had arrived only the day before, from Natchitoches, with a cargo principally of cotton.

The hull of the Chickasaw it was thought would be saved.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, Jan. 26.

Mr. Wright reported the bill from the house, making appropriations for the suppression of hostilities in Florida, and for the protection of the northern frontier. They were both read.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the bill granting pre-emption rights to settlers.

The bill gives to all actual settlers, who located on lands prior to Dec. 1st, 1837, a pre-emption to the extent of a quarter section. One good amendment was added to the bill, which prevents it from embracing settlers on lands, the Indian title to which has not been extinguished.

Monday, Jan. 29.

In Senate, the pre-emption bill was again taken up. Mr. Webster spoke at length in favor of it, and Mr. Clay against it. Several anti-slavery petitions were received, and among them, one by Mr. Wall.

Tuesday, Jan. 30.

In Senate, a report was received from the secretary of the treasury, in relation to the Commonwealth bank. Numerous petitions for abolition petitions and memorials were presented.

Late in the evening, the pre-emption bill passed, 30 to 18. All the whigs voted against it, except Webster; Calhoun also voted against it, as did both the New Jersey senators. Mr. Webster, and the administration members for it.

In the house, not much of importance was done except the debate on the Mississippi election case.

Wednesday, Jan. 31st.

In the Senate, the Sub-Treasury Bill was taken up. Mr Clay in vain endeavored to postpone it, and spoke at length against it. Mr. Calhoun replied, he said he could prove the bill would diminish executive power and patronage. Clay rejoined, and said if it was determined to bring forward the measure now, he and his friends were ready to meet it. Wright then spoke at length in favor of it.

After the usual morning business, the House resumed the consideration of the Mississippi election case. The following resolution was introduced by Mr. Bell:

That the resolution of this house of the 3d October last, declaring that Samuel J. Gholson and John F. H. Claiborne were duly elected members of the 25th congress, be rescinded, and that John F. H. Claiborne and Samuel J. Gholson are not duly elected members of the 25th Congress.

The resolution passed. 119 to 112.

It was then moved that Prentiss and Word are not members, and that the Mississippi seats are vacant. The house then adjourned.

New Jersey Legislature

Saturday, Jan. 27th.

In Council.—A petition was presented from Morris county, praying that Rail road cars may not be allowed to run on the Sabbath. Some amendments were agreed to, on the bill in relation to small bills.

In Assembly.—A bill was reported, to promote the growth of the mulberry, and the production of silk.

Monday, Jan. 29th.

In the Assembly, the bill to prohibit the circulation of tickets for money, was made the order of the day, for to-morrow afternoon.

Tuesday, Jan. 30.

Council resolved itself into a Court of Appeals.

In Assembly, the bill prohibiting change tickets was taken up.

Mr. Archer moved to amend the bill by striking out that part which required tickets to be redeemed, whether the time at which they were made payable or not. Agreed to.

An amendment, so as to make the penalty only apply to those tickets which should be hereafter issued, was agreed to, 27 to 8.

It was ordered to be engrossed 37 to 6.

Tuesday, Jan. 31st.

In Council.—The bill from Assembly to appoint commissioners to investigate the situation of the Patterson bank was amended, passed and sent to the assembly.

The bill concerning small bills was also amended, passed and sent to the assembly.

In Assembly.—The bill to regulate the selling of grain was passed. The re-engrossed bill to authorize our banks to issue small notes, passed, 30 to 14. The sup. to the act to prevent the issue or passing of change tickets was read a third time and passed in the negative, 24 to 23, 2 votes being required to pass a bill.

Thursday, Feb. 1st.

After the transaction of some unimportant business, Council resolved itself into a Court of appeals.

Assembly were occupied a good part of the day on the bill to alter and amend the charter of N. Brunswick. The bill was finally ordered to a third reading.

The re-engrossed bill to restrict the circulation and discounts of the Patterson bank, for the time being, was passed unanimously.

Temperance Reform.—The Providence Courier mentions the fact of the inhabitants of Burrillville having to a man signed articles of agreement not to traffic in liquors nor let or lease any house, or any other building, nor lot of land to set a building upon, for that purpose.

Gen. Scott, it appears by the Commercial Advertiser, has won golden opinions from all sorts of people, by his conduct on the frontiers. Among other good fruits of his management, there is a prospect that a portion of the Navy Island patriots will be absorbed in the U. THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, February 7.

For-I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Dedication.

☞ The Seventh Day Baptist Meeting house in this Village is now completed, and with divine permission will be dedicated to the service of Almighty God, on fifth day, February 8th, at 11 o'clock, A. M. The inhabitants of this village, and its vicinity are respectfully invited to attend.

☞ The Small Note bill passed both Council and Assembly, on Wednesday last, and the next day became the law of this State. The bill repeals the law of 1835, which prohibited our banks from issuing notes under $5.

We understand that small bills of our banks are already in circulation; and that Eastern Notes are gradually disappearing.

BANKS.—The Kilby Bank at Boston, has gone overboard, its bills are not redeemed in any way.

The American bank at Boston, has been rejected from the association, but it is thought that its bills will be ultimately redeemed.

The Patterson bank has not failed, its bills are as good as ever.

CHARLES QUILL, we are happy to see, still continues his plain, talented, and most useful essays to mechanics, in the Newark Daily Advertiser. These essays add very much to the interest of that Journal, and are extensively copied. We have heard it intimated that they were to be published in a book form—Do it by all means,—we should like extremely to have a copy, and many others in Plainfield would be glad to get one. Why not in every place, in New Jersey, or the Union? Let them be extensively circulated, and we are confident great good would be effected by their means, to the most numerous and important class of persons in our republic.

Fire in New-York.—On Monday afternoon of last week, an extensive fire occurred in the upper part of the city, on Fifth and Sixth streets, and Avenue D. About 20 buildings were destroyed, as the wind was high and the flames spread rapidly. The loss is estimated at over $50,000, not more than one-quarter of which was insured.

The committee of New York banks returned from Philadelphia, without obtaining the object for which they went. They were told that the state of the exchanges, would not warrant a resumption of specie payments at present.

Fire in New Brunswick.—A fire occurred on the afternoon of Monday, Jan. 29th, in New-Brunswick, which did much damage. The carpenter's shop of Ralph Voorhees, and two frame houses of Mr. Addis, with much lumber and furniture were destroyed. Very small part of it was insured.

Common Schools.

In pursuance of authority given them by the Education Convention lately held in Trenton, the Essex County, Corresponding Committee, at a meeting held at Elizabethtown on the 27th ult. appointed two additional members to their body, from each township. For the town of Westfield, Zachariah Webster and Rev. James M. Hunting were appointed. These gentlemen agreeably to request of the County Corresponding Committee, called a township meeting, which was held at Scotch Plains, on Monday last, in the Baptist meeting house. The following are the proceedings, given us by the Secretary:

Rev. John Rogers was appointed Chairman; and Zachariah Webster, Secretary.

On motion of Rev. J. M. Hunting, seconded by Dr. Corra Osborn, it was

Resolved, that a committee of six be appointed, agreeably to the request of the County corresponding committee.

Whereupon, Andrew H. Clark and Dr. Corra Osborn, of Westfield; Dennis Coles and Jonathan Osborn, of Scotch Plains; Rev. Lewis Bond and Martin Runyon, of Plainfield, were appointed said committee.

Resolved, that the above named committee organize, on Saturday next, at Scotch Plains, at the meeting house, 4 o'clock, P. M.

Resolved that the above committee solicit information, and invite persons to address the people of this township on the subject of common school education; and do other duties as requested by meeting at Elizabethtown.

It was resolved, unanimously, that we highly approve of the methods recently practised in several parts of this state, of memorializing the Legislature on this subject.

Resolved, that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Plainfield Union and New Jersey Journal. JOHN ROGERS, Chairman.

Important Indian Treaty.—A Treaty has been concluded, according to the Detroit papers, with the Saginaw Indians, by which they accept a location on the head waters of the Osage, west of the Missouri. They are to occupy for five years two of the ceded reserves on the west of Saginaw Bay. This completes the extinguishment of Indian titles within the lower peninsula of Michigan. Government is to pay the entire net proceeds of the land as valued at the land office—to be invested in stocks for a perpetual annuity, after deducting debts.

Our Harbour.—We are happy to learn that there is now a fair prospect of something being done by Congress to improve the condition of our harbor.

The Collector of this Port a short time since wrote to the Secretary of the Treasury respecting buoys being placed in our Bay to facilitate navigation.

In his reply Mr. Woodbury remarks: "The object which you have in view will doubtless be accomplished by the action of Congress during the present session. It is probable that an appropriation will be made to defray the expense of removing the obstructions in the Bay and River, and placing buoys to designate the channel. A copy of the Chart of Newark Bay and the Passaic River has already been furnished for Congress. —Newark Eagle.

Distressing.—A daughter of Mrs. Roosevelt, of Poughkeepsie, widow of the late Richard Roosevelt, was so burnt a few weeks since, in consequence of her clothes taking fire, as to cause her death in a few hours. She was about 12 years of age. The details are too painful to be repeated.

The population of Poughkeepsie, according to a census just taken, is 6440; being a decrease during the past year, of about 800, occasioned by the pressure of the times.

Sylvester Heathmon, killed his brother John Heathm, recently, in an affary which occurred on their return from a dram shop in a village in Portage Co. Sylvester struck his brother with a chair; the blow was received on a whiskey bottle in the pantaloons pocket of the latter; the bottle was shivered into fragments, a piece of the glass entering the upper part of the thigh, severed the femeral artery, and causing instant death.—Columbus Register, Ohio.

The Farmers of Monmouth Co. had a meeting at Handrickson's, in Freehold, on the 24th—Wm. J. Bowne in the chair—to form an Agricultural Society. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution, and the first meeting appointed for the 4th Thursday in April.

Art is not the bread, but the wine of life.

Bounty on Wheat.—A bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives for giving a bounty for the production of wheat. A similar law was passed last year by the Legislature of Maine; it offered a bounty of two dollars for the production of every 20 bushels of wheat. The effect of the law in that State has been to induce the farmers to turn their attention particularly to raising this staple article. The consequence has been the production of an unusual quantity of wheat, and it is supposed that it will require all the surplus revenue belonging to that state, to meet the bounty.—Boston Gaz.

Paper Mills.—It is surprising that there are no paper mills scarcely to be found in the West. Much as is consumed there, as here, in newspapers alone, all the material according to the Cleveland Intelligencer, has to be brought from the east at a distance of 7 or 800 miles, and at great cost. The editor thinks, however, it would be profitable business for the western towns, as there is a great plenty of water power.

Worthy of Imitation.—A few days since a young farmer from Pleasant Valley bro't a load of wood into the village for sale, and while waiting for a purchaser, a poor woman came up and enquired the price. He told her, and she burst into tears. She said she had endeavored for a long time to find a load small enough to be purchased with the last money she had, but had been unsuccessful—the amount was so small. The generous heart of the young farmer was touched, and he gave the suffering child of poverty his load of wood. He no doubt returned home a happier man than if he had received $10 for his wood. Such acts are sure of reward.—Fo'kespsie Telegraph.

A Noble Lady.—It is stated in the English papers that the Marchioness of Westminister spends £2000 annually in feeding and clothing the poor children of the villages near Eaton Hall.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser of the 26 says the great at part of the militia who were called out a few weeks since for the defence of the frontier, were discharged and have returned home.

The whole number of squatters on the public lands of the U. S. is estimated at not much short of 50,000 souls! About 20,000 are squatted in the Territory of Wisconsin.

The new county bill passed the lower House this morning. It disagrees but in one particular with the wishes of its friends; and that is in cutting off the upper part of Hopewell, which it now appears, desires anxiously to be included within the new county.—State Gaz.

Newark, Jan. 30.—We are happy to find that the subject of Common School instruct on is rooting onward with increasing interest and the cause gaining strength in its progress. Every county in the State is in motion, and it is becoming a topic of discussion in the family circle.—Eagle.

New Orleans papers of the 18th of January, complain of the abundance of musquitoes in that city. Their early appearance this year is owing to the singular mildness of the season.

Harland, the murderer of young Wood, was executed in the prison yard at White Plains, New York, pursuant to sentence. He threw off the pleas of insanity, and proved himself a hardened wretch on the gallows.

Teachers Wanted,

AT THE

PLAINFIELD CLASSICAL INSTITUTION

THE above Institution, situated in Plainfield, Essex Co., N. J., is offered for rent after the 1st of May next, when the lease of the present teacher, who intends relinquishing the business, will expire. There are at present in it, two flourishing English Schools, one male and the other female; also a Classical and Mathematical Department in an incipient stage. The number of pupils for the current year averages in all 140, and the patronage is increasing. The building is an excellent one, beautifully situated in a healthy and enterprising village, within 25 miles of New York city. There are now five teachers employed in the institution. It will be rented on fair terms, to a competent and well qualified person, and it is considered as offering superior advantages to first rate Classical and English instructors. Teachers are invited to visit the place, and by personal examination to satisfy themselves of its advantages. Applications may be made personally, or by letter, post paid, to WM. W. TODD, one of the Trustees, No. 77 Front st., New York, or to ALLEN WILSON, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, Plainfield, N. J.

PROSPECTUS OF THE New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and from beautiful and original music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and authentic selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the actod drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecess ors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve give it variety, and render it one of the most entertaining and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most celebrated popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of America scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and an intimate acquaintance with its knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, (for no one few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the Blood vessels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and can not produce any other than a salutary effect in any case. Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to regulate perspiration—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their great efficacy, may be gratuitously obtained at the Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, to the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves.

The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest.

The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the southwest bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

To the subscriber is due the plan of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its confidence. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being stuck through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philadelphia, for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbock cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Plume's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Examination of a Midshipman.

I remember at Malta, one unfortunate youth, named Richards, the day of whose trial was fixed, and who, from the known character of his judges had good reason to be anxious about the result. On the morning previous to his examination, I found him in a dreadfully agitated state; and in order to restore and reassure him as much as I could, I took him out with me, and endeavored during a long walk to explain any difficulties that occurred. After a deal of cross-questioning, finding himself correct, he began to take courage and to look forward with confidence to the result of the morrow. We had been perambulating about in this manner for a couple of hours, and I was just about to accompany him on board, when whom should we meet but one of the passing captains.

"Well, youngster!" said the skipper, addressing my companion; "so you are going to-morrow, eh! to try, at least, eh! Very well; now that you are prepared, for it shall be no child's play, I'll work you, my boy; I promise you I will."

"I will never do, Ned," said the poor fellow to me as soon as the captain was gone,—"I am sure to be rejected."

"Nonsense," I replied. "Keep your spirits up, never say die! every body knows that that fellow does not alw ys bite when he snarls."

"Well," said the desponding youth, "it may be, but you'll see I'll be rejected."

The event of hour at length arrived; and poor Richards approached his fate with a palpitating heart. As there were six others for trial at the same time, they were appointed among the different captains; each taking upon himself the examination of one.

"If you will allow me," said our friend of the previous day, to the senior officer, "I should like to examine Mr. Richards."

"Certainly," replied the senior captain; and the poor fellow as white as a sheet, was immediately called forward.

"Now sir," said the captain, addressing him, and assuming a very grave and severe expression of countenance; now, sir, let us see what kind of an officer you make. You are the officer of the watch, sir, of the Dido Frigate—don't forget her name, sir—there's a heavy gale of wind from the southward—do you hear, sir? Pay attention to what I am saying to you, sir! I'll lay my life, you have forgotten what point the wind was in! mark me sir, for it's important! the wind is from the south west, sir! remember, the southwest! Plenty of sea-room, sir, vessel made all snug for the night, lying to under tryasils! do you mark that, sir! under tryasils! Well, sir, the captain comes on deck, and says to you—observe what the captain says, sir; he says to you, 'Mr. Richards, how's her head?' you of course make the proper response; after which, the captain, putting his hand into his pocket, takes out a memorandum case—mark, a leathern case! and presenting it to you in an easy sort of a way, he offers you a cigar. Now, sir, answer me immediately, sir—which end of the cigar would you put in your mouth?"

The poor middy, who, as the captain was proceeding with this address, was looking forward to some awfully formidable question, was so thunderstruck with the unexpected termination of the harangue, that, not knowing whether it was meant in joke or in earnest, he stood for a moment without opening his lips.

"Come, sir," cried the captain, "quick, which end?"

"The twisted one, sir, if an Havanna, and either end the same, if a Cheroot!"

"Excellent!" cried the captain, throwing himself back in his seat in a roar of laughter.

"Capital, sir! you're well answered indeed, sir!—Gentlemen, I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Richards is extremely well qualified to make an excellent officer!"

The youth was accordingly duly passed; and all his evil forebodings ended.

A navy captain at Portsmouth ball, when his partner, a lady of rank, suggested the propriety of putting on his gloves before they led off, exclaimed, "oh, never mind me, ma'am; I shall wash my hands when I've done dancing."

Address of Mr. Ritchie, editor of the Richmond

Enquirer, on his taking the chair of the editorial convention, which lately met in Virginia.

"Gentlemen—I thank you for the onor you have done me; though I am not vain enough to ascribe this distinction to any thing else than my years. I have long passed for the "veteran," and by courtesy for the "venerable," Editor of the Enquirer—and although the epithet might have been given to me long before I observed it, Yet I am sensible that years are giving me some title to it, and that every day is only calculated to confirm it. I am sure that none of you, gentlemen, will envy me the advantage of my years, of the pre eminence they may give me to the honors of the Chair.

We have assembled here, gentlemen, under the hope of improving the character and condition of the important Profession of which we are members. The Press is indeed the Great Mag cian of the age. Wherever it is established, it is diffusing light all around it. It is promoting the progress of every art. It is extending the sphere of every science. In our own country, it is a necessary agent—and if properly conducted, it would be an inestimable instrument. The Press is the great instrument of information. It is indeed an essential part of the composition of a free society, which is scattered over so extensive a territory as that of the U. S. The fact verifies the theory. Scarcely do we settle a village in the 'far west;' scarcely have we erected an inn, a blacksmith shop, and a store, before our inquisitive country men begin to think of a Press. It has been pronounced, 'The art preservation of all arts.' So familiar are we with its value, that we almost wonder how the ancients could have got along without it.

But, sirs, the Press is generally of more benefit to others, than it is to its own conductors. No Profession is more irksome or laborious. None imposes such serious sacrifices, as this does upon the conscientious Editor. His labors are "still beginning, never ending." He is constantly rolling the stone of Sisyphus up the mountain; and it is forever rolling back upon him. He is toiling day and night. He is literally a prisoner in his own castle. Exercise and fresh air are too frequently denied to him. You, who know these secrets of your prison house, can only know what exertion it requires, and what privation it imposes upon you. You know, for you only have seen and felt it, to what cares both of body and mind, he is subjected—how tedious are his vigils; how anxiously he sits by his solitary fire, in the depth of the night, listening for the returning footsteps of the poor Devil who is bringing him the proof of the manuscript which with the spider's ingenuity, he had been compelled to spin out of his own brain.

"And where is the compensation which he reaps for so many sacrifices and services—for so severe and laborious an exercise of so important a profession? You must have been more fortunate, gentlemen, than I have been, if you have acquired the treasures of Crœsus, or the purse of Fortunatus. I have served as long an apprenticeship as any of you; but I can lay claim to no such acquisition. We are rich only in our Legislators. We never are—but always to be blessed."

"But this is not all, gentlemen—nor is it the most important duty which we have to perform. The press is not only useful to society, but it should be profitable to its conductors. It should be a source both of fortune and of distinction. It is so in Europe. In Paris, whose Journals cannot compare with our own, either in dimension, in ability, or in independence some of her principal Editors are among the highest dignitaries of the Government. The Press is indeed a passport to power.

The profession is rising in England, not only in emolument, but in dignity. One of the most distinguished journals in the world is "the Examiner" of London, and you may recollect in the last July No. of the 'Edinburg Review,' that the high character of its Editor, Mr. Fonblanque, has obtained for him the honor of a long complimentary notice in the first Pendant of the age.

And why is it, gentlemen, that our profession does not occupy that station in society to which it is entitled? Let us not disguise the fact. It is our own fault. No maxim is more true, than that he would have the respect of others, must show that he respects himself. We have descended to abuse each other in a manner that has lost the respect of the world. We misrepresent each others motives—we heap approbrious epithets upon each others heads—we do not recollect that vituperative language need not call-use any thing but dignity. How can we expect to be treated as gentlemen? Each one says indeed, that it is not his fault. He tries to justify himself by pleading self defence. But whose soever be the fault the effect is undeniable that in this eternal warfare of attack and of recrimination, the press has lost much of its dignity, and much of that moral influence, which it would have a right to claim, and would unquestionably command, in a free and enlightened country. The mischief does not stop here. The licentiousness of the press insensibly lowers the tone of private manners, and infects the character of our public councils. In this respect, therefore, the interests of society as well as the reputation of its conductors, demand a thorough reform.

Extract from the Proceedings of the New British and Foreign Temperance Society, at their first general Meeting, held in Exeter Hall, London, May 23d, 1837.

Mr. T. Whitaker, from Preston; rose and seconded the resolution. He hoped, he said, that the audience would not expect great things from him, as he was a plain, simple, Lancashire lad, who had been confined in a factory since he was six years old. He was satisfied to do his best with the powers God had given him. He tho't the poor drunkard very much like the man who fell among thieves; the priest and the Levite passed by; but the good Samaritan took the poor wounded man, had compassion upon him, and bound up his wounds. He was glad that the Levites, the moderate men, had looked upon him; they desired to promote sobriety, and to banish intemperance, but they did not profess to reclaim drunkards. The good Samaritan, the teetotalers came; they poured the oil of abstinence into his wounds. And thus good had been done to thousands. It was likely that many in that assembly would wish to know who he was, where he came from, and what he had been doing all his life. He was born in Aberdeenshire town. It was a very large place. A most sight of making was done there as well as much brewing. It was a place where drunkards and drunkard makers grew greatly. But many of the inhabitants moved to another little town, about a quarter of a mile off; a most terrible place where there was pockets to let in abundance; broken heads and arms; bruised and shattered bodies; houses without furniture; wives and children in rags, and empty cupboards. That miserable place was called Drunkard's Town; and in that town he had lived, to his sorrow, seven years. Then, thank God, he moved again. The Drunkard's Town lay in a valley, a sort of swamp; but there was another little town which was founded upon a rock. The waves often dashed against it; the rains descended, the winds blew, they could not destroy the town, nor could they beat the inhabitants off their pegs. It was a fine town; all the property was freehold, and there was no rent to pay. The inhabitants numbered from three to 400 thousand. It was called Teetotal Town. He had been living there for two years and two months. When he first went there some said, "Why, Thomas, you'll die in a month! He had been there six and twenty months, and was not dead yet. He had been to many meetings, where thousands had been present; he had often spoken at length, and in some instances he had been chairman, committee, speaker, and all. But his health and strength had been sufficient for the old woman would say, "Why dearey me, Tammy man, how dost thee like it?" And reply was, "I eat when I'an hungry; I drink when I'm thirsty; I keep feet warm with walking, and tongue warm with talking, and I go on to get hundreds and thousands to think and act as I do." He felt that he owed all he had and was to that good cause, and he determined to spend and to be spent in promoting it. But he met with many difficulties. In the drunkard's town there were 600,000 souls, all dying. It was his object, and the object of his friends, to bring some of those poor men to Teetotal Town; but they had to pass through Moderation Town in their way.

* * * *

One moderation man came, and with an air of triumph, said, "Did not Christ make wine? And if he made wine, and no doubt used it, why should not men use it?" Why, it was also said, that Christ fed five thousand men with a few barley loaves; why did not these moderation men eat barley loaves? But was not the wine which our Lord made or an intoxicating quality? He had quite as good authority for saying that it was not, as those men had for saying that it was.—Would any pretend to say that the family at Cana were drunk, and that Christ administered to them that which would make them more so? Did he not come to put away sin and the works of the devil? "Well but," says another, "did not Paul tell Timothy to use a little wine for his stomach's sake and his often infirmities?" Yes, but why name it not Timothy; besides, there is nothing the matter with my stomach, nor am I subject to any bodily infirmity. Now, was it not evident, that if the moderation men would get out of the way, those who were bent on the restoration of the drunkard would get on much better? If the moderation men would work, let them do so; but if not, let them stand out of the way of those who were willing and able to do the work effectually. But what was moderation? Why, a glass or so. And pray what did that mean? No man could agree as to what it was; whether one glass, or 2, or 3, or 4. "Or so!" There were only 4 letters in that answer, two of them were O's; began with an O and ended in O; there was no end in O, and there was no end in moderation. But he must draw to a conclusion. Much good had been done by the society, and it became them to be thankful to God. They should be grateful for the past, and take courage for the future. How many individuals had been blessed! How many wives and children had been made happy!

For himself, he had reason to be thankful, and he never felt any desire to go back to moderation. He had gone early to a Sunday School, where impressions had been made upon his mind which had never left him. When he returned to rest, he thought he ought to pray; but some inexpertus ways seemed before him, ready to drag him off his knees. He used to go to a public house, where he sat for hours, drinking beer. When he heard there were persons who talked of taking beer away from the poor laboring man, he thought they were mad or wicked, and determined to oppose them—At length he was induced to put down his name, and from that moment he felt himself at liberty. For three years previous to that period he had scarcely ever gone to bed sober. He went home and told his wife that he had signed teetotal. She did not know what he meant. When he explained it to her, she said, "Nonsense: thou'st played me tricks too often for me to believe that!" He assured her that he had. With tears trickling down her cheeks, she said, "And cannot thee keep it, Thomas?" When they retired to rest, he said, "I think we ought to pray;" and urged his wife to do so. She pleased mightily, but at length said "God bless my Thomas, and help him to keep his pledge!" To that prayer he added a hearty "Amen!" He had been enabled to keep it. He had to labor hard through the day, and to attend meetings at night; but he was never better able to do his work or to travel. He had travelled much in that good cause, and firmly believed that he was never able to do any thing when he could be required of him, than when he took those liquors which were generally supposed to give strength. If there was a poor drunkard in that assembly, he would urge him to break off his habits at once. He would say to professing christians, "Come and join us: abandon at once the very appearance of evil." He would say to all moderate men, "Come and join us; come out of the sea of moderation, lest you be carried into the ocean of drunkenness." He would say to all drunkards, "Come and join us; you have long been miserable: you will be miserable, both for time and eternity, if you continue where you are. Come with us and we will do you good." Many drunkards have been reformed. At Bl ckburn there were 3 or 400 reformed drunkards. In the 3 or 300 towns he had visited, he had not found one in which there were not reformed drunkards.

The address of Mr. Whitaker appeared to produce a powerful impression, and he was much cheered.

* * * *

The moral influence of habitual Sabbath-keeping and uniform attendance upon public worship, is most powerful and salutary. The rest which the Sabbath brings—its quiet, sober meditation—its opportunities for intellectual improvement and for household instruction—the walk of cheerfulness and respectability—its delightful associations and the spell nature and tendencies of its ordinances—the regard for public welfare which it promotes, and the elevating and purifying truth with which it environs the soul of those are calculated to render the Sabbath, in connection with the pulpit, the most desirable instrumentality in the promotion of general morality which can possibly be presented. If a church will make most of a sabbath—if a pastor will improve it to inculcate every moral virtue in connection with evangelical sentiments—if the duties of the domestic constitution, especially, should be steadily enforced, and its high and glorious bearings be unfolded—the morals of the whole community in 6 months would be materially improved. The spirit of improvement, once in the manner commenced, would propagate itself, and the results of this system of action would be permanent. We fear that many men would endeavor to arouse on this subject, will not read these remarks; or if they do read them, will not immediately begin to act on the principles which they inculcate.

We would be glad to urge, in this place, upon the friends of the Sabbath, a greater strictness in keeping it; but although it is an important topic, we can only say now, that the inconsistencies of the church, particularly, give great encouragement to the sabbath breaking interest in our land.—N. Y. Evangelist.

Aaron Burr.—An exile from his country, he wandered in poverty a stranger in other lands; and when at last he returned to his own, it was to encounter the harder calamity of being treated, as a stranger among his country men. All the recollections produced by a present which had no comfort, and a future which promised no hope, he surrendered himself without shame to the grovelling propensities which had formed his first step on the road to ruin, until at last, overcome by disease, in the decay of a worn out body and the imbecility of a much abused mind, he lay a shattered wreck of humanity, just entering upon eternity with not enough of man left about him to make a christian out of. Buried from the pomp and notice which had passed from the busy scene one who might have been a glorious actor in it; and when he was laid in his grave, society congratulated itself that a nuisance was removed, and good men were glad that God had had seen fit to deliver society from the contaminating contact of a festering mass of moral putrefaction.—N. Y. Review.

Long Yarns.—It is stated in Mr. B ine's history of the cotton manufactory that the manufacture of cotton thread has arrived at such a state of perfection, that three hundred and fifty hanks to the pound has been produced, each hank measuring 840 yards, and the whole amounting to one hundred and sixty seven miles.

This is pretty long thread—but Mr. Murray in a pamphlet published in England on the pheasantium Tenax, or New Zealand flax, states that a pound of flax has furnished a much longer thread than the above. He says there have been specimens of linen thread, the value of which has exceeded its weight in gold: and there is to be seen at Valenciennes, in France, two pounds weight of flaxen thread, it tended for the finest specimens of French lace, valued at two hundred and fifty pounds sterling, and the length of the thread is 2, 390,400 feet or about 452 miles, making the length of thread from one pound of flax about 226 miles.

Important to Farmers.—In the winter of 1810, a disease prevailed among the cattle to an alarming extent; some farmers lost more than one half. I have at this time nineteen head of cattle on my farm, which were kept confined in the barn yard; they were watered at a trough standing near a hog house. I watched closely those that were affected with the disorder, and observed that they would very often after they had drank, turn to the old hog house and feed over to eat the clay from between the logs, that is when the ground was hard frozen and covered with snow. Knowing that all animals are governed by instinct and seldom ever eat that which is not beneficial, I determined to try the experiment—accordingly I procured a quantity of clay, and offered it to them, which they greedily ate from my hand! They were afterwards fed with clay twice a week until the snow disappeared, and never were cattle so healthier, or in better condition, when the spring opened—Since then to the present time, 1838, my oxen, cattle, calves and sheep, when the snow and frost has prevented them from obtaining earth or clay for themselves, have been supplied.

I've fed it to calves in the spring and summer, when it has been found beneficial to remove their appetites, when they refuse to eat, correcting all acidities of the stomach, and stopping all scours, as magnesia does children. Any person, I hams—he had one in the winter and sheep, and two in a hundred, since I commenced feeding the clay; and out of one hundred and forty sheep, during the last winter, I lost not one, and most of them were good mutton. During the last winter, the sheep of Dr. Butler, an extensive wool-grower, were taken with the scours and many died, before he was aware of it. I immediately had clay dug up and shawed, and fed to them, after which he lost not another sheep. I am perfectly satisfied that it is as necessary that cattle and horses should have clay given them in winter, when the ground is covered with snow, as it is that they should have salt in summer; and as to sheep and calves, should rather mine should do without salt than without clay.

Hints to Farmers.—Never feed potatoes to stock, without boiling or steaming them, as this increases their nutritive qualities.

One bushel of flaxseed ground with eight bushels of oats is better for horses than sixteen bushels of oats alone, and will effectually destroy the botts.

Never burn all dry wood in your fire-places, nor ever have a fire-place, when you can get a stove.

Cut your trees for rails in February, as they are most durable.

Never dew rot your flax, unless you wish to render it worthless.

Never select your seed from the crib, but from the stalk.

Never feed out your best potatoes and plant the refuse, nor sell your best sheep and keep your poorest.

A fat ox is worth more than a poor horse, and does not eat so much—a yoke and chain can be bought for less money than a wagon and harness.

'Tis true, that like the bird of prey,
With haves, I have marked my way;
But this was taught me by the dove,
To die and know no second love;
This lesson yet hath man to learn,
Taught by the thing he dares to spurn,
The bird that sings within the brake,
The swan that swims upon the lake.
One mate and only one will take.
Then let the wretch still prone to range.
And sneer on all who cannot change,
Partake his joys with boasting boys,
I envy not his varied joys,
But I deem such heartless foul
Base passions very measure tool.

An Eventful Year.—The year 1812 was probably the most eventful in history, ancient or modern. England was convulsed by the riots in the manufacturing districts; Mr. Perceval lost his life, and at his death commenced the detestable reign of Liverpool and Vansittart: Wellington took the towns of Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajoz, and won the battle of Salmanca, Spain abolished the Peerage and the Inquisition, and proclaimed her new Constitution; all South America was in civil war; and Napoleon fought the battle of Wilna, Smolenski, Brodino, and Moscow, and finally saw his mighty host perish in the snow:—the English likewise took Atmarez and Seville, and witnessed disgrace and defeat from the Americans at sea and in the Canadas. In this eventful year no less than three millions of Christians were armed for reciprocal carnage, and all Europe and America were made slaughter houses of the human race. It is supposed that more than one million of men, women, and children were butchered or otherwise sacrificed in that memorable year.

At the commencement of the action on board the President frigate, a ball (an 18 lb. shot) from the Belvidere came over the waist cloths of the President, and such was the force of the ball that it actually cut off, without throwing them down the muzzels of several of the muskets (left there by the marines) from six to eight inches in length—killed one marine—took off the wrist of one midshipman, Mr. Montgomery—killed another, Mr. Buck, together with the quarter gunner, and finally lodged upon the deck, and was taken below by the narator of this, and shown the third lieutenant, Mr. Dallas, who took it in his hand and wrote on it with chalk—Cousin, I have received your present, and will return it again—clapt it in the gun himself, and fired the peice; and it is a remarkable fact that it actually killed several of the officers and men on board the Belvidere, and finally lodged in the cabin of that vessel; and was afterwards hung up in the Belvidere's cabin as a globe during the war.—Portland Stand.

A Great Yield of Corn.—It seems to be a difficult matter to convince our Farmers that, with proper cultivation, one acre of ground is capable of being made to yield as much as eight or ten acres, tended in the common way. We see it stated that Chief Justice Buchanan, of Maryland raised the past season 700 bsls. of Corn on 50 acres of land—being 14 bbls to the acre. In this section of country, such a product will hardly be credited yet, if our Farmers would make an experiment with a single acre, ploughing and manuring as it ought to be done, they will find that equal success will attend their exertions.

Great Gale at Mackinac.—Letters from Mackinac give accounts of a tremendous hurricane there on the 8th and 9th ultimo, which demolished all the wharves but one, drove the light ships ashore, and blew down the light house on Bois Blanc island. The weather had been very moderate, although there were nearly two feet of snow in the woods, with but little ice. The winds, however, were severe, and during the gale the water rose two feet. The damage was very great.

The Baltimore Theatre was entirely consumed by fire on Saturday morning, Feb. 3d. The Baltimore Chronicle, of Monday gives the following account of it:

The fire, by which the splendid Theatre and Circus at the corner of Front and Low streets was destroyed on Saturday morning last, will long be remembered as one of the most distressing occurrences in the history of our city. About half past 4 o'clock on that morning, one of the grooms in attendance upon the stables attached to that establishment, discovered fire falling through the ceiling over one of the stalls. In a few moments afterwards, the whole of the flooring over the stabling, which formed the stage of the theatre, was in flames, and it became apparent that the interior of the building must have been burning for some time. So rapid was the progress of the fire, that the grooms had barely time to release two of the horses, poor see, dogs, goats, and deer, belonging to the corps, but all in vain. The heat and violence of the fire forbade all access, and in a very short time the noble stud, the admiration of all who had ever beheld it, was utterly destroyed, in a manner calculated to move the sympathies of the most insensible. Not one of them were saved, the old stallion, who had accompanied the corps for the past seven years—the splendid horse Mazeppa, the very embodiment of Byron's idea of "the fiery steed"—the Burmese ponies—the Angola pony, the beautiful goat, the half reasoning fawn, all, all perished, miserably, in the most excruciating tortures.

When the doors were burst open, the fawn the constant companion of one of the ponies, ran into the street—but missing its mate and alarmed, probably, by the noise and confusion, it turned about, rushed into the stable and shared the same fate of its fellows. In the mean time, the flames were doing their work of destruction most effectually, in other parts of the building. The scenery decorations and platforms, used in the representations of Mazeppa, and the costly wardrobe of the company were consumed almost in an instant, and in less than an hour not a vestage of the building was left but its blackened walls. The front of the House fell out, soon after daylight, with a tremendous crash, carrying, in the fall every thing in its way. Fortunately no lives were lost.

Mr. Cook's loss is not only enormous, but entirely irreparable. His stud of horses, and his collection of the other attendants upon a circus company had, we are credibly informed, no superior in the world. Forty of the persons attached to the company belong, either nearly or remotely to Mr. Cook's family. All of the members of the corps were distinguished for the correctness of their moral conduct, and for the propriety of their deportment in society. Their calamity excites the unreserved sympathy of all our citizens, upon whom their unobtrusive merits had already made a deeply favorable impression. We have heard the loss estimated at $80,000, and this, we should think, rather within than beyond the question.

The circus was one of the largest in the world. It was capacious enough to accomodate 3000 persons, with ease. We are told that the dimensions exceeded these of Astley's in London, or the Cirque Olympique (Franconi's) in Paris. It was commenced in 1827 and finished in 1830, at a cost of $42,000. It was insured to the amount of $3000 in the Firemen's Insurance Co. of this city—the directors having in vain endeavored to effect insurance to a greater amount. Mr. Cook had expended $3000 in the decorations of the house.

Military Encampment.—The Trenton Pike Infantry Corps have resolved to hold a military encampment for five days, in May next, on the revolutionary battle ground in the vicinity of Trenton. In order fully to effect the object, and to cherish friendly intercourse and courtesy, a committee has been appointed to send special invitations to the commanding officers of all companies that would be likely to join the encampment.

A Gramatical Discovery.—In one of the principal schools in Edinburg, a few weeks ago, as the master was examining his pupils on the plurals of nouns, after having passed dice, teeth, geese, and many others, he asked one, whom he had not previously questioned—what was the plural of penny. The boy, with great coolness and apparent certainty of being correct, replied —Twopence. The laughter that succeeded may well be imagined.

Singular.—A lad, while skating a few days since on the canal, about two miles west of this village, discovered an open box under the ice, containing a double barreled gun and 107 sovereigns, ($500) the sovereigns were contained in a not work purse, probably the sum total of worldly wealth of some adventurous emigrant passing west during the past season.—Wayne Sentinel.

The Eastern mail (via. Boston) in crossing the Hudson last night, broke through the ice. All the bags were saved, except one. The horse in drawing the sleigh was drowned. Several passengers had their trunks well soaked, but recovered them all.—Albany Journal of Friday Evening.

Righteous Retribution.—A drunkard occupying a house in 5th st. Philadelphia, went home drunk on Saturday night and after whipping his wife and turning her out of doors, he went to bed and it is supposed set fire to the curtains with the candle.—His wife had sought shelter in a neighboring house. He was burnt to death but the House was saved!

NATCHEZ, (Miss.) Jan. 15.—Mississippi rail road.—That noble structure which has for some time past been erecting by the Mississippi Railroad Company over the St. Catharines Creek, about three miles from Natchez is now complete, and on Saturday last, for the first time the locomotive with the train of cars passed over it. The road is now finished to within a short distance of Washington, the space of six miles residue of the road to Washington will be completed in a few days.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Mr. Rives introduced his substitute for the sub-treasury bill on Friday, Feb. 2d, and it was postponed till Monday, when it will be considered.

On Saturday, the Senate did not sit.

The house was occupied all day with the Mississippi election.

On Monday, Feb. 5th, the Senate took up the Sub-Treasury bill, and Mr. Rives occupied the greater part of the day, in an eloquent speech in favor of his substitute.

The House passed a resolution by a vote of 118 to 116 that Messrs. Prentiss and Word are not members, and that the Mississippi seats are vacant.

A resolution was then adopted, 118 to 116, to communicate the result to the governor of Mississippi.

Tuesday, Feb. 6th.

In Senate.—Resolutions from the general assembly of Tennessee, instructing Mr. Grundy to vote against the sub-treasury scheme, were presented to the Senate by Mr. Grundy, with the remark that he should obey them.

The sub-treasury scheme was taken up, Mr. Rives concluded his speech.

The house adopted resolutions to allow Messrs Prentiss and Word the usual per diem compensation, by a vote of 136 to 41. They would not however receive it. It is said that had all been present, the expunging majority, on Monday, would have been 4 or 5.

Wednesday, Feb. 7.

In Senate, Mr. Hubbard spoke at length in opposition to Mr. Rives, in favor of the sub-treasury scheme.

A bill was reported to occupy the Columbia or Oregon river.

In the house, the N. E. boundary question came up.

New Jersey Legislature

On Friday, Feb. 2d, in assembly, the bill to erect the new county of Mercer, passed, by a vote of 27 to 20. The bill was ordered to a second reading in council, in the afternoon.

Saturday, neither house met.

Monday, no quorum present, adjourned.

Tuesday, Feb. 6.—In Assembly, the bill to authorize the Morris and Essex Rail road to borrow money, and for other purposes, was debated in committee of the whole, most of the day.

Wednesday, Feb. 7.

No quorum in council, morning and afternoon.

In Assembly, petitions were received for alterations in the licenses laws, and to prevent the desecration of the sabbath by canal and rail road companies. The bill for the improvement of the judiciary, was taken up, in committee of the whole, and debated some time, when the committee rose and reported.

In the afternoon, the house took up, in committee of the whole, the bill to provide for a more equal representation of the several counties.

The bill provides that after the next census, each county shall be entitled to one representative for every 6,000 inhabitants.

Thursday, Feb. 8.

In Council, many petitions and memorials were received—for the new county—against horse racing, &c. The bill reducing the capital of the state bank at Camden, was read, and ordered to a 3d reading.

In Assembly, the bill to equalize the representation of the counties was passed, 33 to 16.

The bill to facilitate the administration of justice, was passed, 33 to 14.

The bill to repeal the charters of the banks granted last winter, was taken up; but the house refused to engross the bill, by a vote of 13 yeas to 35 nays.

The further Sup. from council, to the Elizabethtown and Somerville rail road, (extending the time for completing the road to 1843) was ordered to a 3d reading.

Long cars are becoming quite the rage on rail roads. If improvement continues its rapid course a person will have only to get in at one end in Jersey city and get out of the other at New Brunswick.—Rahway Herald.

The steamboat Gladiator was wrecked on the Mississippi, while bound down, on the 19th ult. 600 bales of cotton were lost. The crew and passengers were taken off by another boat and carried to Vicksburg.

A great quantity of counterfeit $3 bills on the Weybosset bank at Providence, are in circulation—the paper is dark colored, but strong, and appears as if oiled.

The tax on Grog shops, in New Orleans is put down at $42,000, for the year 1838; on Real Estate and Slaves, $44,000.

Business on the Ohio Canal.—The Portsmouth Tribune of Jan. 23d says, that transportation has been active since the resumption of canal navigation. The collector reports the following in the produce line, as having arrived between the 6th and 21st inst. Pork, 8,031 barrels; flour, 5,571; whiskey 561; lard 176 barrels and 4,644 kegs; butter 108 kegs; cheese, 141 casks.

Passion for Dress.—A young lady aged 16, at Greencastle, in Indiana, lately committed suicide in consequence of a reproof from her father for wearing her best dress when washing clothes and a chastisement from her mother for striking a younger sister.

Professor Silliman, it is said, received $1800 for his recent lectures before the Mercantile Library Association, New York.

Living is excessively dear at Houston, the capital of Texas, viz:

Perseverence.—The celebrated author of the Life of Columbus, thus expresses himself on this subject: Let those who are disposed to faint under difficulties in the prosecution of any great and worthy undertaking, reflect that 18 years elapsed after he conceived his enterprise, before he was enabled to carry it into effect; that the most of that time was passed in almost hopeless solicitation, amidst poverty, neglect and taunting ridicule—that the prime of his life had wasted away in the struggle; and that when his perseverence was finally crowned with success, he was about 56 years of age.

Stereotype printing was discovered in 1700, by John Muller, a minister of Leyden. His first method was that of soldering together, after the page was composed, but afterwards he had plates cast from a plaster of paris, or metal mould, as done at this day. He and his son published various works printed in this manner. It is extraordinary that the art was suffered to fall into oblivion and re-invented a century later.

The term Secretary was first applied to such as, being near the king's person received his commands. These were called clerks of the secret, whence was the title Secretary.

There was but one secretary of state in England, till about the reign of King Henry VII.; then two were appointed, owing to the increase of business, both of equal powers, and both called 'principal secretaries of state.'

Mischeivous and malignant outrage.—About two o'clock on Friday morning, there was an explosion of a bomb shell, in the Chapel of Harvard University. The report was loud, and the concussion so heavy as to create considerable jarring of window shutters and doors, of houses at some distance. It appeared on examination, that the shell was seven eights of an inch thick, and the cavity of five or six inches in diameter. It was laid on the floor or platform in front of the pulpit, evidently with the intention of destroying that fixture. The force of the explosion, however, took another direction, and but little damage done to the pulpit. Six or seven peices of shell passed directly through the ceiling. Other peices took a more horizontal direction, and did considerable damage to the seats. No one was much injured, but whether by explosion or other means was not ascertained. The principal damage was in the destruction of glass.—nearly all the windows having been completely destroyed. The wall directly over the pulpit was defaced with drawing and writing of an insulting and indecent character. It is supposed the cost of repairing the damage will be four or five hundred dollars.—Boston Cour.

Anagrams.—The following examples from the N.-Y. American are more than ordinarily felicitous. They are introduced in that paper with the remark:—It would appear sometimes that the letters composing some words were selected with a determination, that if by any accident they should be transposed, they should only compose other words meaning the same thing, for example punisament transposed, makes 'nine thumps'—Astronomers,' transposed makes 'Moon Starers;' and on this same principle we find the new title of 'Sub Treasurer' furnishes that make the corresponding title—a sure buster.'

We understand that the most exagerated reports are circulating in Monmouth and other parts of the country, that Trenton is full of small pox. We have it as true had a few, but a very few cases, most of them very slight; and we are told there are none at all now.—Trenton Gaz.

Anthracite Coal Ashes have been proved to be good manure. The gardens in Pottsville, Pennsylvania, we are assured, bear the strongest and most gratifying evidences of their fertalizing effects, they being there a favorite manure. If they possessed no other specific virtue, the property they do possess, of warming, loosening and intimately dividing, disintegrating the particles of tenacious clays should render them, in the estimation of all judicious farmers, a valuable means of improvement.

A Remarkable Church.—The 'First Church in Hingham has had but five pastors since its establishment in 1688, viz; Hobart, Norton, Gay, Ware and Richardson. The ministry of Mr. Hobart was upwards of forty three years; Mr. Norton's about thirty eight years, and Dr. Gay's nearly sixty nine years. He died March 18, 1787 So, that for nearly one hundred and fifty-two years from the establishment of the church, it had but three pastors, and for upwards of 200 years, but five pastors, two of whom are still living, viz: Dr. Ware, professor of Theology at Cambridge university, and the Rev. Mr. Richardson, the present minister.

The times have sadly changed in this respect. Instead of only five pastors in 200 years, we have new pastors about every two years. There are few—too few—exceptions to this rule, and men's talents, and enjoy the happiness of listening on the Sabbath to the voice of the pastor who baptised him. —Boston Transcript.

Another Battle in Florida.—The steamboat Forrester arrived at Savannah, the 29th ult. from Gray's Ferry, with intelligence that Lieut. Powell, with 80 men, had an engagement with about 300 Indians near Jupiter inlet. Lieut. Powell, commenced the attack, but the Indians returned it with spirit, when the sailors ran, and had it not been for the artillery they would all have been cut to pieces. As it was, all our officers were wounded, and Lieut. McRea, Dr. Leither, and 4 privates were killed. The force under Lieut. P. consisted of sailors and regulars, and in consequence of the hasty retreat of the former an ammunition boat was lost. Lieut. P. was led to the Indian encampment by a squaw.—Bridgeport Farmer.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, February 14.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Our Congressional and Legislative proceedings this week appear rather slim, but that is not our fault—neither body seem to have done much.

The Morris County Post is defunct—its life was short indeed.

The editor of the Rahway Herald states that since he has commenced his weekly Herald, his patronage has much increased—that 120 names has been added to his subscription list. Very glad to hear it. The Herald deserves a liberal support, which it will doubtless obtain. "May it live a thousand years;" and at present, alone in Rahway.

Capt. Gregory, of New Haven has been appointed to the command of the Exploring expedition, and has accepted the appointment. The squadron is to consist of the sloops of war Vincennes and Peacock, ship Relief and schooner Active. The appointment is said to be a very proper one, and Capt. Gregory, it is said, will sail immediately, without making a single proclamation on the subject. A Yankee being appointed to the command, we have reason to suppose that the expedition will now go ahead.

New York Evangelist.—We regard this as one of the most, if not the most valuable of our exchange papers: and one of the best religious journals in our land. Good as it was in the hands of its former proprietors, it is now we think considerably improved. In talent in piety and high toned morality, and in the amount of valuable reading matter, it is excelled by none; and it is well calculated to be eminently useful.

The inhabitants of Connecticut are about commencing the Housatonoc Rail road, which reaches from Bridgeport to Albany by the way of West Stockbridge, through the Housatonoc valley. This is a work of much importance, and will doubtless yield a good per centage to the stockholders and be of vast benefit to the country through which it passes.

Would that the inhabitants in these parts would follow their example, and complete the Somerville and Elizabethtown Rail road forthwith—it is much needed.

The Kilby bank, at Boston, has got up again, it redeems all its notes under $10, and will ultimately redeem all.

The liabilities of the American bank, Boston, amount to about $400,000, and its assets to over $900,000. Good enough.

The Boston banks generally are said to be in a very sound and healthy condition.

Counterfeit $1 50 notes of the Weybosset bank are in circulation. We saw one this morning.

The Washington letter writers state that the Sub-Treasury scheme, will pass the Senate by a majority of three.

The Charleston Patriot, of Jan. 31st, says the celebrated Indian chief, Osceola, died on the day previous, at Fort Moultrie, of an affection of the throat, after an illness of a few days.

A most destructive and terrible tornado passed over a portion of Surrey county, North Carolina, on the 18th of January, which did much damage. It was severely felt in Hamptonville, in the destruction of property; but it was not ascertained that any lives were lost.

Since the commencement of the 2d volume the circulation and patronage of our paper, has increased rapidly. Last week, though we printed 25 or 30 more than our usual number, we did not have enough to supply our subscribers, by about 40: having an unexpected increase of that amount in one week. Hereafter we will endeavor to supply all.

Mr. Trotter, a Van Buren man has been elected to the United States Senate, by the Mississippi Legislature.

Very Late from Europe.—Paris papers to Jan. 1st, and London dates to Jan. 5th are received at New York.

The insurrection in Canada was attracting much attention. Intelligence had been received as late as Dec. 4th. It was reported that the brig Inconstant of 36 guns had been ordered to the coast of Spain to receive a battalion of Marines for Canada. She had taken 1000 muskets and military stores.—The 93d Highlanders, and others corps, had also been ordered over.

A Destructive Fire broke out on Davis' Wharf opposite the Tower (London) on the 28th Dec., which destroyed 3000 barrels of turpentine, with great quantities of oil and other inflamable materials, and three brigs lying alongside were also loaded with similar articles. All were destroyed. The fire raged from half past 6 in the morning until 1 P. M. 5000 barrels of turpentine and 800 tons of oil were consumed, besides three brigs and a warehouse full of grain. The oil alone was worth $200,000. The whole loss was estimated at £120,000, or $600,000.

The N. Y. Senate have rejected the small bill law, which passed the Assembly some time since. A bill has passed since authorizing the banks to issue small bills for two years, requiring them to pay specie for them on demand.

Mr. Grant of Philadelphia commenced on Thursday last, at 2 o'lock, P. M. his arduous match against time, to ride 300 miles in 24 successive hours, over the Bergen course at Hoboken, in this state. The stakes were $1000 or 2000. At 8 oclock, P. M. he had ridden 80 miles, and did not exhibit much fatigue. At a quarter past 12, on Friday noon, he had accomplished only 239 miles, and he gave up in despair, as he had only 1 hour and 40 minutes left to ride 61 miles in. He used 15 horses in the attempt.

It is reported that a mad dog was killed in this place during the last week,after having bitten 2 boys. It is not certain, however, that the dog killed was mad.

We learn with pleasure that farms are selling at high prices all over the country, both in this state and in New York. We are happy to see that farming is coming once more into fashion.

Mr. Editor :

Will you give insertion in your paper, to the following queries on music, which may elicit an answer that will interest many of your readers, in this delightful part of Christian worship, and oblige, CONQUEROR.

1. Since the major scale is much more prevalent in musical composition than the minor, how does it happen that the primitive major has C instead of A to commence with in the application of the seven letters to the staff.

2. Why does the modern minor scale differ in its ascending and descending series ?

3. Can any sing with the spirit and the understanding also, while the congregation are moving to and fro at the commencement of the communion service ?

Congressional.—On Thursday, Feb. 8th, Mr. Tallmadge, of New-York, addressed the Senate at length, in opposition to the sub-treasury plan.

In the House, after some debate respecting the U. S. bank, the N. E. boundary was taken up.

Friday, Feb. 9th.—In Senate, Mr. Smith, of Indiana, spoke against the Sub-treasury bill.

In the house, Mr. Muhlenberg, of Pennsylvania resigned his seat, having been appointed minister to Austria.

The bill granting land for the completion of the Washington Monument was passed.

The bill appropriating $100,000 to the heirs of Robert Fulton, was also passed.

Both houses adjourned to Monday.

Legislature.—In Council, on Friday last, the bill reducing the stock of the Camden State bank passed. In Assembly, the further Sup. to the Elizabethtown and Somerville rail road passed.

On Saturday, in council, the bill to regulate the weight of grain, was read a 2d time, and ordered to a third reading.

In assembly, the bill to incorporate the Boundbrook mutual Fire co. was read a 2d time, and amended.

On Saturday last, the building in Market st. Newark, used by the city council, was destroyed by fire ; and Wm. Johnson's currying shop, opposite was nearly destroyed. All loss fully covered by insurance. So we learn from the Newark Daily, of Monday.

Harrisburg, Feb. 6. 1838.

The Susquehanna "closed up" from bank to bank on Sunday night, for the first time this winter.—Intelligencer.

The ship Grafton, sailed on the 3d instant, from Savannah to Liverpool; with 1043 bales of upland cotton.

Shocking Suicide.—The New York American after showing by quotations of prices paid for the paultry article called tallow, that bills on England are virtually six per cent. below par, proceeds to remark—

Can any one doubt that under such a state of things, specie must flow in here from Europe ; the cost of bringing it here, from London for instance, is about two per cent.—leaving a profit of four per cent. for an operation of 60 days.

But it may be said, Exchange may rise again. How, or why ? There are some 900,000 bales of cotton to go forward, which will nett probably between 30 and 340 per bale, equal to a sum of say—Thirty two millions of dollars. Our commercial debt to Europe—so long a bugbear as now, we imagine, admitted pretty generally to be paid—so far as it is exigible at present. It is certain, moreover, that new orders for foreign manufacture and produce are few in number, and comparatively very small in amount. Hence there must remain a very large balance to our credit, from the sales of this one article of cotton —to say nothing of tobacco, naval stores, peltries, fi ughts, &c.

In the face of such a balance, Exchange can go no more rise than the waters of Niagara can flow back into Lake Erie. We therefore repeat that specie must come here ; and that, in such a view of the case—a view as clear and well founded as any mathematical deduction—Our Banks are bound to declare their purpose of resuming at a day named.

The House of representatives of Maine have, by a vote of 94 to 6 repealed the law of the previous Van Buren Legislature, prohibiting small notes.

The New York board of brokers have made a donation of $500 to the central committee for the relief of the poor.

Spanish Church Bells in N. Y.—There are 60 fine bells now in custody at the Custom House in N. York which were purchased in Marseilles last winter, by an American gentleman. They were sent to that place and sold by order of the Spanish government for old copper, having been taken from the convents and churches. The consignees have received orders to sell them at cost, which, with the duty, is from 27 to 30 cts. a pound. They are in perfect preservation ; weigh from 100 to 1700 lbs., and are said to be of very superior tone and finish—altogether better than any that can be made here. The bell metal of the olden time contained a portion of gold and silver. Some of those now in N. Y. are 60 years old.

Profitable Company.—The Schuylkill Navigation Company has declared a half yearly dividend of twelve and a half per cent. The extraordinary profits of this company are derived from a regular and permanent source—the transportation of Anthracite Coal to the Philadelphia market. The quantity which passed through the canal during the year 1837 was about five hundred thousand tons. The present price of the stock is about three and a half times above its par value.

Another Victim to Quackery.—An inquest was held on Saturday the 27th ult., on the body of Albert G. Sherwood, a barber, aged about thirty years. From the evidence before the jury, it appeared that the deceased had been ill about three weeks, during which time, until two days before his death, he had been attended by Dr. Sweet, a botanic practitioner. The usual course of steaming, and administering lobelia, composition tea, &c., was gone through with, but without any beneficial results. A consultation of botanic physicians was then called, and it was decided that the treatment of the medical attendant had been such as the case required. On Tuesday Dr. Sweet gave his patient up, and Dr. Davis, a regular practitioner, was called in, but the deceased was then beyond the reach of medical aid, and died on Thursday. The body was examined by Drs. Post, Gilman, and Davis, whose testimony was such that the jury brought in a verdict that the death of the deceased was accelerated by medical treatment while under the hands of Dr. Sweet. —N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"The Better Currency."—We received from a subscriber in the South, the day before yesterday a remittance of $45 in Alabama and Mississippi bank notes. On sending to exchange them for current notes of this city, the most we could get for them was thirty five dollars and twenty five cents, a loss of nearly ten dollars in forty five.—Nat. Int.

The Vermont Telegraph cautions the public against receiving bills purporting to be an order on "Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Burlington, Vt. and issued by the "Mechanics Exchange Company, payable to "R Ray, or bearer"—dated New York, Oct. 31, 1837" and signed, "W. K. Jones, President, T. A. Welsh, Cashier. The same company have issued orders of a similar kind on the bank at St. Albans.

A Mammoth Ox.—Messrs. Holden, Bathgat Lewis, and Macbeth, butchers of Centre Market have recently purchased the noble Ox Independance, a Durham short-horn, raised by Mr. Peck, of Gennessee County, New York, and fatted by Mr. Barnes of Buffalo. He is 6 years old, weighs upwards of 3000lbs., and cost $500. He was brought to town this morning and may be seen at the stables of the Park House.

Fire and loss of Life—Two of the long range of three story brick buildings in Laurence st. N. Y. (running from Broom to Spring.) comprising Peter Lorillard's Tobacco factory, were burnt about 8 o'clock last evening, with their whole contents.—Loss $20,000—insurance $10,000. The fire originated in a stove. John Buckloh, a firemen of No. 19, was thrown from a ladder and killed, by a falling wall. One or two other firemen, we regret to see, were injured.

Between Saturday night and Monday morning the broker's office of Wyman Osborn, in State st., Boston, was entered by means of false keys, vault door forced open, and about $9350 in specie taken therefrom.

Fatal Ride.—John Biggs, a youth of 21, was riding a horse that had been used as a racer near Van Deveer's Mills, Somerset county, on the 1st inst. when the animal ran furiously down a steep hill and fell with such force against a fence that both horse and rider were instantly killed.

The Potomac, arrived at New York from Vera Cruz has 56,297 Mexican dollars.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions of the natural secretions of both, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 20 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matte they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalise arterial action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

SEAR'S PILLS.

GREEN BROOK Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times and in all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all in his power to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever asked Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination.

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being stuck through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,

C. Postley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbosh cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmstell's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts, embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood—and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—and the choice and selections from the best new publications both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged for the purpose—and finally by due journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of Art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessor in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best talent in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained The sum of $3,000 will be paid for the original tales and sketches in the first volume of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Select items from popular journals abroad will serve to give variety, and render it one of the most piquant and fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the reputation of the preceding seven volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that in every respect the most piquant in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of America scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the New York Mirror.

Without a Rival.

By T. S. Fay.

"There was never any thing so beautiful from the palette of mere mortal!" exclaimed old Bertolo Limalvie.

"The boy has signed a contract with the father of mischief, for by no other means that I know could this be effected!" said d'Antonello.

"What delicacy—what brilliancy—what harmony of coloring!" observed Donato.

"I am really perplexed and confounded," rejoined Berto. "I begin to believe there is magic in it."

"All the master spirits of Florence," remarked a fair lady of high rank, who, at one the rest, had come to gaze upon the painting—"all the master spirits of Florence may hide their heads now."

"Your art, signors," added her companion to the surrounding artists, "can produce nothing like that."

"Did you say a boy?" demanded the lady.

"Ay, madam, and with a shape as seemly as my own; and that is something, I ween."

"So young and handsome!"

"His face is as fair and unsullied as any on in a own canvass—as fair, I had almost said as yours, madam."

"Nay, then, if it be so, it were worth a coronet to woo him."

"And have you never, is it possible, beheld him?"

"Never, how should I; he has been away—abroad; he has just returned to Italy."

"Ay madam; but before he went, and since his return he has, I am almost afraid to say, often crossed your path."

"Mine, Giulietta! what do you mean?"

"Alas, madam, this young painter loves you, has long loved you with a kind of adoration which belies so only to enthusiasm, refinement, intellect and genius."

"How you run on! You are a child, Giulietta—you jest."

"No, madam."

"And if you do not, what care I. This young man is audacious if he presume to think of me before I have interchanged a word with him—before I know his character, or listen to his voice."

"Ah, but madam, you have listened to his voice." It was he who sung beneath your window last year, and who saved you in the path by the river from the ruffian Bandenelli. Despairing of your favor, for genius is ever modest, he withdrew from Florence; and went abroad to foreign lands—beyond the Alps—I scarce know where. There his genius for painting drew all eyes, and he has earned that great fame, that no noble or recluse and no painter more renowned. He has just returned. This is his first work here. The critics are all in raptures, and his brother artists are dying of envy."

"Well, I hope he has long ago forgotten me," said the lady with a passing blush. "I remember the boy you speak of, a mere child; noble and generous, but a silly boy. I never supposed he had been bold enough to think of me; pray if his doubloons cured him. It was an idle dream."

"Am I so madam, Signor Dominica loves you yet; he sought me yesterday and to say the truth, inclined me to persuade you here that he is not worn your opinion of his production."

"It is most beautiful it is heavenly; but where found he a face so lovely, not on earth, surely?"

"Is it your portrait, madam, from memory, and he has succeeded finely."

"Hush, Giulietta, your tongue has no bounds."

"Look, madam, he has entered the hall at this moment."

"Let us go, Giulietta, instantly."

"It is too late."

"He is too bold to you, Giulietta, and with the prettiest blush. Yes, it is the stranger who has so mysteriously hovered near me—gained an interest in my heart, and then abandoned me."

"What have I said? Ah! Giulietta, you have betrayed me; you have made me betray myself. He is coming this way too."

"Yes, he approaches—he retreats—he will retire—you may never see him again."

"Well, let him come, I will speak to him."

At a sign from the maiden, the young man approached, with a deep obeisance and a colorless brow perceptibly at the unwonted honor of being thus publicly presented to the haughtiest and most beautiful of the Florentine nobility.

"Young painter," said the lady, resuming her self-possession, and with a grace and sweetness that dazzled the eyes and the heart of that fierce worshipper of beauty, "your production which has attracted the attention of all Florence, has not escaped mine. It has afforded me unmingled pleasure."

"I am too much honored," replied the artist in a low voice, "when such eyes deign to dwell even for a moment upon the humble work of these hands."

"No," said the lady, raising her dark, soft eyes modestly to his, and then lowering them beneath his ardent gaze, "you are wrong; genius like yours is humble only to itself. It might ever want to all other minds is perfection; and even when it most triumphs, unconscious of its power, it most despairs."

"Speak again!" said the youth. "Years of toil, of despondency, of solitude and hopeless gloom are repaid by the sound of your voice. Oh! speak again."

"You may claim from us of the present day what will be certainly paid you by posterity, the meed of praise. Report speaks of your having travelled."

"I am but just returned from Flanders—"

"Where you have been studying the delightful art in which you so far excel all your cotemporaries."

"Did you mark that?" said Castagna, a Florentine artist, in an under tone to his companion.

"Silence," said the other, "let us hear the rest."

"My time was devoted to study and one other occupation."

"What was it?"

"Or it for the absence of one I loved."

"Is it in the north that you have learned this matchless skill of the pencil?"

"I am the possessor of a secret."

"A secret!"

"Ay, by which, more than by any skill of my own, I produce on the canvass the effects which please you."

"Ay such a frank acknowledgement, you shake my faith that you have something better than a skilful hand—genius heart. Nature ever by way to temute. We have on this side of the Alps been seeking so beautiful. In what way can I express my gratitude for the pleasure you have caused me in matter more substantial than words?"

"You embolden me to give utterance to a request which has long dwelt in my breast."

"Speak it. I know you would ask nothing which I may not grant before you name it."

"Yonder face," said the painter, in a lower tone, "is the copy of one image only in my memory, and till I again see the original I deemed it not wholly unworthy. But now I am in despair, my object is unaspired until I attain the triumph of my art by copying it anew from nature. I am a claimant for the honor of painting your portrait."

A slight cutor grew deeper at this request, and their eyes met. The lady opened her lips to utter a negative to so bold a request, but as she encountered the glance of the young aspirant, she changed her mind.

"Signor Dominica, I consent, you may take my portrait. Addio, signor."

"I'm artist bowed.

"At four to-morrow at the palazza D——."

"Madam, I shall be punctual."

And they parted.

Dominica had received from nature the gift of genius. The same partial providence which had invested him with inspiration, had given him the form of Narcissus and the heart of Leander. The lady of his dreams was like himself of half celestial mind and form. To his enthusiastic soul this young creature had presented herself as the star of evening. He watched and worshipped it as something above his reach—a light created to illumine other and distant spheres. What was his wild emotion when certain tokens awoke in his bosom a hope, a dream, an instinct, as indefinable as the light which first heralds the morn, but more interesting than the breath which rises from the valleys and plains, when nature is most tested with the evening dew. He had cherished only two burning hopes—the one was fame, the other love. The first he had acquired. Europe began to murmur his name with applause, and now, as if fortune had resolved to fill his cup to the very brim—the wildest and most delicious vision of his fancy was about to be realized. He was going to stand before that young seraph, whose eyes had already said more than his tongue dared to utter, more than his heart dared to dream of. He muttered to himself in a sort of blissful forgetfulness—

"To-morrow—to-morrow—at length to-morrow—still an hidden hours—oh, when will it be to-morrow!"

"A secret," cried the knot of artists, gathered together in conclave in the grand square by the old tower.

"I know as much," said Berto.

"I could have sworn it," said Antonello.

"To be sure," exclaimed a third, "I always said it was a secret."

"The lucky dog!" I too will visit Flanders!" cried Berto. "I am only five-and-eighty, quite a boy."

"And how my haughty mistress, who queens it so before the rest of us, how she solicited in his favor"

"He is a rare fellow and rolls in gold."

"Sure will marry him if she wants—she is young and inclined—and her own maid was with it."

"Jupiter, what a lucky dog!"

"I swear," said old Berto, "I will go to Flanders too."

It was night, and a very bright moon slowly ascending in the heaven, rendered every thing as visible, only in more softened outlines, as in the day. The young lover had wandered forth on a cluded path by the river, through thick groves. He was not long allowed to be alone. Castagna the friend and guide of his infant years, joined him, and they conversed earnestly a long time. At length Castagna said

"Dominica, you know I have ever cherished for you an affection all paternal. I have watched over your interests with fidelity and vigilance. I have been your best friend."

"And so I esteem you, dear Castagna."

"But what is fries ship, Dominica? It is mutual confidence. If you have trouble you communicate them. If you have pleasure, you divide them. Ah! I have a suit for friendship. Too well I know what it is! Too long I have gifted for a true and full return."

"Am I not your friend?"

"No!—oh no!"

"No!—how—you jest?"

"You hold a secret from me, Dominica. Between friends there are no secrets."

"But Castagna, this is a part of my profession. To ask it of me is to ask my fame. You are yourself so good an artist that you stand at the head of the art in Florence."

"Not since you have returned."

"But I freely confess to all that, not skill alone but a remarkable mechanical discovery only, places me in the eminence which—how—you weep, Castagna—"

"Did I—why I believe there was a drop—I felt it race to my lids. I did not know that it had left my tear-es. I am old, and tender-hearted—and sometimes I think that I am almost falling into my second. Yes Dominica, I did shed a tear—not from disappointment at being the secret—oh, no!—but at the fading away of a vision—a rainbow of the heart—a bright, beautiful fabric—My dear and good Castagna, what is it you would say?"

"Your friendship, my beloved and once trusted Dominica. I thought it mine. I pleased myself with the idea that you loved me. Except yourself, there was no one on earth to whom my heart clung securely. I have seen you a boy at my feet. I have watched your course to manhood with a father's solicitude and delight. I have not always perhaps, sufficiently discovered my feelings—but—"

"Yes, my dear Castagna, I know you have always loved me. You once saved my life at the risk of your own—"

"I did. I was determined not to remember that incident first."

"Moreover, when I was in want, you furnished me with gold."

"That too, I feared you had forgotten."

"And, Castagna—perhaps—indeed, I feel convinced that I have not been right in concealing from you my inmost thought and knowledge. Yet in refusing to you the secret which you desire, I am about to make a great sacrifice. You are now the first Florentine artist after myself. Possessed of this secret, you will be the first!—Yet on condition that you never reveal it, it shall be disclosed to you."

"I solemnly swear it, dearest Dominica."

"Know then, that at Burgus I met a learned man, who taught me to despise water-colors, and to paint—"

"Well!"

"In oil!"

"In oil!—I see. And you have told this to no one?"

"Not one human being this side the Alps has the slightest conception of it but we two. This paper contains the details. It will teach you all you desire. Now, have I not tested my friendship, Castagna? Have I not earned your confidence?"

"Nobly, Dominica—most nobly—embrace me—and my thanks be—this—and this—and this!"

The countenance glanced from a glittering blade; its keen point, at each thrust pierced deep to the heart.

"There was a heavy splash in the river—the cloud sailed silently from before the moon—the breeze gently waved the tree tops—Castagna stood whole.

"A length!" cried he—"at length, then, I am the first in Florence. I am without a rival."

This incident, which marked the introduction of oil-painting into Italy, is related on the authority of Lanzi.

Agriculture.—The most important of all occupations of man, as well as every other country, is that engaged in the cultivation of the soil. Blot out of existence the mechanical occupations, and you deprive society of the conveniences and elegancies of life. But blot out of existence the agricultural occupation, and you deprive man of the very means of subsistence. The mercantile occupation may be considered important to the well being of the country, but it will only depend on the products of the farm and the workshop for its commodities of trade. Now the trading the rest ve importance of these occupations is so obviously in favor of the agricultural and the mechanic, and especially the former, the almost universal impression is, that the laboring classes are altogether dependent on the other classes.—But the fact is not so. For with a farmer cannot live without the mechanic? Yet what mechanic can live without the farmer? What laboring man that cannot in ke a shift to live without the rich? But what rich man that can live at all without the laborer? The dependence, we admit, is to some extent reciprocal, but the balance of dependence is decidedly on the part of the rich. The laboring classes can better live with the assistance they derive from the rich, whereas the rich cannot live at all without the assistance they derive from the laboring classes. Or will a man would a man's money be, if it would buy neither house, furniture, clothing, nor food? It is high time that the laboring classes, and we see only the office of the soil, should have that respect shown them which the importance of their occupation demands. The man who has not self respect enough to look for his proper place in the public estimation, is the one who can be bought and sold like the productions of his farm and work shop, which he offers for sale in the market, and can easily be reduced to the most abject of slavery.—New Bedford, Gaz.

"Effects of the Experiment.—The population of Poughkeepsie has decreased 600 within the last twelve months."—N. Y. Whig.

As a legitimate consequence, if the effects of the Experiment should continue, we suppose the population of every place would decrease in the same ratio, but query, when that transpires, where will they go to?—Somerset Messenger.

Nicknames.—A late English periodical states, "It is notorious that in the mines of Lancashire there are numerous instances where females, after having enjoyed the marriage state for several years, only know their husbands and legal wives by the nicknames custom has given them, as if not by their real names; may in some cases it has actually happened that the men do not know those own names. We have heard of a similar case, which occurred in Salem several years since, of a Marblehead man, who actually knew not his own name. A case of law was being tried at one of the courts, and the name of John Ferguson was called as one of the witnesses. There was no answer. The sheriff called out, "is John Ferguson in court." No answer. Judge Story who was then presiding, rose up and said "May it please your honor and the Court, I will call the witness, Skipper Jhorgy!" Upon this an old weather beaten mariner stepped out, and squirting his tobacco juice, sung out, "Here I am sir," to the infinite amusement of the whole Court, who were instantly convulsed with laughter.—Dedham Adv.

Irish Blunders.

The answer of one of the officers of the British brigade to the French King after an action, was long a source of amusement in France, and is still on record as an instance of the pert and bisquerie of the sons of St. Patrick. The King in portioning out his royal praise, observed that one of the regiments had behaved with great gallantry, "as was evident from the number of its wounded." "Yes, your Majesty," said the impatient and gallant Major, jealous for the honor of his own battalion, "they behaved well; but I only take leave to say, we behaved better; they might have had more wounded, and we left more to them; but not were all killed!"

This talent goes through all ranks. We remember to have heard a woman, who was scolding her brute for some pranks, exclaim, "Well, you little villains, if I can make nothing of you as sure as I live I will tell both your fathers!"

"My Lord," said a fellow condemned to be hanged for sheep stealing, "all I ask of your lordship is, that I shall not be hanged on a Friday."

"Why?" asked the judge, in surprise. "Because," was the answer, "it is always counted a mighty unlucky day!"

"Never be critic upon the ladies," was the maxim of an old poet; remarkable for his homage to the sex; this only is in the duty we hold that a true gentleman ever will attempt to look at the faults of a pretty woman is to also Sleepers.

On the late importation of the colored and figured French nightcaps, an Irish Barrister, who had made a purchase of half a dozen of different patterns in Bond street, was asked, what he meant to do with so many? "Why, to be sure, wear them all till I see which I like best." "What, in the dark?" "No; I sleep with a light in the room. But how does that change the matter, if you are not asleep?" "Oh, the clearest thing in the world; from the cradle I had a habit of sleeping with my eyes open."

"Is there any ford here?" asked an English tourist who came suddenly to a full stop before one of the little mountain torrents of the west of Ireland. "Oh, to be sure, your honor, there was a ford," said a peasant standing at the brink, and making a hundred gesticulations of rowing. "When was it?" said the tourist. "Before the bridge was built," said the peasant; "but when man and horse went over the bridge, the ford got out of the habit." "Well, now that the bridge is broken down, I suppose the ford may have got into the habit again. Is it safe?" "To be sure your honor, all but in the middle, but that is nothing; and if you can swim, there is no better ford in the country." "But I cannot swim." "Then, your honor the only safe way that I know of is, as soon as you get out of your depth, to walk back again."

"If we go to law," said a wealthy landlord to his tenant, "we go into Chancery: and out of Chancery neither of us will ever get till we get into our graves." "I am of the same opinion;" I want to get into neither one nor the other—so let us go to a referee or," said the tenant; and if you do fervere down on a lofty ox, let the latter not be sold, by an auction." Well, be it so, but on this condition," said the man of wealth, that, if he can not make a decision, we shall take an appeal on both sides."—Blackwood.

Important Fact.—A mixture of lime water and sweet oil is a sure and rapid remedy for scalds and burns. The lime water and oil, in proper proportion, form a substance rather thicker than cream, and if will be agreeable to all that use it. Apply it with a feather, or soft rag, and the pain of the burn will be immediately allayed.

Aphorism.—Life has a double goal—the grave we seek, and the grave we find. We seek it too long as we escape.

The pleasantest country is the shire-town of the worst county. for natives, (behold Judy,) and strangers.

Napoleon's Tomb.

Oh let not with willows his ashes be shaded!
Oh, let not the cypress wave over his grave!
For though the last leaf of his laurel hath faded,
Such trifles unhallow the tomb of the brave.
What! shall he whose ambition though vast and mistaken,
Still thirsted for more than a world could supply—
Shall that hero be mourned like a maiden forsaken,
With a poor, drooping willow, a tear and a sigh!

No! if emblem must be, take the pine newly riven,
That on Ocho's proud top checked the tempest-borne cloud;
Whose towering height drew the lightnings of heaven,
And was riven and blasted, but never was bowed;
But no emblem is wanted—his deeds live in story,
Recorded alike in his fame and his doom.
And the world he has shaken, his record of glory,
And him than a world would dishonor his tomb.

A sermon by Dr. Channing, on the occasion of the death of Rev. Noah Worcester, D. D. recently preached in Boston, has been published.—It is in fact not in this pamphlet, that an autobiography of this eminent man, and able advocate for peace, left by himself, will soon be published.

The following extract will give some idea of the character of Dr. Worcester:

"In the midst of War, Dr. Worcester adopted opinions which are thought by some to be extreme. He interpreted literally the precept, 'Resist not evil;' and he believed that nations as well as individuals would find safety as well as fulfil righteousness in yielding in literal obedience. One of the most striking traits of his character, was his confidence in the power of love. I might say in its omnipotence. He believed that the surest way to subdue a foe, was to become his friend. That a true benevolence was a surer defence than swords, or artillery, or walls of adamant. He believed that no mightier man ever trod the soil of America than William Penn, when entering the wilderness unarmed, and stretching out to the savage, a hand which refused all earthly weapons, in token of brotherhood and peace. There was something grand in the calm confidence, with which he expressed his conviction of the superiority of moral to physical forces. Armies, fiery passions, quick resentments and the spirit of vengeance miscalled honor, seemed to him weak, low instruments, inviting and often harvesting the ruin which they are used to avert. Many will think him in error: but if so it was a grand thought which led him astray.

Samuel Hearn.—When worthy Samuel Hearn, famous for his living, preaching and writing, lay on his death bed, rich only in goodness and children, his wife made much womanish lamentation about what would become of her little ones. "Peace, sweetheart," said he, "that God who feedeth the ravens, will not starve the Hearns."

Consistency.—Is this consistency, said I to myself, when I compared the sanity of the life with the seriousness of the discourse, and contrasted the vacant way in which it was spent with the decent and devoted manner in which it was begun and ended. I recollected that under the early though imperfect sacred institution, the fire of the morning and evening sacrifice was never suffered to be extinguished during the day.—Hannah More.

Education.—The education of the present race of females is not very favorable to domestic happiness. For my own part, I call education not that which smothers a woman with accomplishments, but that which tends to consolidate a firm and regular system of character—that which tends to form a friend, a companion and a wife. I call education not that which is made up of the shreds and patches of useless arts, but that which inculcates principles, polishes tastes regulates temper cultivates reason, subdues the passions, directs the feelings, habituates to reflection, trains to self denial, & more especially, that which refers all actions, feelings, sentiments, tastes, and passion to the love and fear of God.—Ib.

Principles.—Praying without instilling principles, might be as inefficacious as instruction without prayer. That it was like a husbandman who should expect that praying for sunshine would produce a crop of corn in a field where not one grain had been sown. God, indeed, could effect that but he does not do it; and the means being of his own appointment, his omnipotence is not least exerted by his directing certain effects to follow certain causes, than it would be by an arbitrary act.—Ib.

Parental Defect.—God, never meant however that religion was to be transferred hereditarily like a hair loom, but the promise was accompanied with conditions and injunctions. It would generally be found that where the children of pious parents turn out ill, there has been some mistake, some neglect, or some fault on to the part of parents, that they had not used the right methods.—Ib.

The Pantheon, once called the Church of Saint Genevieve, is a sort of unto al monument. It is an elegant building, in the form of a cross, supported within and without by Corinthian pillars. The dome is particularly lofty and beautiful.—On the walls, are four gilt tablets, on which are inscribed the names of two hundred and eighty seven citizens, killed in the revolutions of 1830. The crypt is fitted for the purpose of receiving monuments of distinguished persons. One guide, with a lantern escorted us to the subterranean regions where we wandered among the tombs. Suddenly he came to a stand, and raising the lantern to the face, discovered to us features expressing a scornful sneer, which made me start.—It was a statue of Voltaire. While there, another party came in, preceded by the guide and lantern and dodging every now and then from behind the pillars of the crypt, it seemed like being in the regions of the dead. In the evening went to see the celebrated Tagliani, at the Academie Royale de Musique, being her first appearance for some time. The house was so full as it could be packed, and I could hardly get a peep: but I saw such dancing as I never beheld before. It is most appropriately called the poetry of motion. Visited an exhibition of Sevres porcelain; should like to send home a set, but it rather exceeds my purse. The Hotel des Invalides, is the largest building in Paris if not in the world. It is an asylum for maimed and superanuated soldiers. The chapel connected with it, and especially the dome is much admired, and is considered the finest thing of the kind in Paris. Beneath the soldiers of Napoleon are here to be seen in their cocked hats and military dress; some with one arm, others minus a leg. They are all well taken care of, and have nothing to do. Near the Invalides, is the Ecole Militaire, and the Champs de Mars, where one hundred and fifty thousand men have been paraded.—Letters from Paris.

The Ohio.—No river in the world rolls for a thousand miles a current so smooth and peaceful, its 80 tributaries wind through as many valleys, in ten different states. The first in size is Tennessee, having pursued a navigable course, thro' 8 states, for more than 1000 miles, falls into the Ohio, 50 miles above its mouth. The Cumberland, 62 miles, being navigable for steamboats to Nashville, and for keel boats 300 miles further. The Wabash, 130 miles. Green river, 380 miles from the mouth of the Ohio—navigable 201 miles and 200 yards wide at its mouth. Kentucky 504 miles, navigable 150 miles, and as many yards wide at its mouth. Great Miami, 252 miles. Scioto, 741. Great Kanhawa, 850 miles, navigable 64 miles to the Salines, where annually is made from 500,000 to 700,000 bushels of salt. Great Muskingum, 951 miles. These are the principal auxiliaries which give substance and strength to the beautiful Ohio. In its course of more than 1000 miles, it washes six states, and with its tributaries, has more than 5000 miles of navigable waters. Its mouth is 600 yards, with the exception of its lower fifty miles, is an even width over 1000 yards. The average rapidity of its current is 3 miles an hour. The average decent is a mile is about 6 inches. It sometimes rises 50 or more feet. At low water its surface at Cincinnati is supposed to be 130 feet below the level of lake Erie; and 130 above that of the tide water of the Atlantic.

Tea—Coffee—Tobacco.—Three plants, at this moment, connect three different quarters of the world, which for ages would have known but little of each other without them.—China is connected with England by scarcely any other link than her tea: for three hundred years tobacco was the sole link between England and the western world; and Arabia is to the hour scarcely bound to us but her coffee. Such are the slender but powerful sources of natural connection. The discovery of coffee was not made not I the latter part of the thirteenth century, and, like most by another great discovery, it was the result of accident. "Peace, sweetheart," said he, "that God who feedeth the ravens, will not starve the Hearns." Sheik Omar, fell under persecution in his own country; he and his disciples fled to a mountain in the province of Yemen, where, in the desert, all usual food failed him; a coffee berry there grew wild, and the distressed refugee, as it was too hard for him to masticate, tried its effect in boiling; he drank the liquor, found himself revived, and made it immortal. Yet, recommended as it was by its refreshing properties, its spontaneous growth, and its morris, and in the case by the mankind by the example of a fool or knave, who called himself a saint, coffee took upwards of two centuries to make its way into the world. Even in its country it was as dishonored as a prophet among his kindred; and near as Egypt was, it was not till the third century from its discovery that it insinuated itself into the sober potations of Egypt. It is seldom that the world is indebted to superstition for any thing more than carnivals and cardinals, but the fellows of the 4 ale devotees in the land of the Pharaohs, who won golden opinions of men by extravagances that would degrade the mules they ride on, were the first pioneaye of Egyptian coffee-drinking. Those wretched people, spending half their nights in watching, and half their existence in mortifying the withered flesh on their hungry bodies, found coffee essential to keep their bodies and souls together. The Turk has adopted it. It suited his gravity, his inactivity, his sedentariness, and his stupidity. The showy barbarian wanted nothing but tobacco to complete the curse which, to the slave and the sensualist, turns all the enjoyments of the senses into evil. Tobacco came to add perpetual intoxication to his catalogue of wilful calamities. It is a remarkable instance of the perversity of the human will when left to itself, that flesh on their vanity with all its angular powers of cheering the mind and refreshing the nerves, took nearly four hundred years to make itself known in Europe, and while the potatoe is scarcely more than coming into use in a large portion of the Continent, tobacco took little more than a half-a-dozen years to be known as far as ships could carry it; that it is now the favorite filth of every savage (so within the circumference of the globe; that it fills the atmosphere of the Continent with a perpetual stench; that the Spaniard sucks a cigar as he says for the best—the Dutchman for the cob.—the Frenchman because he has nothing else to do—the German because he will do nothing else—the London apprentice because it makes him look like a gentleman,' and all because it is in its own nature the filthiest, most foolish, dullest, and most disgusting practice on the face of the earth.—Blackwood

The Vine.—A gentleman of Cincinnati, Nicholas Longworth, Esq. who has had a great experience in the cultivation of the vine, in a letter published in the Cincinnati Express, respecting the vines of the present year, says that the day is not distant when the banks of the Ohio will rival the rivers of France and Germany in the quantity and quality of their wines. But, after an experience of twenty five years, and a waste of time and money in the cultivation of a great variety of foreign wine grapes, I recommend to all persons establishing vineyards to discard foreign grapes, and confine themselves to American varieties, and the producing of new varieties from their seed."

Forget not in all your plans and operations that there are two worlds the present and future.

A Notable Express.—The Baton Register states that Mr. John Mann, who brings the Express Mail into that village from the West, "a few days since, when severe frost had rendered the road hard as adamant, as rough and stony as the keen blast could make it, paying the mail stage dog-gard to carry him on the next five mile post, returned the shivering animal to his stall—shouldered the mail bag, put off on foot, and actually accomplished the ten miles in an hour and fifteen minutes! This is more than one horse could reasonably have performed in that time, owing to the bad state of the roads. Mr. Mann is a native of Pennsylvania, 23 years of age, and weighs 130 lbs. He is a well put up chap, fair nerve and sinew. He says he is good for a ten mile course at any time, over any kind of a track, Mann is a man every inch of him; and we commend him to the gracious notice of the sovereign head of the Post office Department.—Columbus (Ohio) State Gazette.

Animal Magnetism.—On Wednesday, the 10 inst., we were present to the number of 15 or 20, at Mrs. Parker's in Broad street, to see an experiment in animal magnetism to be made by Dr. Fisk, dentist of Salem, with Mrs. S., a young lady of this town, 17 years of age. We were told that Mrs. S. had been magnetized the preceding evening for the first time, that while in the magnetic sleep she seemed to be insensible to pain and among other things, to experiments made on the wrist, the marks of which still appeared. At about 3 o'clock P. M. she came into the room where we were assembled and took a rocking chair. Dr. F. having taken a chair before her, proceeded to magnetise her by the usual gestures or passes. In about 20 minutes she appeared to be asleep, not regarding in any manner what was said to her, the startling noises that were made, the pinching of her ear, and other attempts at the spectators to rouse her.

Dr. F. then said he should have that tooth taken out—She did not seem to hear him, but when he asked her to show him the tooth, she put her finger upon one, of which she was said to have complained several days. Dr. F. having first cut about it, took hold of it with a forceps, and pulling pretty hard while he made 4 or five motions from side to side, he extracted the tooth. It was one of the upper grinders, and was evidently pretty firmly set. Yet during the operation she gave no signs of pain, or any degree of uneasiness by any motion or any expression of her countenance. When the magnetiser awakened her soon after, she felt the loss of the tooth, but had no recollection of the operation. It is but justice to say, that the character of the parties concerned, as much as to repudiate the supposition of any desire or intellect to deceive, and we feel called upon particularly to say that this defunte young lady is one of the last persons who could be suspected of any departure from the support of imposture, or to have succeeded in feigning sleep during a painful operation, if she had been disposed to do so. All the circumstances of the case are very strong, and the whole scene did not fail to convince the most skeptical of the company of the power of animal magnetism. The company consisted of most of the physicians of this town, together with other citizens, who can testify to the truth of this report.—Lynn Record.

A Pleasant Customer.—The following letter, says a Boston paper) was sent to one of our Congress street friends. We have suppressed the names, as the story is broad; but the reader is assured but the epistle is genuine:

"Roxbury, Thursday morning.

"Mr. ——apprehends that, through mistake his tax black pantaloons were seated with old cloth; for although they have scarcely been tenanted half a dozen times, no less than 3 rents have occured. As Mr ——wishes to enjoy his seat, 'rent free,' he being tenant in that, Mr. W. will please to rectify the difficulty as soon as, or rather the 'breeches,' and return the amended' articles early to morrow morning."

From the United States Gazette.

Astounding Disasters.—Should the public opinion of my review for the month of January, in the United States Gazette of the 21 instant, I have been solicited to give a statement of the probable number of vessels lost during the year 1837, as it was in the review that the number was greater than had been in any one year, for a long series of years. I would premise my statement by saying that my information has been obtained from respectable newspapers, printed in various seaport towns in the United States, but more particularly from the Sailor's Magazine, a most excellent periodical, edited and printed by Mr. Greenleaf, in the city of New York.

The whole number of vessels, counting only those which resulted in total loss, was no less than four hundred and ninety one! And the loss of lives in these vessels, as reported, was 1295!

The rates of of the vessels lost are as follows, viz:

Ships and barques, 95; brigs. 135; schooners, 234; sloops, 12; steamboats 15. Total 491.

Most of the vessels in the above melancholy list, were American. Forty three of them were lost towards the close of 1836, but the intelligence of their fates was not received here until 1837. Thirty eight were lost in the month of January, 54 in February, 24 in March, 39 in April, 19 in May, 15 in June, 32 in July, 50 in August, 32 in September, 43 in October, 44 in November, and 7 in December. The precise time when the remaining vessels were lost could not be satisfactorily ascertained.

No doubt it has been owing to the loss of an uncommon number of vessels, in the east of England also, during the year 1837, that the ships have almost universally prevailed, that a majority of the shipwrecks have been owing to a want of nautical information and good seamanship; and this is presumed to be the foundation of a proposition which was introduced by Lord Sandon into the British House of Commons, (in November or December last, if we mistake not,) "that the Commissioners should be appointed to examine into the qualifications of all persons presenting themselves as Masters and mates of merchant vessels

[It is a most salutary proposition, which ought to be adopted in every mercantile country.] G. P.

Our Banks.—We have been waiting some days for an opportunity to present the annexed abstract of the condition of our city banks, showing conclusively their strength and unquestionable ability to resume payment.

This abstract, freed from all details presents the simple fact, that to meet seven millions of liabilities, there are thirty-five millions of assets.

New York City Banks.

Capital,	$20 000,000
Surplus Profits,	3,000,000
Due the State in 1839, and available till then, at least,	2,000,000
Present available capital,	25,000,000
The loans by the banks are $5,000,000, of which there may be in liquidation by extension five millions, but say ten millions.
The banks owe, deposites,	10,000,000
Circulation,	3,000,000
		13,000,000
They have specie,	2,000,000
Due from other states, and available within 60 days by selling	5,000,000
		6,000,000
Leaving to represent		7,000,000
Their discounted notes		35,000,000

The country banks are ready and willing to resume. They have funds here to redeem their circulation, and are content to have them sealed up and sent home.—supposed about 2 1-2 millions.

*We are glad to see in the Journal of Com*merce of this morning, a thoroughly sound article on the subject of resumption. It demonstrates both the ability and the duty of the banks to name a day for resuming and argues conclusively, that no possible condition of things can be more discouraging or disastrous—even though all be realized that is apprehended by the most timid, as the consequence of New York resuming now—than that by which we are now paralyzed.

There is now absolutely no currency, and there can be none until by a resumption, general confidence be re-established. But the banks, until they do decide upon resuming and notify that decision, cannot inspire confidence. They neither discount nor issue their bills now. They could not, on the worst hypothesis, be in a more useless condition after resuming, whilst they might, be in a much better condition. Can there be a doubt then, that they should speedily announce their purpose to resume?—N. Y. American.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Monday, Feb. 12.

In Senate, many petitions and memorials on the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and against the annexation of Texas.

The Sub-Treasury bill then came up and Mr. Niles spoke one hour in favor of the bill and gave way to a motion to go into Executive business.

The House spent the whole day in an exciting debate upon a resolution introduced by Mr. Wise, of Virginia, which proposes the appointment of a select committee to examine into the charges made against some of the members of the House, in one of the Nos. of the Washington Spy. No decision was come to.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

The Senate was mostly engaged with a speech of Mr. Niles in favor of the sub-treasury scheme.

The House was occupied all day, with the charge of the Spy at Washington. Mr. Davis, the author was finally summoned to the bar, and having answered that he (the man referred to was not a member of the House) was discharged, and the house adjourned.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

In Senate, Mr. Perry Smith spoke in favor of the sub-treasury scheme.

The House was in a excitement nearly all day with the presentation of petitions by Mr. Adams, who entered with about three hundred from all sorts of persons, which he was determined to present one by one since the house excluded a disposition not to treat him courteously. Among them were 258 from 3,500 petitioners for the release of Mr. Patton's relations. When Mr. A. got through, hundreds of similar petitions poured in from all the free states.—Newark Daily.

We understand that on Thursday night a farmer in the north-east part of Hanover township heard a noise among his fowls in a tree near the house. He arose from his bed and examined the premises, when he discovered some dark object at a considerable height, and near the body of the tree. Thinking it to be an owl, he returned to the house, took his gun, and fired, when down tumbled a negro, severely shot in the head. It was a very careless piece of business in the fellow to go to his neighbor's hen roost at midnight. We advise our citizens to induce this farmer to remove to this vicinity.—Jerseyman.

Will our Legislature listen to the voice of their constituents and lay a heavy tax on the distillers of grain? Thousands of bushels of rye and corn are annually distilled into deadly poison, whilst the grain would support hundreds of families who know not one day where their bread is to come from the next.—Ib.

Alcohol Statistics.—It appears from returns made to the secretary of state for the year ending April 1, 1837, that in Massachusetts, there were 40 distilleries, at which 15,250 bushels of grain, and 3,403,824 gallons of molasses were used in the distillation of 3,174,411 gallons of spirits, the value of which spirit was $1,238,789! The quantity of spirit manufactured in this state would allow every person to obtain a fraction over 4 1-2 gallons annually.—Boston Journal.

Effects of Conscience.—The cashier of the Merchant's bank in this place, is famed to have he received a few days ago by mail, a letter containing $120, and requesting him to place it to the credit of Mr S——. The letter was without date, and signed "A Restitutionist."—Newbern Spec

Clear and Decisive.—Peter the Great, when in England, is said to have remarked to a confidant, that he was not aware of having more than four lawyers in his dominions, and when he got home he would hang two of them.

New Jersey Legislature.

Monday, Feb. 12.

In Council, the bill from Assembly to provide for a more equal representation was read and ordered to 3d reading.

In Assembly, Mr. Pennington, from the committee on corporations, reported the following bills:

To regulate the width of the draws in the bridge over the Passaic river. Ordered to 2d reading.

To incorporate the Godwinville turnpike co. Ordered 3d reading.

To incorporate the Shrewsbury Mutual Fire Insurance co. Ordered 2d reading.

The bill entitled an act respecting the office of Treasurer was read a third time and passed, nem. con.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

In Council, a petition was received from Essex, praying to abolish capital punishment. Laid on the table.

The act to incorporate the Jefferson Machine Works was passed.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, from the special committee on the bill erecting the new county, reported the same without amendment.

In Assembly.

The bill to authorize the sale of the real estate of paupers was taken up. An amendment was agreed to preventing the board of freeholders from selling the real estate of paupers until they had been chargeable 1 year.

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed.

The supplement to the act to incorporate the Patterson and Hudson River rail road was read a third time, and having been amended, the house adjourned.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

In Council, the bill continuing the charter of the Trenton Banking company for 20 years was passed.

The bill to alter and amend the charter of New Brunswick was read a third time and passed.

The bill from assembly for the more equal representation of townships, was read a 3d time and passed.

A bill to incorporate the Plainfield Academy, was reported from the committee on corporations.

Council resolved itself into a Court of Appeals.

In Assembly.—A sup. to the Plainfield Mutual Assurance Fire company was reported from the committee.

Ordered 2d reading.

The house resolved that they would adjourn sine die on the 23th inst.

The House then went into committee of the whole and took up the bill to establish Public Schools.

The bill to authorize the sale of real estate of paupers was passed, 36 to 13.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

In Council, several petitions were received, and the new County bill taken up and debated, but no one important passed.

In Assembly, the bill to grant relief also was offered from the committee to whom it was referred that part of the Governor's message, relating to a Geological survey of the state:

Resolved, That the Librarian, under the direction of Professor D. Rodgers, be and he is hereby authorized to fit up such side of the room opposite to the library, who appropriate shelves for the reception of minerals and fossils that may hereafter from time to time be deposited therein Provided, the expense shall not exceed $100.

The House then went into Committee of the whole, on the bill relating to common schools, and most of the day was spent in debate thereon.

A girl eleven years of age was burnt to death in Washington, on the 25th ult. by her clothes taking fire. She went into the kitchen to put some coals on the fire, and was afterwards found a few yards from the house, dead, with her clothes still smoking, and the dog, cat, cow and hog, each of which she had been in the habit of feeding, all standing near by looking at her, and seemingly lamenting her fate.

A young man named James Spencer, of Baltimore county recently fell into the fire in a state of intoxication and was burnt to death.

The Terre Haute Courier of the 12th inst. says the Vincennes branch of the State bank of Indiana has been broken into, and robbed of $2,000.

A gentleman of Bos on having ascertained that his neighbor was in the habit of stealing his wood bored lengthwise into a fine log, filled it with powder, and plugged the end. The next day he neighbor's dinner pot was blown to atoms, with a great noise by the explosion, and the theft was discovered.

The last Vandalia, Ill. Free Press notices the starting of two waggon loads of specie, under an escort from Vandalia for St. Louis.

Wednesday before last $6,000 in bills were stolen from the Salem, Mass. stage, while stopping at Lynn.

Out of the 600 men, who constitute the crew of the U. S. ship Independence, upwards of 400 live on strictly temperance principles.

Phrenological Phenomenon.—In making experiments in comparative phrenology, a believer in that divine science mentions his discovery that neither the cat nor the horse developed the organ of music. "That's very strange," was the reply, since we make music of the entrails of the one and the tail of the other.

One of the famous Spanish bells recently imported, was hung on the New York City Hall on Wednesday last. It weighs 1700 lbs.—almost a ton!

The travelling on the Boston and Worcester rail road during the past year, a season of unusual depression and inactivity, has been nearly equal to 200 passengers daily, the greater part of whom passed over the whole road.

Temperance Meeting

The Young Men's Temperance Society will hold their Annual Meeting, in the Methodist church, on Thursday evening, the 22d inst. The Rev. Mr. Sanders will deliver an address.

E. MARSH.

Friends of Temperance, all! attend this meeting. Ye enemies too, attend! it may be of great benefit to you. Come and see!

We have been shown this week a most beautiful model of a ' Shingle Planing Machine,' invented by Mr. William Thorn, and made by M. G. Olmsted, both of this place. The model is made for the purpose of obtaining a patent. Mr. Thorn is now making one of the machines, and intends putting one into operation immediately. It is a very labor saving machine, and as far as we are able to judge eminently calculated to produce the effect intended.

Important from the Frontier.

News arrived at Buffalo from Detroit on the 9th inst. that about 500 patriots are assembled in the neighborhood of Black Swamp, Toledo and Monroe; under the command of the self styled Gen. McLeod, Sutherland, and others, and were well supplied with arms and ammunition. The soldiers at Buffalo left for Detroit the same evening, to assist Gen. Brady, who has the command there, and who is repre ented as being an active, efficient officer. It is said he will unhesitatedly disarm the patriots as soon as they come within his reach.—The Albany Evening Journal of Monday says, Van Rensselaer, with 4 or 500 of his followers are on their way to Canada.'

Gen. Wool has in charge the St. Lawrence frontier, and Col. Worth, the vicinity of Buffalo.

Cooke, who lost his circus at Baltimore, by fire, of which we gave an account in our last, is receiving large donations. Hamblin has given him his celebrated horse Muzeppa, and several other horses have been presented.

For our own part, were it not for individual losses, we should be pleased if all the theatres and circuses in the United States, should be burnt down, and not be built again forever.

☞ The Executive Committee of the American Temperance Union have addressed a circular to the editors of the political papers, throughout the Union, requesting them to receive their journal, and make extracts on the subject of temperance from it occasionally, that the reading contained therein may be more extensively circulated. And excellent plan this, and we for one, shall be glad to promote in this way, or in any other, the great cause of temperance.

We shall publish the circular in our next.

We give below the law which has lately passed, (for which we are indebted to Mr. Little,) in relation to our railroad, supposing that it would be interesting to the inhabitants of this section of country:

A Further Supplement to an act entitled, " An act to incorporate the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad Company," passed the 9th day of February, 1831.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the Council and General Assembly of this State, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that the time limited by the seventeenth section of the act entitled, "An act to incorporate the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad company," for the completion of the said Railroad, be, and the same is hereby extended to the 4th day of July eighteen hundred and forty-three, and that the said company be invested with all the powers and privileges necessary thereto, as conferred by the original act to which this is a supplement.

Sec. 2. And be it enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the said company to change or alter the location of the said railroad not exceeding in any case one-fourth of a mile from the line as now laid out and worked upon when the same may be done without prejudice to the usefulness of the said road, and the interest of the said company; and the said company after filing their act of incorporation they might or could exercise or enjoy, and to which they are subject respecting the land over which the road was originally located.

A fire occurred in Amherst, Mass. on Sunday morning of last week, which destroyed property to the amount of $25,000.

Foreign Rye is 103 cents a bushel in New York, and Southern corn, 82 cents. Cotton low and dull.

Wheat $1, at Pittsburgh. Flour, $5.

☞ The Bowery Theatre in N. Y. was again burnt down on Sunday morning last, and was entirely consumed, as also the theatre building. This is the third time that theatre has been burnt in ten years.

Legislative.—On Friday, in Assembly, the bill to incorporate Jersey city was passed.

The bill from Council, to incorporate the Bound brook Mutual Assurance Fire Company, was ordered to 3d reading.

It was agreed to that the act to abolish the punishment of death, be referred to the committee of the whole, and made the order of the day for Wednesday next.

Nothing of importance from Council.

In the U. S. Senate, on Thursday, Mr. Calhoun spoke in favor of the Sub-treasury scheme. One party says his speech was a most powerful and talented one, while the other party as much as run it down. Consequently it has received much notice.

In the House the Choctaw Treaty Reservation bill occupied the entire day.

Heavy Damages.—A jury in New York returned a verdict of $3000 R. H. Day, formerly publisher of the Sun newspaper, for a libel upon Andrew S. Garr, a lawyer of that city. The libel consisted in the publication of a malicious statement of an indictment which was found against Garr in 1818, as if it were new and without saying that he was honorbly acquitted, though knowing the fact.

The finest bridge in the U. S. is said to be that just built by the State of Pennsylvania across the Susquehanna, at Duncan's island, (mouth of the Juniata.)

Another Disastrous Battle in Florida was fought on the 24th Jan.—on the Lucas Hatchee, in which the Indians were defeated, though with the loss on the part of our troops, of nine killed and thirty wounded.

Gen. Jessup is amongst the wounded, having received a severe flesh wound, said to have been in the face. Nothing is said of the loss of the enemy, though supposed to have been great. Many cattle, ponies, and hogs, with other property were taken by our troops.

The two mammoth Gloucester Co.oxen, Durham breed, have been sold by Mr. Tompkins to the butchers of Washington city for $3,500—an unprecedented price for a pair of fat cattle. The Salem Banner congratulates itself that the M. C's will have to pay $1 a lb. or beef.

Important from Harrisburg.—Information was received last night, on the passage of Mr Johnson's resolutions, instructing our Senators in Congress to vote against the Sub-Treasury Bill now before the United States Senate. The vote stood —ayes 51; noes 49.—Philad. Herald.

A letter from Jackson, Miss., dated Jan. 22d, says:—The Union Bank-Bill, with a capital of fifteen millions, to be based upon real estate, passed both branches of the Legislature a few moments ago.

A Consolation.—A lady was complaining that she was nearly thirty. A person who knew her to be much older replied, "Madam every day relieves you further from your complaint."

Asses Heads.—A countrymen passing over the Pont Neuf at Paris, and seeing among a host of shops full of merchandize, that of a banker in which there was nothing but a man sitting at a table with pen and ink, had the curiosity to go in and inquire what it was that he sold? "Asses Heads," replied the banker; "They must be a great request," said the countryman, "since you have only one left."

A celebrated preacher used to tell his hearers that there were three companions with whom a man should always keep on good terms, his wife, his stomach and his conscience.

A Case Important in Exclusion.—In a suit which was tried yesterday in the Common Pleas, Judge Ulshoeffer presiding, it was decided to be law that a mechanic, employed by a person to use up materials into articles, can retain possession of the whole until he is paid for the labor. The case was an action brought by Robert O. Riley, a tailor, against K app & Bruce, Printers to recover $906. Of this sum $140 was not disputed by the defendants; and after it became due they employed the plaintiff to make up 2 coats, for which he was to receive $66. Before returning the coats the plaintiff brought this action for the united sums. The defendants demurred to paying for making the coats before they were returned to them but the court stated the law to be in favor of the plaintiff, and the Jury found accordingly.—N. Y. Sun.

There was another great fire in New Orleans on the 9th inst.

ECONOMY.—"My dear, you use too much butter on your bread," said a lady who had been married late in life, to her husband—"they will not make butter for less than twenty five cents a pound now a days." I do not know what they make it for," answered he, but I buy it to eat upon my bread."

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. Our considerable experience in the business, we are willing to recommend the following as to our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbock cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of these and Plein's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 3d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with numerous and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished contributors every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for the journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—sketches of the noted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessor in its literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $1000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the first of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs for and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of America scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen; the superior blackness which it acquires on the characters with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all seasons, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great- er Durability, and its ability to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Checks, Notes, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be imparted by Sea air.

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, to the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers of that rare but indispensable and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner or owners.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east part of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 16, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory references will be cheerfully given, whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout this country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency as a Purgative, Diaphoretic, Alterative, Diuretic, and Expectorant, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 20 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any case. Their effects when taken according to the directions, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic motion in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—a secretion in the liver and pancreas to its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize a certain action and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Circular of the American Temperance Union to the Editors of the Perodical Press in the United States.

Gentlemen.—The department of the Political Press, in its influence on public sentiment, may be regarded as one of the most important in the community. To it, the Temperance reform, in its early struggles and subsequent success, was greatly indebted; and the adequacy of other means to effect any important revolution in the moral and physical condition of the people, without its co-operation, may be justly doubted. Every successful effort to enlighten reason awakens reflection, gives elevation to character, and affords greater security for the prevalence of those principles and practices, upon which, in so essential a sense, depend the welfare and happiness of our common country. To your direction is especially intrusted this mighty moral energy. We therefore appeal to your patriotism and philanthropy, for such sympathy and aid as is peculiarly yours to give; and we do this with the greater confidence and urgency, because in our judgment, the subject is one deeply affecting all classes and all interests, and paramount to all party or political considerations.

The Temperance enterprise we regard as established on firm and enduring principles. Alcohol used as a beverage by persons in health, is never useful, but always injurious. If these principles are right, the opinions and practices of millions are wrong: and the importance of correcting existing errors on the subject, and awakening universal attention to their application, will be conceded without argument.

After all that has been done, the ultimate success of the cause is no longer uncertain. We have lived to witness the sublime spectacle of a mighty renovation in the habits of a great nation. Evidences in point are abundant and conclusive. Some sections of the country are already purified from intemperance; in all, the tone of opinion is changed; and the former drinking usages of society are no longer imperative.

We might point to the army and navy of the United States; to the improved character of our commercial vessels; and generally, to the increasing happiness and prosperity of the nation, as unquestionable proofs of the utility and practicability of our principles. It is a striking fact that while the value of the imports and exports of the country have in seven years more than doubled, and the demand for alcohol in the same time for the purposes of the arts and manufactures has increased in a like ratio, yet the importation of ardent spirits has diminished about two-thirds, and the decrease in the manufacture and consumption of domestic spirit is even greater than in the imported.

In the state of New York alone, the number of distilleries within a few years has been reduced from 1129 to about 200! Nor are these insolated facts. Everywhere, in proportion to light and effort, has followed the most encouraging results. In the consecrated emporium of the state named, amid the tide of opposing influence which there exists in constant activity, is exhibited a decrease of nearly fifty per cent. in the number of licensed liquor stores, and a ratable diminution in the cases of pauperism and crimes.

Similar facts might be added, almost ad infinitum from the temperance statistics of our country, which would form a mass of evidence irrefragable and overwhelming. But this is unnecessary. Our business is now with the future. We have reached a crisis in our history. The cause has lost its novelty, but none of its importance. We cannot now bring to it the interest of new investigations or new discoveries; but for future triumphs, with the divine blessing, must chiefly rely upon the diffusion and application of previously established principles.

For this purpose a national paper is already published, which is also designed to embody public sentiment, chronicle what is important in the enterprize, and gather up and concentrate such facts and information as may again be usefully disseminated. To reach all the readers in our great and growing country is a stupendous work.

But the cause cannot advance except as light is scattered, and the public mind is aroused to the consideration of the subject. and what other means so suited to carry out these views as the political papers now published? By transferring the matter thus prepared, to the columns of the political press, it will be simultaneously spread, in minute portions, and effect. Such, gentlemen, are the objects of this circular, to which we earnestly desire a favorable response.

The probable utility of this division and multiplication of labour will appear the more striking from the following estimates. No less than 1200 newspapers are published in the United States, with an average circulation of about 800 each. If each of these papers should republish in the course of the month, the substance of the articles in each Monthly Temperance Journal, the whole number of political papers, multiplied by the circulation would publish and disseminate an amount of matter equal to 960,000 copies of the Monthly Temperance Journal! But suppose it were half this amount, what human mind can compute the rich and varied blessings that would be secured to the country and the world by such a vast and continuous flood of light!

By this extensive circulation, the means of information on the subject would be placed within the reach of almost every individual throughout our wide spread country, and the chances of producing salutary impressions be so multiplied, that they who neglect the subject to-day, to-morrow will again have it pressed upon their attention, and thus be followed up from time to time, until it subdues indifference and commands assent. If this plan generally take effect, to the political journals will accrue the honor, and upon them devolve the responsibility of carrying on and completing the glorious revolution so auspiciously commenced.

We only add, that it is designed to send a copy of the paper containing this circular to every journal in the Union. And all editors who will send one paper to this office, containing a brief notice of the Journal, in token of acquiescence in the plan suggested, shall in return receive the successive numbers of the Temperance Journal, without expecting of exchange.

We are, gentlemen, yours very respectfully,

E. C Delavan, John Tappan.
J. H. Leavitt, Christian Keener.
Isaac S. Lloyd, Jesse T. Norton.

Bear Story.—A friend has permitted us to make the following extract from a letter received from his correspondent at Machias, (Me.) dated 2d inst.

"On Tuesday last, three boys went a few miles to catch a deer. They followed the track a mile or too, when they came unexpectedly across a bear's den. They had but one gun, and the boy who carried it fired it into the den, when out came two cubs, about a year or a year and a half old. The gun being discharged and the boys not having time to load it, threw it away, but as each had a knife, and the cubs ran in opposite directions, one of the boys followed one, and two followed the other. They soon came up with them, clinched in with them, and despatched them both with their knives. They then returned to the den where they found the old bear an enormous one, weighing about 400 pounds. The gun shot had wounded her in the head, but she was ready for battle. They fought her with clubs until they were tired; when at last one of them getting a little wolfish, drew his knife, and declared he would clinch her if he died in the attempt. They did clinch, and for the first half hour, they went end over end. At last old brutin seized him by the leg with her mouth, which gave him an opportunity to use his knife, which he did in such a manner as to compel her to yield, and give up the ghost. The boys then turned too, dressed the bear and cubs handsomely and went home. The next day they went with a sled, and hauled the whole to my store, where they where exhibited to a large number of people. The old one would stand as high as a man—say six feet." On the whole I think, it was rathrr a courageous fight for three boys. Their names were Marshall Harmon, Rufus Berry, and Otis Barscomb.

The Man of Leisure and a Pretty Girl.

The Man of Leisure called on Monday on Miss Emma Roberts, a blooming girl of eighteen. Emma was clear-starching. She was going on in the full tide of success, indulging in the buoyant thoughts of her age; there was a soft light about her eye, as she drew out the edge of a ficha, or clapped it with her small hands, as if they felt the influence of young hopes.

"I'm sure Harry Bertram looked at this collar last Sunday—I wonder if he liked it," thought she, and a gentle sigh escaped her. Just then the door bell sounded, and the Man of Leisure walked into the sitting room where Emma with a nice establishment of smoothing-irons had ascended herself for the morning.

"You won't mind an old friend's looking in upon you," said Mr. Inklin, with an at home air.

Emma blushed, loosened her apron strings, gave a glance at her starched fingers, and, saying "Take a seat, sir," suspended her work, with the grace of natural politeness. In the mean time, the starch grew cold and the irons were overheated. Emma was not loquacious, and the dead pauses were neither few nor far between. Emma, rendered desperate, renewed her operations, but with diminished ardor; her clapping was feeble, she burnt her fingers, her face became flushed, and by the time the Man of Leisure had given out his body, a gray hue, and an indelible smutch disfigured Henry Bertram's collar.

Mr. Inklin soon called again, and met Harry Bertram. It was not the influence of coquetry, but Emma rallied her powers, and talked more to Mr. Inklin than to Harry, a modest youth, thrown somewhat into the shade by the veteran visitor, who outstayed him. Harry, who was not a man of leisure, could not call for several days; when he did, Mr. Inklin had "dropped in," before, and was twirling his watch-key, with his cold wandering eyes. Emma sewed industriously, and her dark lashes concealed her eyes. Her cheeks were beautifully flushed, but for whom? Mr. Inklin toyed with her work-box, without seeming to know that he was touching what Harry thought a shrine.

Harry looked a little fierce, and bade good night abruptly. Emma raised her soft eyes with a look that ought to have disabled a reasonable man, but he was prepossessed, and the kind glance was lost. Emma wished Mr. Inklin at the bottom of the sea; but there he sat, looking privileged because he was a man of leisure.

The fastening of the windows reminded him that he must go home, for he did not limit his evening calls to an hour. Emma went to her bed-room. She was just ready to cry, but a glance at her mirror showed such bright cheeks that it stopped the tears, and she fell into a passion.

"Henry Bertram is a fool," said she, "to let that stick of a man keep him from me. I wish I could change places with him."

The man of Leisure "just called in," twice a week for three months. Report was busy; Harry's pride was roused. He offered himself to an other pretty girl, and was accepted. Emma's bright cheeks faded, her step grew slow, and her voice was no longer to be heard in its gay carol from stair to stair. She was never talkative but now she was sad. Mr. Inklin continued to drop in; his heart was a little love-touched, but then there was time enough. One evening he came with a look of news.

"I have brought you a piece of Harry Bertram's wedding-cake," said he to Emma.

Emma turned pale, then red, then burst into tears. The man of leisure was concerned. Emma looked very pretty as she struggled with her feelings, while the tears dried away; and he offered her his heart and hand.

"I would sooner lie down in my grave than marry you!" said Emma, in a voice so loud that Mr. Inklin started, and rushing to her apartment the china rang in the closet as she slammed the door. Mr. Inklin was astonished. Poor Emma covered up her heart and smiled again, but she never married, nor ever destroyed a little flower that Harry Bertram had given her when it was right to love and to hope.

The Man of Leisure and the Pale Boy.

"You'll please not to forget to ask the place for me, sir," said a pale, blue-eyed boy, as he brushed the coat of the man of leisure at his lodgings.

"Certainly not," said Mr. Inklin, "I shall be going that way in a day or two."

"Did you ask for the place for me yesterday?" said the boy, on the following day, with a quivering lip as he performed the same office.

"No," was the answer, "I was busy but I will to-day."

"Heaven help my poor mother," murmured the boy, and gazed listlessly on the cent Mr. Inklin laid in his hand.

The boy went home. He ran to the hungry children with the loaf of bread he had earned by brushing the gentlemen's coats at the hotel.—They shouted with joy, and his mother held out her emaciated hand for a portion, while a sickly smile flitted across her face.

"Mother, dear," said the boy, Mr. Inklin says he can get me the place, and, I shall have three meals a day—only think, mother, three meals!—and it wont take me three minutes to run home and share it with you."

The morning came, and the pale boy's voice trembled with eagerness as he asked Mr. Inklin if he had applied for the place.

"Not yet," said the man of leisure, "but there is time enough yet."

The cent that morning was wet with tears. Another morning arrived.

"It is very thoughtless in the boy to be so late," said Mr. Inklin. "Not a soul here to brush my coat."

The boy came at length, his face swollen with weeping.

"I am sorry to disappoint you," said the man of leisure, "but the place in Mr. C——'s store was taken up yesterday."

The boy stopped brushing and burst afresh into tears. "I don't care now," said he sobbing, "we may as well starve. Mother's dead."

The man of leisure was shocked, and he gave the pale boy a dollar.

The Man of Leisure on a Death Bed.

Mr. Inklin was taken ill. He had often said that he thought religion might be a good thing, and he meant to look into it. An anxious friend brought a clergyman to him. He spoke tenderly, but seriously, to the sufferer, of eternal truths.

"Call to-morrow," said the man of leisure, "and we will talk of these matters."

That night the man of leisure died.

Satisfactory.—"Hollo, boy! did you see a woodchuck turn round that cliff and run across this meadow?"

"A woodchuck?"

"Yes, be quick! a woodchuck!"

"Yes, it was a kinder gray varmint!"

"Yes, yes?"

"A longish cretur, with a tail?"

"Yes—be quick or he will gain his hole!"

"Had it a sharp snout?"

"Yes, yes!"

"Like for digging roots, p'raps?"

"Yes, I tell you; just such a snout!"

"Well, I haint seen such a cretur here about."

In the days of the blue laws, a shoemaker was condemned to be hung for some crime; but, on the day of execution, it was discovered that he was the only person of that trade in the town, and could not possibly be spared. A weaver was hung in his place, as they had plenty of them.

Moral and Religious.

The Rev. Mr. Wolff.—In consequence of letters from his family, to whom his devotion is second only to his zeal for Christ, Mr. Wolff sailed in the packet of the first of January, for Havre. He had desired to visit Charleston, Cincinnati and Boston; and reluctantly leaves a country where he has received so much respectful and affectionate regard, without fuller opportunity to testify his gratitude. His purpose of going to Timbuctoo is not abandoned, but deferred until he shall have visited his family. It is doubtless providential that he does so. He needs rest. The enterprise of exploring Africa requires the whole amount of his extraordinary physical energy. In going abroad his ecclesiastical relation remains unchanged, and he will still sign himself, as in his familiar letters he loves to do, "deacon of New Jersey." What will you say," said an intelligent gentleman to whom he had been showing his calculations as to the speedy commencement of the Messiah's personal reign—"What will you say, Mr. Wolff, when 1847 arrives, if the Millenium does not commence?" "Why, I shall say," he replied, with his inimitable simplicity, "that Joseph Wolff, was mistaken." "I am neither a prophet," said he to another, "nor the son of a prophet, but simple Joseph Wolff, deacon of New Jersey." Wherever he has been known, Mr. Wolff is warmly loved. Children every where attach themselves to him with an instinctive magnetism. He will carry with him, wherever he shall go, as warm and true hearts as America contains; and prayers continually will be made to God for his personal welfare, and for a blessing on his noble Missionary enterprize. There has not lived a man in modern times with a larger measure of the Apostolic spirit.—Missionary by Bishop Doane.

A Sermon preached Nov. 30 1837, in the 1st Presbyterian Church, Elizabeth-Town: being the day of Annual Thanksgiving, in New Jersey. By Nicholas Murray.

Published by request. E. H. Hastey, Printer, Elizabethtown, 1838.

Though the publication appears to be late, this excellent discourse has lost nothing by the delay, but comes out as a word in due season, to which we shall do well to take heed. It contains much practical wisdom and wholesome counsel, and while it shows that we have much to be thankful for as a people, it makes a mortifying exhibition of our ill-deserts. "Oppression of the weak and defenceless," as shown in our treatment of the Indians; the malignity of our politics; greediness of gain; the growing restlessness under the salutary restraints of law, as exhibited by mob violence; and domestic slavery, are among the popular sins here strikingly portrayed for our reproof and warning. Injustice, ambition, selfishness, and profligate political morality are shown to be symptoms of a national degeneracy, and the procuring causes of derangement and distress, as expressions of the divine displeasure.

The concluding passages are worthy of special and universal consideration—

There is no way of giving permanence to civil institutions but by laying their foundations in justice, virtue and religion. There is no way of transmitting them from generation to generation but by making them the guardians of public morals, national faith, unwavering justice, and pure religion. When the civil institutions of this nation and of these high objects, and are prostituted to party, and selfish purposes, no prophet is needed to tell what will be the end. No foreign fleets and armies will be needed to batter down the temple of our liberty. God will give up the helm of the national ship, and permit it to pursue its own course. The law of attraction which binds these States together will be suspended. And the unquiet waves of party feeling and sectional jealousies will rise, and dash from North to South and from East to West, spreading the fragments of our ruin far and wide. The decree has gone forth that the nation and people that will not serve God must perish.

This is sound doctrine strongly put.

The Social Prayer Meeting.—The friends of religion and good morals are more indebted to the operation of this humble but efficient means of grace, than is generally imagined. The church member who does not take delight in this sweet service, is generally a cold, heartless and inefficient member. It is especially important that the prayer meeting should spread before the throne of God the spiritual and moral improvement of society, and seek the aid of his holy providence and spirit in all their plans and endeavors. Exertions should be made to induce those who are not religious, to attend these meetings. This is a duty which is too much neglected, but which if rightly performed, would be of essential service in promoting the cause of public morals. We say to all our readers, by all means attend the social prayer meeting, and induce as many others to attend with you as possible.—N. Y. Evang.

Death falls heavy on that man who is too much known to others, and too little to himself.

The sun is the only image of God. Clouds, the moon, the earth, night, all obscure it: yet it shines out every morning the source of light and life. What then? Shall we refuse to lift up our eyes in prayer to God, because clouds sometimes hide his visage, and wait till we can see his bright rose in a perfect sphere.

The present is but a narrow tongue between the past and future.

Shaker Meeting.

Hard by where the hills of New Lebanon stand,
O'erlooking the vales of that green fairy land;
Half hid by the mountains, a settlement lies,
And the home of the Shaker, through mists doth arise.

There too, have they reared by the toils of the week,
A house where on First day their labor they seek;
For know that the Shaker hath never that rest,
Which God did ordain, when the Sabbath he blessed.

Chance led me that way; so I turned to inspect
The worship in form, of this mystical sect;
For oft had I heard of their manner and mode—
Of the laws they adopted—a singular code!

'Twas a sabbath in June, that bright month of the year,
When in her best robe doth dame Nature appear!
But alas! for that day, she had laid it aside,
And for smiles, gave but frowns, to the wind and the tide.

"'Tis a bad day," I thought, as the rain drops fast fell,
"For the true Shaker girls, who love neatness so well!"
But in my mistake! there is nothing that dares
To soil the white dress that the Shaker girl wears.

And there did they gather, that sisterhood fair!
With their close muslin caps, o'er the smoothly combed hair;—
With the 'kerchief as pure as the snow ere it light,
And beneath it a skin as unsullied and white.

Remote from the door that behind them now closed,
Was one which I learned the male entrance composed;
For both may not go in and out, at the same,
'Twere a sin by the judges most worthy of blame.

And now, were the brotherhood ranged side by side,
Each wearing a cue, with the knot straggely tied;
And all with their faces smoothed down at by rule,
For to look passing grave is a law of their school.

The word was then given, "Forbear prepare!"
And as one they arose and stood up by a bar;
The sisters, like spectres, so tranquil and white,
Which some do affirm, are the guests of the night.

In a trice too, the brothers laid off the broad brim,
And coolness came forth, in the true labor trim;
While singers in circles were formed on each side,
And dancers to file, did as quickly divide.

The musical notes, and the motion in time,
Ill fitting 'twould be, to describe them in rhyme!
Nor might I forsooth do them justice at all!
But am sure that the step was ne'er danced at a ball.

No angles nor curves did the figure contain;
No changing of partners, and righting again:
"Turn" "forward and back," with one turn of the face,
Till the motion was changed, from a dance to a race.

And so gallopading was this as I ween,
Like that which at modern assemblies is seen;
Nor did either sex overstep the fixed bound,
Allotted by those in whom wisdom was found.

But when the flushed cheek, which but late was so pale,
Bespoke the fatigue of a body yet frail,
And thus wearied nature invited repose;
The mandate was issued, "Prepare for the close!"

They then—and deep silence pervaded the whole,
As in duty would touch the pure core of the soul:
And then they arose, and with calmness walked forth,
Believing the motives the true "salt of the earth."

I turned from the scene, not in scorn or contempt,
Nor yet to pronounce them of goodness exempt;
But to mourn that the chains of delusion should bind,
And hide the deep treasures of truth from the mind.

Cedar-Brook, Plainfield, Feb. 1838.

From the Farmers' Cabinet.

The mode of laying out the ground is a matter of taste, and may be left to the gardener himself; it being of trifling importance whether the ground be laid out in beds of four or ten feet wide, provided it be well worked, and the garden kept neat and free from weeds.

Previous to entering on the work of the garden, the gardener should lay down rules for his future government. He should provide himself with a blank book. In this book he should lay out a plan of his garden, allotting a place for all the different kind of vegetables he intends to cultivate. As he proceeds in the business of planting his grounds, if he were to keep an account of every thing he does relative to his garden, he would soon obtain a sound knowledge of the art. This the writer has done for the last nine years.

One great article to be attended to is, to have a supply of good old manure and other composts ready to incorporate with the earth; also a portion of ashes, soot, tobacco dusk and lime, for the purpose of sowing over seed beds in dry weather; this will tend in a great measure to destroy insects which sometimes eat off the young plants as fast as they come up.

If the ground cannot be all manured as it should be, it is of primary importance that those vegetables be provided for which most need manure. Good rich manure is indispensably necessary for the production of Brocoli, Cauliflower, Cabbage, Lettuce, Spinage, Onions, Radishes and Salads in general.

In the event of a scanty supply of manure, those kinds of vegetables which are raised in hills or drills, may be provided for by disposing of the manure immediately under the seeds or plants.

The next important matter is to have the ground in suitable condition to receive the seed. I would wish it to be understood, that I am an advocate for early sowing and planting, even at the risk of losing a little seed, provided the ground be fit to receive it. A light sandy soil will be benefitted if worked when moist, as much treatment will have a tendency to make it more compact; on the contrary, if a clay soil be worked when too wet, it kneads like dough, and never fails to bind when brought to, and thus not only prevents the seeds from rising, but injures the plants materially in their subsequent growth, by its becoming impervious to the moderate rains down, air and influence of the sun, all which are necessary to the promotion of vegetation.

Much depends on the manner used on particular kinds of soils. The great art of improving sandy and clayey soils, is to give the former such dressings of clay, cow dung and other kinds of manure, as will have a tendency to bind and make them more compact, and consequently more retentive of moisture; and to the latter, coats of horse dung, ashes, sand, and such other composts as may tend to separate the particles and open the pores of the clay so as to cause it to approach as near as possible to a loam.

The nearer the ground approaches to a sandy soil, the less retentive will it be of moisture; the more to a clayey, the longer will it retain it; and the finer the particles of which the clay is composed, the more tenacious will it be of water, and consequently be longer in drying and the harder when dry; but earth of a consistence that will hold water, the longest, without becoming hard when dry, is that of all others, the best adapted for raising the generality of plants in the greatest perfection. This last described soil is called loam, and is a medium earth, between the extremes of clay and sand.

The work of drilling may be performed in various ways; in some cases a plough is used, in others a hoe; in others, a dibble drawn along the edge of a board or line; it is of little consequence which way the work is done if it be well done. While I leave the gardener to make his own choice of tools, I would suggest that he be provided with two or three drilling machines: these, every handy man may make for himself; they should be in the form of a garden rake, with a stout heavy back and five teeth two inches broad, and tapered so as to enter the ground and leave drills two inches deep. If one be made with the teeth eight inches apart, another twelve, and another fourteen, they will be useful in making drills for various seeds, and drills thus made, serve, instead of straining a line, for every row in planting Cabbage Lettuce, Leeks, &c. The line being strained at one edge of the bed, and the drilling machine drawn straight by the line, makes five drills at once. If they are straight they may be kept so, by keeping one drill open for the outside tooth to work in until the ground be all drilled.

Gardeners practice different methods of covering up seeds, some do it with a hoe, others with a rake or harrow; some draw a portion of the earth to the side of the bed, and after sowing the seed, returns it regularly over the bed; in some particular cases a sieve is used, in others a roller. Rolling or treading in seeds is necessary in dry seasons, but it should never be done when the ground is wet.

There is nothing that protects young crops of Turnips, Cabbage and other small plants from the depredation of the fly, so well as rolling; for when the surface is rendered completely smooth, these insects are deprived of the harbor they would otherwise have under the clods and small lumps of earth. This method will be found more effectual than soaking the seed in any preparation, or dusting the plants with any composition whatever; but as the roller must only be used previous to, or at the time of sowing the seed, and not even then if the ground be wet, it is necessary that the gardener should have a bag-head always at hand in dry weather, containing infusions made of waste tobacco, lime, soot, cow dung, elder, burdock leaves, &c. A portion of these ingredients, or any other preparation that is pernicious or poisonous to insects, without injuring the plant, thrown into a bag-head kept filled up with water, if used moderately over beds of young plants in dry weather, would, in almost every case, insure a successful crop.

If it be necessary at any time to sow seeds in dry weather, it is recommended to soak the seed in water mixed with sulpher. This practice, with attentive watering, will cause the seed to vegetate speedily.

It is should be requisite to transplant any thing when the ground is dry, the transplanting should be always done as soon as the earth is fresh turned over, and the roots of the plants should be steeped in mud made of rich compost, before they are set out.

I have in most cases recommended seeds to be sown in drills drawn from 8 to 12 inches apart, in preference to sowing broadcast, because the weeds can be more easily destroyed by means of a small hoe; and which, properly used, greatly promotes the growth of young plants.

Exploring Expedition.—The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser makes the following amiable hon-orable to Mr. Secretary Dickerson: "We publish to day Mr. Secretary Dickerson's report, touching the cause of the delay in the sailing of this expedition; and having read it, from beginning to end, we feel bound to take back very much, if not the whole, of the censure we may have heretofore bestowed upon the Secretary, on account of the delay aforesaid. Assuming that his report is faithful, it certainly makes out a clear case in his favor; showing that if there has been a stupendous display of mismanagement and blundering in the conduct of the expedition so far, the blame thereof falls very lightly upon his shoulders."

Important from the Frontier.

Cleaveland, Ohio, Feb. 12.—Six stage loads of United States troops, under the command of Col. Johnson, arrived here last evening from Buffalo, on their way to Detroit.

By a gentleman who arrived in this city last evening from the West, we learn that the report received some days since, that the patriots were about crossing over into Canada from Sandusky, is correct. Our informant states that they were about 800 strong, and well supplied with arms and ammunition.

The Marshall's office was broken open on Friday night last, and 17 stands of arms taken therefrom. The deputy sheriff was despatched in pursuit of them, and overtook the party and recovered the arms near Dover, in this county.—They have been brought back to this city.

Gen. Scott arrived at New York, from Albany, via New Haven, and proceeded immediately to Buffalo. The Burlington Free Press says Gen Wool is now at Plattsburg, and has called out two companies of horse, to reconnoitre the country.

A Munificent Legislature.—The Legislature of Tennessee has just closed its biennial session; the measures of which, it is truly remarked by the Nashville Whig, render it one of the most important and interesting that has been held for many years past.

First among the important measures of the late session stands, by the common consent, the establishment of the Bank of Tennessee, (a State Bank) connected as it is with the magnificent appropriation of $4,000,000 to works of internal improvement, and $100,000 per annum to common schools.

Among the funds which will constitute the capital of the State Bank, are about one million and a half of dollars, received on account of the Surplus Revenue; and the proceeds of the sales of the valuable lands in Ocoee district, acquired under the Cherokee treaty of 1836.

The State interest in works of Internal Improvement was apportioned by an appropriation of $650,000 to the Charleston and Cincinnati Rail Road; $650,000 to the Hiwassee road (running from the Georgia line to Knoxville;) $1,000,000 to roads in Middle Tennessee, and $1,000,000 to roads in the Western District; and in addition to these appropriations, $300,000 were apportioned to the improvement of the navigation of the rivers in each of the three divisions of the State. To ensure the prompt payment of the interest on the bonds to be issued by the State for purposes of Internal Improvements to enable the road companies to realize the investment without difficulty, the Bank of Tennessee was made the fiscal agent of the State.

Out of the nett profits of the Bank the handsome annuity of $100,000 is guaranteed to Common Schools, and $16,000 per annum to the county academies; and by the same act two half townships of land in the Ocoee district are set apart to the University at Nashville and East Tennessee college in consideration of the claims of those institutions on the State for lands south of French Broad and Holston.

Dreadful Result of Intemperance!—We are informed by a gentleman from Oronoo of the following melancholy accident, resulting from intemperance:—

In the town of Bradley, near Orono, there resided a poor miserable drunkard, by the name of Gurlum, who has been known to be drunk for the period of 27 days at a time! Some three or four weeks since, he went home in the evening, drunk; his wife being unable to get him to bed, left him by the fire and retired to rest. Some time during the night he got into the bed and his wife covered him over, not knowing that any thing had happened to him. Early in the morning he called to his son, by a former wife to bring him some drink. Water was brought by the boy, and the latter drank it, since when he has not been able to speak. Though he was living a few days ago, the doctor thinks he cannot recover. It seems that after his wife had retired, he fell into the fire, and burnt himself so dreadfully that all on one side of his face was a dried crisp, and in some parts the bone entirely bare. One eye so badly burnt that it has since fallen from its head.—O! Intemperance, these are thy full doings."—Ellsworth (Me.) Statesman.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, Feb. 16.

In Senate, Mr. Webster, at the written request of Mr. Ruggles offered the following resolution which lies over one day:

Resolved, That the committee be appointed to inquire into the subject matter of the letter of the Hon. John Ruggles, to a member of the Senate, which was laid before the Senate this day. The letter contains a request that the Senate would institute an enquiry into the charges preferred against Mr. R. by the Washington Spy. Mr. Tipton spoke against the subtreasury bill, after which the Senate adjourned over to Monday

In the House—The bill from the Senate on the subject of our national relations with Canada was under discussion. At the moment of adjournment (four o'clock) a letter under date of the 9th Feb. from Gen. Brady, and another from Gov. Mason of Michigan, dated the 11th, were read. They were brought to Washington by Express. The letter of Gen Brady states, that a large body of men, in detached parties, were near Monroe, on the river Raisin, about thirty-five miles from Detroit, with the design, as was supposed of entering Canada in hostile array. The day fixed upon according to rumor, is the 22d inst. These states, that under existing laws, there is no means of preventing this invasion of the British territory, and therefore urge upon the President, and through him upon Congress, the necessity of an immediate passage of the bill now pending before the House.

Saturday, Feb. 17.

In the House, Mr. Duberry, from the committee on Agriculture, reported a bill to encourage the culture of tropical plants in the United States. The object is to introduce the culture of cotton, flax and silk, which can be produced on a comparatively sterile soil, with but little manual labor. If it should succeed, the necessity of slave labor will be done away with, & thus be of great benefit to the country.

The Senate bill in relation to the late bank of the United States, was reported with amendments providing penalties for the circulation, of their notes. After March 4th, there will be no responsibility for the payment of them.

The consideration of the bill to preserve the neutrality of the U. S. on the Canada frontiers was resumed, and many long speeches made without coming to any conclusion. Many amendments were laid on the table and ordered to be printed, all which will come up for consideration on Monday.

Mr. Howard presented two more communications just received, by an Express, from Gen. Brady, dated Detroit, Feb. 11th.

Gen. Brady's letter states that large bands are collected at Monroe and other points, in that vicinity; that they are possessed of army and other accoutrements which are concealed; that there is no power to institute a search for the arms under existing laws; and that, in order to preserve our neutral relations, some immediate & strong measures are necessary. Gov Mason of Michigan, sends a despatch by the same Express, in which he states that the city of Detroit was thrown into confusion by the reappearance of the Navy Island force; that they intended to make a descent on Canada on the 22d February that their arms were packed and transported as mere merchandize; and that, if the laws permitted it, they could be disarmed. He urges the passage of the Bill reported in the Senate.

Monday, Feb. 19.

In Senate.—Mr. Buchanan presented the instructions of the Pennsylvania legislature, instructing their senators to vote against the subtreasury scheme. He said he should obey, but also said he should vote against Mr. Rives' substitute.

Mr. Clay spoke most eloquently against the Sub-treasury scheme, for four hours. His speech is highly commended by the whig papers.

In the house, the bill for the further preservation of the neutrality of the U. S. was resumed, with the several amendments proposed to it, to the committee on foreign relations, in the hope of that committee being able to report amendments which would free the bill from the objections which have been taken to it. It is thought that before many days, an effective law on this subject will pass.

Tuesday, Feb. 20.

In Senate, a great number of petitions and memorials on subject of Texas were presented.

At 1 o'clock the Sub-treasury bill was taken up, and Mr. Allen, of Ohio spoke at length in favor of it, and ags. at the U. S. bank.

Mr. Preston, the Mississippi senator took his seat to-day.

The house was occupied most of the day with the Frontier or neutrality b ll.

Wednesday, Feb. 21.

In Senate, a committee of five were appointed to examine the conduct of Gen. Mr. Ruggles.

The Canada bill occupied the time of the house until it adjourned. A motion was made to lay the whole subject on the table, which failed, 100 to 20.

New Jersey Legislature

Saturday, Feb. 17.

In Assembly, a bill granting certain privile ges to firemen in Rahway, and Orange, was read a third time and passed.

The Sup. to the Plainfield Mutual Assurance Fire company, was passed.

Monday, Feb 19.

In Council, the two bills from Assembly, passed Saturday were referred to committee on corporations.

The bill from Assembly to authorize the sale of the real estate of paupers, was read a 3d time and passed.

In Assembly, the joint resolution respecting the fitting up of the room opposite the library, for minerals and fossils, was passed.

The bill from Council to incorpor ate the Bound Brook mutual Fire Insurance company, having been amended, was passed, nem con.

A communication was received from several persons, passengers on the Camden and Amboy rail road from New York to Philadelphia, complaining of illegal charges. Read and laid on the table, and the house adjourned.

Tuesday, Feb. 20.

In Council, the bill from Assembly, granting certain privileges to Rahway firemen, was reported.

Memorials against horse racing were received by both houses.

In Assembly, the bill authorising the Morris and Essex Railroad to borrow money, and for other purposes, was passed.

Also, to incorporate the Hoboken land and Improvement company, 36 to 8.

Also the bill relative to jurors, increasing their pay to $1 per day.

Also the bill from Council to extend the charter of the Trenton bank.

The bill relating to Common schools was taken up, and after considerable debate was ordered to be engrossed.

Wednesday, Feb. 21.

In Council, the sup. to the act to facilitate the administration of justice was read a third time and passed.

Also the bill to encourage the culture of silk.

The bill erecting the new county of Mercer was taken up, amended and passed, 9 to 8.

Message, &c. that assembly had passed the bill in relation to Common Schools, and received. Referred to the Committee on education.

The bill to incorporate Jersey city, was amended and passed.

The bill from assembly, incorporating the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company was passed.

The resolution from assembly, in relation to memorials was passed.

In assembly, several petitions to abolish capital punishments were received.

The bill to establish public schools, was read a third time and passed—35 to 15.

The house then went into committee of the whole, and took up the bill to abolish the punishment of Death.

After considerable debate, the bill was postponed.

Thursday, Feb. 22.

In Council, the bill granting certain privileges to certain firemen, from assembly was passed.

In Assembly, the bill erecting the new county of Mercer was passed, 31 to 21.

The house went into committee of the whole on the subject of Inns and taverns.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, February 22.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

It appears to us that neither of the three plans proposed for keeping the public money will pass the present session of Congress. If the Sub-treasury bill should pass the Senate, it will be defeated in the House of Representatives;—Mr. Rives' substitute will not probably pass either house, certainly not the Senate;—and a National Bank will not pass either house. A new system can be devised which does not partake some what of one of these systems, it is hardly supposed, will do nothing on the subject.

The resolutions instructing the Pennsylvania Senators in Congress to vote against the Sub-treasury bill, passed the Assembly by a vote of 51 to 49—and the Senate, by a vote of 15 to 12.

We would respectfully suggest to advertisers and correspondents, to hand in their communications as early in the week as convenient, as thereby much labor and trouble would be spared us, and subscribers would get their papers in good season.

We select the following most cheering article from the New York Journal of Commerce of the 16th inst. It does one good to read it. Though we cannot believe all that it contains, we sincerely wish it; and suppose that they know more about the subject than we do.

Land Ho!—We have had a long and tedious voyage, but at last we see the land. The substantial point of trust is, a sound currency; and whereabouts that is we know. It is certainly not farther off than the 1st of May. The countenances of our merchants brighten at the prospect; and it is to the honor of this community, that much as they have suffered, they look to no expedients, no subterfuges, for relief. They have fixed their opinions right, and these opinions ensure their own accomplishment. It is true that business still droops, and the packets of this day will carry out tidings of sacrifices on dry goods, as merciless as were ever made in this market.—Two or three large sales have just been made at auction, at which the prices obtained are not above 50 or 70 per cent on the cost of importation. This is hard for the owners, but good for the public. It proves the determination of the people not to buy goods until their are out of debt. Out of debt they will get, at least so many of them as are solvent. This packet will also carry out quotations of exchange which will set the coin on the other side in motion on a large scale. There can be no miscalculation on this point. We have 30 millions of produce to go forward. Our debts are paid, and our imports will not absorb more than half the amount. It is therefore clear that exchange can only be stopped in its decline, by being bought for specie. But for this, there would be fifteen millions in exchange accumulated within six months, with absolutely no demand. Our progress through commercial disease, is going on, by an regular and well understood process, as ever a doctor watched over. The symptoms of strength and recovery show themselves as early, and are developed as distinctly as the most sanguine economists had anticipated. And as to what is before us! In exchange the warmest emotions of exultation it is contemplate it. Such prosperity as our country never saw before, and surely this is enough, and such as the world never saw. The anticipation is based not on conjecture, but upon principles which cannot err. They are the principles which the Creator has made, and their operation is as certain as the round which He has established for the seasons. The operation of these principles, too, is perfectly comprehensible to all minds. Twelve months ago, our business was conducted on an expanded scale, our credits both at home and abroad. Under that system we had contracted a heavy debt to European nations. This debt was in the first place due from our importers and large merchants and to them from the farmers and mechanics every where. The country had grown rapidly in wealth, and although there was no danger that our substantial improvements would be lost, there had accumulated an enormous indebtedness which could no longer be kept in motion by a system of credits and kiting. So the whole fabric broke down. The consequence was, great embarrassment, depreciation in the value of property, and a general feeling of poverty in ourselves, and distrust towards others. Every man therefore retrenched his expenses, and instead of meeting old obligations by contracting new ones, set himself in the best and real sense of the word, to pay his debts. Well, what have we accomplished? The rate of exchange shows that our foreign debt is paid, and the balance thrown on the other side. At home an amount has been liquidated and paid almost beyond calculation. The bank debt in the state of New-York has been reduced 19 millions of dollars, and our bank circulation one half or 12 millions. Other debts have been reduced in proportion. Whereas, the same cause of calculus created a debt in every hand it passed through, from Manchester in England to the far West, so the sale of cotton which has come back upon the same track, has cancelled a debt at every ownership.—The products of this year, except the supply of absolute necessities, have been employed in paying debts. What will be done with the products of the next year? Every body can answer that. They will be exhausted in a more liberal personal and family expenditure; in the improvement of private estates, and in public works.—This, of course, will demand the co-operation of merchants, and set all the departments of business into activity. But this is not all. People will begin to get in debt again. As every body will be prosperous, every body will have credit. The advance in price, of merchandize and all sorts of property, will stimulate buying and selling. This will make business notes among the merchants, and bring out again the contracted loans of the Banks. The new Banks which have been and will be created this winter, will put forth their help. Our Steamboats, packets, rail-roads, and powers of all sorts, are ready and girded for the race. Many of our most honorable merchants, it is true, have sunk under the revulsion of 1837: some of them not to engage again in extensive mercantile pursuits. But the country is left and their places are filling up by a more numerous company of young and enterprising men, eager for the competition. The next five years will bring our country to a commercial elevation she never before attained.—Now is the time for those who are entering upon business, to fix the principles which are to guide their operations. For unless they have such principles unalterably fixed, they will be carried away with the excitements of prosperity, and perish in the revulsions which are sure to follow.

In the burning of the Bowery Theatre last week, Mr. Dinneford, the manager, lost 60 or $70,000, only 35,000 of which was insured.

Mr. Hartshin, the former manager, also lost his private stable, and a colored man, sleeping in it was burned to death.

The Farmer's Cabinet, of Philadelphia, is now doubled in size, and is issued monthly, instead of semi-monthly, as heretofore. It is a very cheap and useful periodical, and should be extensively circulated, containing a great amount of information important to the farmer, and being only $1, per annum.

Anti-Slavery doctrines are prevailing every where through the free states, and are even encroaching upon some of the slave-holding states. Connecticut is about forming a State Anti-Slavery society, and when that is done all the free states, except New Jersey, will have State Societies. The Emancipator says that probably in 1845 there will not be a slave in the Union. If such be the result, and such we have reason to hope, happy are we!

We extract the following from the New York American, of Tuesday Evening last:

We have been informed, and we believe correctly, that preparations are made for carrying into effect the Sub-Treasury system, bill or no bill. Safes have been constructed in three of the Government offices in the city Hall, of such perfect security, that it is impossible they can be opened by any—except by those who keep the keys. This confidence of anticipation finds its parallel in the engraving of the plates for the Treasury notes before the bill was passed legalizing their issue.

And why not? The Sub-Treasury system is now in operation, and has been since last May, and must continue in operation till Congress shall decide upon some plan to dispose of the public moneys, which we opine will not happen for some time yet. In the mean time the revenue must be received in specie, and government should provide safe places for keeping it.

Murder at Washington.

We have just learned by the Newark Daily Advertiser of Monday evening, that Mr. Cilley member of Congress from Maine was killed in a duel at Washington, by Mr. Graves of Kentucky, on Saturday last, for words spoken against Webb editor of the Courier & Enquirer, in the recent debate about Ruggles. Wise Menifee, and Calhoun, of Ky. were the seconds of Mr. Graves.

Mr. Cilley's seconds made repeated overtures to Graves, Wise, &c. after the first shot, without avail, as they insisted upon it, that nothing short of death, or a confession on the part of Mr. C. that Webb is a gentleman, should terminate the contest. This confession he resolutely declined to make.

Mr. Cilley was 32 years of age, and has left a wife and three children. His seconds were Mr. Jones, of Wisconsin, Bynum, of N. C. Col. Humphrey, of the army, and Dr Duncan (Surgeon) of Ohio. It is a most melancholy affair, and it is supposed that all concerned will be expelled from Congress. Graves and his friends are considered as most blameable.

When the Legislature shall have terminated their session it will appear, from the list of bills passed, that they have devoted themselves almost entirely to public business. The shortness of the session and the reduction of their daily pay, will greatly reduce the expense of legislation from that of former years. Our readers can bear witness that we have not lavished indiscriminate praise upon this body. It will not therefore be set down as the unmeaning applause of a trammelled partizan when we say, that a comparison of this legislature with those of the party which have preceded it, will show the great advantage of electing men who make the state and not a party the object of their measures.—Preston State Gazette.

Specie.—The losses endured by the government in lugging specie all over the country, is very great. By the late blowing up of the Black Hawk, says the St. Louis Bulletin, she has lost more money than she ever lost by the United States Bank in the whole course of twenty years, and is not more than the tenth part of what she has lost since 1832.

The Survey of the Morris and Easton Railroad, from Morristown to Easton, is completed. We learn by the Belvidere Apollo that the route was found to be not only entirely practicable, but much easier than had been anticipated: there being no necessity of adopting upon any part of the line, a grade of more than 40 feet per mile. The principal points at or near which the route passes, are Chester, German Valley, New Hampton, Asbury, Bloomsbury, Springtown and Philipsburgh.

This link only remains to make a complete railroad connection between Harrisburgh, and Easton, Pa. with Morristown, Newark and New York.

Fire in Elizabethtown.—The unoccupied building at the corner of Union and Jersey streets, formerly used by the Malleable Iron company as a foundry, was burnt on Wednesday morning last about 1 o'clock. The Journal says it was insured for $1000 in the New Haven company. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

Mr. Elihu Mitchell's dwelling on Union st. was injured about $500.

St. John's Church, at Salem, in this state, has purchased one of the celebrated Spanish bells. It weighs 704 lbs. Another weighing 744 lbs. has been purchased for Trinity church, Swedesborough.

A statistical table of the New-York state Temperance Society shows in that state 1,178 societies, and 132,161 members. During the last year 84,402 members were added.

"Living on Small Means." is the title of a small work by Dr. Alcott, of Boston, which we advise every man to read at the present time. Our means of living will be greatly increased when we learn the secret of living on less.—New-ark Daily.

"The Homeward Bound is the title of a new novel, by Cooper, now in press.

Geo. Combe, of Edinburg, the distinguished phrenologist, will visit this country in the course of the present year.

Within the last few days a very large quantity of ice, cut from the Merrimack river, has been transported on the railroad to Boston. From thence it is to be shipped to New Orleans and other southern ports.

The New Orleans Bee has a long article detailing the arrangements connected with the establishment of a line of packets between that city and Havre, which the merchants of the latter have determined to put into operation.

When reasons fail to convince, ther's nothing left but ridicule. If they have no ambition, apply to their feelings; clap a blister on their pride and it will do the business. It is like puttin ginger under a horse's tail: it makes him carry up rest handsum I tell you. When I was a boy I was always late at school—well, fathers preaching I din't mind much, but I never could bear to hear mother say, "Why, Sam! are you actually up for all day? Well wonders will never cease." It raised my dander; at last says I, "Mother, now don't say that any more, for gracious sake, for it makes me feel ugly, and I'll give up as nirly as any of you; and so I did, and I soon found what's worth knowin in this life—An early start makes easy stages.—Sam Slick.

Some look only for faults in their neighbors, others for merits; the former shake the tree only for insects; the latter for fruit. We should do both, kill the insects and save the fruit.

ENIGMA No. XXXVIII.

What are the solid contents of a round log 7 inches in diameter, and 5 feet long? An answer is requested.

M.

Answer to Enigma, No 37.

Divide the product of the side of the triangle and perpendicular height by their sum, and the quotient will be the side of the greatest inscribed square.

ZENO.

Multiply the sum of the sides by 1,547—the product will be a side of the inscribed square.

Or, to be exact, subtract the sum of the sides from the product of two-thirds of their sum multiplied by the square root of three.

The question by this rule gives 66,8304 feet.

THADEUS DAVID'S
WRITING FLUID,
A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment: and lastly, its great. er Durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Leg books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

Cooking Stoves.
J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbock cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron rooms of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

GREEN BROOK
Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt that ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expenses of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the buildings are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory references will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for many years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, if taken in season, they have never failed to effect a cure.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for many years. They may be perfectly safe and salutary be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and can not produce any other than a salutary effect in the system. Their effects when taken according to directions, is to excite and maintain a natural perspiration in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or putrid matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize natural action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their respective functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Clock Maker.

Or the Sayings and Doings of Samuel Slick of Slickville.

These sketches, which have been much quoted by all the country, have been collected and published in one volume, 12mo.

They are well worth reading, possessing a great deal of quaint humor, graphic and striking description and great insight into character. The author of the book may be justly called the American Boz.

The following are some of his peculiarities:

The Clock-Maker.—I had heard of Yankee clock pedlars, tin pedlars and Bible pedlars, especially of him who sold Polyglot Bibles, (all in English) to the amount of sixteen thousand pounds The house of every substantial farmer had three substantial ornaments, a wooden clock, a tin reflector, and a Polyglot Bible. How is it that an American sells his wares, at whatever price he pleases, where a blue nose would fail to make a sale at all? I will inquire of the clock-maker the secret of his success.

"What a pity it is, Mr. Slick," (for such was his name) "what a pity it is said I, that you who are so successful in teaching these people the value of clocks could not teach them the value of time."

"I guess," said he, they have got that ring to grow on their horns yet, which every four year-old has in our country. We reckon hours and minutes to be dollars and cents. They do nothing in these parts, but eat, drink, smoke, sleep, ride about, lounge at taverns, make speeches at temperance meetings, and talk about house of assembly.' If a man don't hoe his corn, and he don't get a crop, he says it is all owing to the bank: and if he runs in debt and is sued, why he says the lawyers are a curse to the country. They are a most idle set of folks, I tell you."

"But how is it is it," said I, that you manage to sell such an immense number of clocks, (which certainly cannot be called neccessary articles) among a people with whom there seems to be so great a scarcity of money?"

Mr. Slick paused, as if considering the propriety of answering the question, and looking me in the face said, in a confidential tone of voice,

"Why, I don't care if I do tell you, for the market is glutted, and I shall quit this circuit. It is done by a knowledge of soft sawder and human nature. But here is deacon Flint's," said he; I have but one clock left, and I guess I will sell it to him."

At the gate of a most comfortable looking farm house stood deacon Flint, a respectable old man, who had understood the value of time better than most of his neighbors, if one might judge from the appearance of every thing about him. After the usual salutation, an invitation to "alight" was accepted by Mr. Slick, who said he wished to take leave of Mrs. Flint before he left Cholchester.

We hardly entered the house, before the clock maker pointed to the view from the window, and addressing himself to me, said,

"If I was to tell them in Connecticut, that there was such a farm as this away down east here in Nova Scotia, they wouldn't believe me—why there aint such a location in all new England. The deacon has a hundred acres of dyke"—

"Seventy," said the deacon; only seventy."

"Well seventy; but here is your fine deep bottom, why I could run a ramrod into it."

"Interval we call it," said the deacon, who though evidently pleased at this eulogium, seemed to wish the experiment of the ramrod to be tried at the right place:

"Well, interval, if you please, (though professor Eleazer Comstock, in his work on Ohio, calls them bottoms,) is just as good as dyke. Then there is that water privilege, worth 3,000 or 4,000 dollars, twice as good as what Governor Cass paid 15,000 dollars for. "I wonder, deacon, you don't put up a carding mill on it; the same works would carry a turning lathe, a shingle machine, a circular saw, grind bark, and"—

"Too old," said the deacon, "too old for all those speculations."

"Old!" repeated the clock-maker—"not you; why you are worth half a dozen of the young men we see now a-days; you are young enough to have"—

Here he said something in a low tone of voice, which I did not distinctly hear, but whatever it was the deacon was pleased; he smiled and said he did not think of such; things now.

"But your beasts, deacon dear me, your beasts must be out, and have some feed;" saying which he went out to order them to be taken to the stable.

As the old gentleman closed the door after him Mr. Slick drew near to me, and said in an under tone—

"That is what I call soft sawder." An Englishman would pass that man as a sheep passes a hog in a pasture, without looking at him: or said he, looking rather archly, "if he was mounted on a pretty smart horse, I guess he'd trot away, if he could. Now I find"—

"Just come to say good bye, Mrs. Flint."

"What, have you sold all your clocks?"

"Yes and very low, for money is scarce, and I wish to close the consarn—no, I am wrong in saying all, for I have just one left. Neighbor Steel's wife asked to have the refusal of it, but I guess I won't sell it. I had but two of them, this one, and the fellow of it, that I sold Governor Lincoln. General Green, the secretary of state for Maine, said he'd give me 50 dollars for this one, but he has composition wheels and patent axels—it is a beautiful article a real first chop; no mistake: genuine superfine; but I guess I'll take it back. And besides, squire Hawk might think kinder hard, that I did not give him the offer."

"Dear me," said Mrs. Flint, "I should like to see it—where is it?"

"It is in a chest of mine, over the way at Tom Tape's store: I guess he can ship it on to Eastport."

"That's a good man," said Mrs. Flint, "just let's look at it."

Mr Slick, willing to oblige, yielded to these entreaties; and soon produced the clock—a gaudy, highly varnished trumpery looking affair. He placed it on the chimney piece, where its beauties were pointed out, and duly appreciated by Mrs. Flint, whose admiration was about ending in a proposal when Mr. Flint returned from giving directions about the care of horses. The deacon praised the clock—he thought it a handsome one, but the deacon was a prudent man. He had a watch—but he was sorry, but he had no occasion for a clock.

"I guess you're in the wrong furrow, this time deacon; it ain't for sale," said Mr. Slick: "and it it was, I reckon neighbor Steel's wife would have it for she gives me no peace about it."

Mrs. Flint said that Mr. Steel had enough to do, poor man to pay his interest, without buying clocks for his wife.

"It's no consarn of mine," said Mr. Slick; as long as he pays me what he has to do: but I guess I don't want to sell it—and besides, it comes too high; that clock can't be made in Rhode Island under forty dollars. Why, it ain't possible," said the clock maker, in apparent surprise, looking at his watch, "why, as I'am alive it is four o'clock, and if I hain't been two hours here—how on airth shall we reach river Philip to-night? I'll tell you what Mr. Flint; I'll leave the clock in your care till I return on my way to the States. I'll put it agoing and put it to the right time."

As soon as this operation was performed, he delivered the key to the deacon, with a serio-comico injunction to wind the clock up every Saturday night, which Mrs. Flint said she would be sure should be done, and promised to remind her husband of it, in case he should chance to forget it.

"That," said the clock-maker, as soon as we were mounted—"that I call human nature. Now that is sold for 40 dollars; it cost me just 6 dollars and 50 cents. Mrs. Flint will never let Mrs. Steel have the refusal; nor will the deacon learn until I call for the clock, that having once indulged in the use of superfluity, how difficult it is to give it up. And I can do without any article of luxury that I have once had, but when once obtained, it is not in human nature to surrender it voluntarily. Of fifteen thousand sold by myself and partners in this province, twelve thousand were left in this manner, and only ten clocks were ever returned—when we called for them they invariably bought them. We trust to soft sawder to get them into the house, and to human nature that they never come out of it."

A good story is told of Colonel M'Lane's yielding a generous "liberty of action" to the troops under his command before going into winter quarters at Valley Forge. They were suffering for provisions and clothing, and Congress had been repeatedly petitioned for that relief which it was not in their power to bestow. Under these circumstances, Col M'Lane paraded his band of suffering soldiers, and harangued them as follows:

"Fellow Soldiers! You're served your country faithfully and truly. We've fought hard fights together, ag'inst the enemy. You're in a bad way for comfortable clothes, that's a fact; and it makes me cry, a'most to see your feet bleeding on the frozen ground. But Congress can't help it, nor I n'ither. Now if any of you, want to return home, you may go. Let them that would like to go, step out two paces in front; But the first man that steps out, darn my skin! if I don't shoot him as quick as I would a red coat!" It is needless to add, that not a solitary volunteer was to be found!"—Knickerbocker.

The Eternal River.—We have never viewed a grander spectacle than that which the mighty stream, rolling its vast floods to the deep now presents. The Mississippi even in its mildest moods is terrible. When it pours along its dark waters beneath the gentle gleamings of a midsummer's sunset; or when its gliding ripples are burnished by the silvery effulgence of the midnight moon, it's course is still mighty—fearful—resistless; and we think of its placid surface shadowed by the forests of its banks, and it seems to us in all its majestic magnificence, only as the giant slumbering from his labors.

But when the beautiful spring time is over, and the balmy moonlit evening of summer is past, and Autmn's shadowy glory is no more—when winter broods over desolated nature, then it is that the "terrible Mississippi" assumes all its fearfulness of aspect, and we realize that we are gazing upon the mightiest stream, with but a single exception, that flows upon our globe. All then is unmingled grandeur—sublimity, magnificence. Turn your eye even now, reader, over its troubled surface, and what a spectacle of grandeur does that mighty mass of volumed waters present! The opposite shore is desolate and bleak, and cheerless—the naked banks rise steep from the rushing stream mantled with ice—the trees are leafless and drear—at intervals thro' their bare, weather beaten trunks you catch a glimpse of an ancient mound upon the smooth prairie, while far away in the blue distance, standing out against the dim eastern horizon are perceived the long line of white cliffs, or the rounded summits of the bluffs, sweeping away from the view Bloody Island, in the midst of the rushing stream, stretches out its barren, sandy shores, sad and gloomy as a grave yard! ay! a grave yard! and when the associations connected with its dark history are permitted to throng the mind, the appellation is no misnomer. A grave yard! let it bear the title—whatever our view respecting the scenes it has witnessed the name is appropriate.—St Louis Bulletin.

Advertisements similar to the following, from the Sun, are commonly found among the "reading matter" of the London papers:

History of a Shilling.—It will scarcely be credited that a shilling has been the means of putting thirty thousand pounds into the pockets of a gentleman, and all within a few days. The reader, no doubt, asks how? It arose as follows: A party in question was fond of dancing but possessed only an indifferent acquaintance with the figures of quadrills, etc., and with the regulations of a ballroom. In this dilemma, he purchased an excellent little volume, entitled the Ball-room Guide, published by C. Mitchell, 140 Lion court, Fleet-street, London, at the inconceivable low price of one shilling! and, at the assembly which followed, he proved so accomplished as to win the heart of a young lady of great beauty and accomplishments, and worth thirty thousand pounds. Who would be without such a treasure as this beautiful little book?

Daisy.—The word daisy is a thousand times pronounced without our adverting to the beauty of its etymology, 'the eye of day.'

Battle of the Monongahela.—The battle of the Monongahela, was fought on the 9th July, 1776 between the French and Indians on the one side and the British and Americans on the other. The British army was commanded by Gen. Braddock a brave but imprudent and obstinate man. Geo. Washington was the aid of Gen. Braddock, and at that time was twenty three years of age. It was a beautiful summer's day. The British troops were all in uniform, and moved to the sound of martial music, with all the regularity of a review. But in a short time they were surprised by the savages, and after a severe battle, were defeated and put to flight. General Braddock himself was killed; and out of eighty four officers in his army, sixty one were killed or wounded. George Washington, though engaged in the thickest of the battle, escaped unhurt. He had two horses killed under him, and four bullets passed through his garments. But he was preserved by Divine providence to be the saviour of his country. Fifteen years after the battle, and when the war was over, George Washington travelled into the Indian country to survey some unsettled lands. While exploring the wilderness a band of Indians approached, headed by a venerable chief. The aged Indian drew nigh and spoke in the following manner; "I come, said he, "to behold my great father, Washington. I am chief of the tribes which attacked in the battle of the Monongahela. My great father was then a very young man, and rode before all the war chiefs. I fired my rifle at him many times, for I was in the army of the French, and bade the young man fire their rifles at him; but the Great Spirit turned away the bullets; and I saw that my great father could not be killed in battle." This anecdote rests on the authority of Dr. Craik, who was the friend and physician of Washington, was with him in the battle of the Monongahela, and was in his company when the Indian Chief came to see him.

The Price of Fame.—It is a fatal gift: for, when possessed in its highest quality and strength what has it ever done for its votaries? What were all those great poets of whom we talk so much! what were they in their lifetime? The most miserable of their species; depressed, doubtful, obscure; or involved in petty quarrels, and petty persecutions; often unappreciated, utterly uninfluential, beggers, flatterers of men unworthy of their recognition. What a train of disgusting incidents, what a record of degrading circumstances, is the life of a great poet?" This is too true a picture: still, what does it prove, but that this earth is no home for the more spiritual part of our nature—that those destined to awaken our highest aspirations, and our tenderest sympathies are victims rather than votaries of the divine light within them? They gather from sorrow their sweetest emotions; they repeat of hope but its noblest visions; they look on nature with an ear, new love, which wins the power of making her hidden beauty visible; and they reproduce the passionate, the true and the beautiful. Alas! they themselves are not what they paint: the low want subdues the lofty will; the small and present vanity interferes with the far and glorious aim: but still it is something to have looked beyond the common sphere where they were fated to struggle. They paid in themselves the bitter penalty of not realizing their own idea; but mankind have to be thank ul for the generous legacy of thought and harmony bequeathed by those who were among earth's proscribed and miserable. Fame is bought by happiness.

Keep your temper in dispute or quarrel; as your opponent warms do you cool down. The cold hammer fashions the red-hot iron into any shape needed.

Never tell folks you can go ahead of them, but do it. It spares a great deal of talk, and helps them to save their breath to cool their broth.

Moral and Religious.

A Paradox.

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." This is one of those sayings which the heart is slow to believe, though appearances for a season, may be against it, yet the attentive observer of the same characters through a series of years will find it most worthy of being admitted as an established law of God's moral kingdom. The experience of thousands has confirmed the uniformity of its operations. It seems important to bring it into view at the present time, when many are liable to commit practicable mistakes and to consider themselves exonerated from the duty of giving, by the pressure of worldly circumstances. We quote the experience of Baxter, as an appropriate subject of meditation at the present time; and hope it may be so pondered, and "inwardly digested," that fruit may abound to the glory of God.

"Another help to my success was the relief which my estate enabled me to afford to the poor. The situation which I held was reckoned at near 200*l.* per annum; but there came only from eighty to ninety pounds to hand. Besides which, some years I had sixty or eighty pounds a year of the booksellers for my books, which I wrote. This little dispersed among them, much reconciled to them to the doctrine that I taught. I took the aptest of their children from the school, and sent divers of them to the universities, where for eight pounds a year, or ten at most, by the help of my friends I maintained them. In giving the little I had, I did not inquire whether they were good or bad if they asked relief; for the bad had souls and bodies that needed charity most. And this truth I will speak to the encouragement of charitable, that what little money I have had by me, I got it almost all, I scarce know how, at that time when I gave most, and since I have had less opportunity of giving I have had less increase.

Daily Family Worship.—In bringing the gospel to bear upon the moral condition of society, one of the most efficient measures would be, the promotion of family instruction and worship. This forms even of itself a mighty channel of salutary influence. A family, as constituted by God himself, is a little sanctuary, a church, over which the father is the authorized, officiating priest. Every day, a father should devote a portion of time to the spiritual and intellectual instruction of his children, and should pray for them, in their hearing, at the throne of grace. In the commencement of the marriage relation, the united couple should begin with mutual reading and prayer. The daily mutual reading of the scriptures would have a delightful effect on their own minds. The custom of presenting their infant children before the throne of God, with mutual prayers, is calculated to awaken the tenderest affections for each other. When children are able to understand, the father should devote a portion of the time allotted for worship to the particular, correct and familiar explanation of the word of God, and of their relative duties as members of his household and of society at large. The seasons of worship should not be hurried, neither should they ever be neglected.—N. Y. Evang.

A Comprehensive Dialogue.—The other day a fracas took place in Worcester, Mass. between two colored lads, in which one, from the "shivalrous South," stabbed the other dangerously. In consequence the following short but pithy dialogue took place, between a pro slavery man and an abolitionist, in the presence of a gathering on the occasion;

Pro.—Ah, these are the fellows you wish to set free.

Anti.—Are they all such?

Pro.—Yes all. They are brought up so.

Anti.—Is it not time they were brought up better?

The spectators felt the force of this Socratic way of reasoning, and the Pro had much the appearance of a dog running round after his tail.—Emancipator.

Conversation in our office.—Stranger. Sir, I wish to sign the pledge.

Secretary. We are happy to hear it, sir. It is an excellent thing to abstain from all evil, and to bind ourselves to it. What is the pledge you wish to sign?

Str. Total abstinence.

Sec. From all that intoxicates?

Str. O, yes, sir. That is the only one that is good for any thing.

Sec. Have you found, sir, that that liquid fire which so many seek after, has been your enemy?

Str. Cannot say that exactly; but I have a foolish habit upon me; only, though, when I get among friends, and then cannot very well refuse.

Sec. Well, if you sign the pledge, you will always have a good reason for refusal; you can always say I have signed the pledge, and belong to the Temperance Society.

Str. That is it. That is what I want. I suppose you will let me have a copy of what I sign, that I may carry it with me, to know what I agree to; and, perhaps, I can get others to sign also.

Sec. Certainly. Here, you may enter your name in our book; and sign this pledge, and carry it with you; and may God help you to keep your promise until death.

This little accident occurring Monday morning as we commenced our weekly labor, showed us more than a subscription for fifty papers. A Temperance office is a city of refuge, to which

In this individual we saw an immortal mind struggling to break from the snare of the fowler. Who can tell but that mind may yet be an heir of glory!

HUSBANDRY.

From the New-York Farmer.

Comparative Value of Apples.—During the last two summers and falls, my duties called me into the apple regions of the North. The following facts were obtained in reference to the subject:—

Good eating apples are worth on an average, 25 cents a bushel. Eight bushels of apples make a barrel of cider, and twelve barrels of cider make one barrel of brandy. Brandy, at fifty cents per gallon, would give but fifteen cents per bushel. This, on an orchard of one hundred trees, in ten years, would be over one thousand dollars! No allowance is made for capital and labor connected with distilling. Take these into consideration, and the loss is much greater.

It costs no more to raise good apples, suitable for market, than to raise apples only suitable for distilling. Very often apples are worth one dollar per bushel, and the loss is immense, by turning them into brandy. I am told that at Mobile, apples are now worth $10 a barrel.

Engrafting and budding will change the character of an orchard, and more than compensate for the time and amount lost, in producing the change in ten years.

Apples make most excellent food for horses.—Several physicians, of extensive practice, in Connecticut and Massachusetts, feed their horses on apples and hay. I have never seen fatter horses or more sleek and spirited. Their hair is much more lively, and requires less grooming than that of horses fed on grain. Mr. Norton of Farmington Conn., has about the finest pair of horses I have ever seen. They are fed mainly on apples and hay. They travel very fast, and seem to have both wind and bottom. It is proper, however, to remark, that not so much grain is given to horses in the North, as is customary at the South. One thing is worth noticing; horses fed on apples do not eat as much hay as when they are fed on grain. Very sour raw apples injure the teeth of horses; but when boiled they do not. The rule of feeding is to commence with a small quantity, and gradually increase to a bushel a day for one year.

Apples are most excellent food for beeves. The fattest beef I have seen, was made so with sweet apples.

Neat's cattle will fatten mutton quicker than apples. It is necessary, or best, to cut up the apples when fed to sheep.

Hogs care nothing for corn, if they can get apples; if sweet, the apples may be given without boiling—if sour, they must be boiled. Mixed with corn meal the flesh is firmer.

Apples increase the quantity and quality of milk. At first there was a prejudice against giving apples to milch cows, because it was thought they diminished or dried up the milk. It is true, that a gorge of apples, or any other green food, will cause a fever, and dry up the milk; but given in proper quantities, the effect is quite different.

Cattle and hogs are purchased and fattened on apples, and sold to a fine profit—when to fatten them on corn would insure a loss.

Sweet apples and good eating apples are to be preferred as food for horses, sheep and cows; also for hogs; though some recommend a mixture of sour and sweet apples for hogs.

If these remarks should induce any to test their correctness by making a fair experiment, the object of my writing will be fully answered.

THOMAS P. HUNT.

Durham Cattle.—It is a matter of surprise to some of our agricultural friends, how this improved breed of cattle can be worth the high prices they are bringing throughout the country.

There are many reasons for this. First, they grow larger than our common cattle. Secondly, their flesh grows more abundantly in those parts were it is considered most superior. Thirdly, they fatten more easily than ordinary kinds. Fourthly, cows of this blood give more milk, and some think of a better quality. Fifthly, this stock arrives at maturity much earlier than the common cattle of our country.

I have been often remarked that if all the grain and hay on six or one of the common breeds eat, before they arrive at maturity, were weighed and measured, and sold, that it would be found to more than the animal would sell for, to say nothing about the time spent in feeding, or the amount of pasturage. We have no doubt that the way cattle have been managed, generally, in this state, this remark would hold good. This, then, renders it important, that every effort should be made by our stock raisers, to economize by the preparations of food, especially in this country, where such beautiful crops of roots may be produced, and where so much that may with a little attention and preparation be converted into fodder, is suffered to stand in our fields and go to waste. But more especially would it be to their advantage as soon as possible to get into a breed of cattle that will come to maturity earlier than those they now have.

On the account, perhaps, arises the first from the Durham cattle, more than from any other cause. They are said to come to maturity from two to three years earlier than our scrub cattle. This, we have no doubt is the fact, when they are well attended to, and the common breed receive only ordinary attention. But there is no doubt with the same care, the expense of feeding one or two winters may be saved by our farmers, if they will procure the Durham cattle, which, together with the profits arising from the other superior qualities they possess, will make the stock raising business in this state, so peculiarly adapted to that branch of husbandry, a most lucrative business.—Indiana Farmer.

Another Murder by an Amateur.—A Mr. Brouse was deliberately shot down, in Camp-at N. Orleans, on the night of the 12th ult. by a gambler, named Field. Brouse had given no provocation, the murderer acting only en amateur. So it would seem Graves is not the only amateur murderer in the country.

Correspondence of the Journal of Commerce.

Washington, Feb'y 25th.

The Cilley murder excites here a degree of feeling which was never before witnessed on any occasion. Those who knew all the parties and all the circumstances can alone realize its brutal and atrocious character.

There are circumstances connected with the affair which, if truly related, go to show that Cilley was the victim of a conspiracy—that, to use the words of one of the parties, he was "doomed man!"

But, putting out of view all the circumstances preceding the meeting, there was enough that occurred on the ground to stamp the transaction as one of a most diabolical character. The official statement which, rumor says, is to be prepared by Messrs. Wise and Jones of Wisconsin, may, or may not present the facts to which I allude.

If it does not, the public ought to demand a strict and immediate investigation. If the facts stated and said to have been derived from Mr. Cilley's seconds are true, the civil authority ought to be interfered without delay; and, if they are not true, the public mind, now deeply agitated, ought to be quieted.

The current story, as given on the authority of Mr. Cilley's seconds, is that Mr Cilley declined Col. Webb's challenge on the ground that he was no gentleman, but that he accepted the challenge of Mr. Graves, as Col. Webb's representative. On the way to the field, Mr. Cilley said to his second, Mr. Jones of Wisconsin,—"I go under every disadvantage; I have no enmity to Mr. Graves; and I cannot shoot him. Mr. Jones communicated this on the ground, but it had not the effect to produce a withdrawal of the challenge. After the first and second fires, Mr Jones advanced and meeting Mr. Wise as the second of the other party, said "are you satisfied?" To which Mr. Wise replied, by demanding that Mr. Cilley should acknowledge that Colonel Webb was a gentleman. After the third fire, Mr. Jones said, "on the ground God what do you want more?" Mr. Cilley has acknowledged Mr. Graves to be a gentleman; he has disclaimed all enmity to him, and you have no right to make any further demand of him whatever." But Mr. Wise who managed the conference on the part of Mr. Graves, persisted in demanding that Mr Cilley should make an acknowledgement, under duress, that Col. Webb was a gentleman! On the fourth fire—(not the third as the Globe of last night says) Mr. Cilley fell, and Mr. Wise, was I suppose satisfied.

But the chance was Mr. Cilley's to die was, perhaps, a matter of accident, though I am led to believe that Mr Cilley did not intend to shoot Mr. Graves. But suppose it had fallen to the lot of the other party, or of both parties to fall, the principle would have been the same; and the seconds would have been equally responsible for the result.

Granting everything to have been properly conducted: according to the laws of duelling up to the first fire; after that, for the seconds to press another fire was murder, according to the code of honor. This is the opinion of every honorable man, including technical duellists, that has expressed an opinion on the subject. It was strictly an etiquette duel, and therefore, all the demands of etiquette and honor were satisfied by the first fire. There was no right, on the part of the seconds, to demand any acknowledgment from either party. To press the affair to a fatal result, on either side, was, therefore, premeditated murder. The circumstances demand an investigation by Congress, and by the civil authorities.

Mr. Cilley has a wife and three young children in Maine. In her quiet New England village, perhaps preparing herself and her children for Church or the Sabbath school, she little dreams that he lies here, the lifeless victim of foul conspiracy and assassination. Mr. Cilley was about thirty-two years of age, of superior talents and great moral worth.

He was descended of the best blood of the revolution. His grandfather, General Cilley, commanded a very distinguished New Hampshire Regiment, during the revolution. To morrow (Monday) his decease will probably be announced in the House.

The Duel.—Of the melancholly event at Washington, it is impossible to speak but in terms of bitter indignation and disgust. It is deeply dishonorable to the national legislature, and so far as we have information at the moment, to all parties engaged in the contest that has resulted so fatally. In the language of our correspondent yesterday morning, the meeting between Messrs. Graves and Cilley was an utter absurdity—even according to the strictest etiquette of the code by which chivalrous gentlemen profess to be governed in these affairs, and the conduct of the seconds on the ground was murderous. On them rests the enormity of a foul cold blooded murder! We care not under what technicalities they may attempt to entrench themselves—it is base, calculating and premeditated murder. No matter on which side the stigma may be fixed—no matter whether the seconds of the one or the other party insisted upon firing the fourth shot—they are homicides with malice prepense.—N. Y. Gaz.

Correspondence of the Newark Daily Advertiser.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25th, 1839.

The murder yesterday continues to fill all hearts here. I have never seen Washington more sombre in its social aspects. The accessories are severely censured by all parties with whom I have conversed. Messrs. Wise, in behalf of Mr. Graves, and Mr. Jones of Wisconsin, in behalf of poor Cilley, are to unite it is said in a publication. The current rumor is that the latter told the former, who was chairman of the Committee of murder, on that side, that Mr. Cilley declared on the way to the field that he had no cause of enmity with Graves—that he would not shoot him, and proposed a withdrawal of the challenge.

After the first fire the overture was renewed, and after the third Jones said, "in Heaven's name what more do you want: Mr. G. acknowledges Mr. Graves a gentleman, and has no cause of war with him." But it was all in vain, because he would not recognize Webb!

The parties commenced firing at 100 paces, and continued to shorten the distance until the last shot, which was at 70 paces. Both are said to have acted with perfect coolness!

The Washington papers barely mention the murder without any particulars, or remarks. We shall know in the morning whether there is virtue enough in Congress to call the murderers to account.

Monday Evening.

Popular feeling ascribes double guilt to Wise, who would be satisfied with nothing short of a recognition of Col. Webb as a gentleman. Even duellists agree that Mr. Cilley had not every requirement of their abominable code by the first fire, and that the conduct of Mr. Wise is inexcusable.

Mr. Cilley's friends are censured for not preventing the meeting. He was near-sighted, and was besides unfortunate in the choice of the ground being a little elevated from the plain, and had to shoot against the wind with a light rifle for the distance.

The seconds, Wise and Jones, have published a full statement of the affair in the Globe, which takes up two or three columns. The Newark Daily thus speaks of it:

It abundantly establishes all that has been said of the murderous character of the transaction—the cool, merciless, and butcherlike conduct of the parties concerned.

Take the following passage from a letter in the Journal of Commerce as a specimen of the manner in which the affair was conducted.

After Mr. Jones returned the last time, from the conference with Mr. Wise, and reported his reply, Mr. Cilley said in a calm and collected tone "they thirst for my blood!" Mark the result:—"Graves," said Wise, "You have fired too high, aim lower." Graves took the advice, and Cilley fell a corpse.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Thursday, Feb. 22d.

In Senate.—Mr. Crittenden opposed the Subtreasury scheme, in a very eloquent speech of 3 hours.

The House was occupied all day with the neutrality bill, which Mr. Wise opposed in a vehement speech, contending that our citizens had a right, and an indubitable right,—guaranteed to them by the constitution,—to go to Canada even with arms in their hands!!

Friday, Feb. 23.

In Senate, Mr. Brown spoke in favor of the sub-treasury bill, till half past four o'clock, and after an Executive session the Senate adjourned to Monday.

In the House, Mr. Cambreling said the committee would report a bill for the keeping and disbursing the public revenue, in the course of the ensuing week.

The neutrality bill was taken up and debated until adjournment.

Saturday, Feb. 24th.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the resolution submitted some time since, inquiring into the propriety of granting to each state a certain quantity of public lands, for the purpose of education.

The neutrality bill was again recommitted to the committee on Foreign Affairs.

Monday, Feb. 26.

In Senate.—Mr. Williams, senator from Maine announced the death of Mr. Cilley in a very appropriate speech, highly commending his late colleague, and concluded as follows:

Of the cause and manner of his death, I forbear to speak; but allow me to say, that it is my solemn conviction that he entertained no ill will, and intended no disrespect to Mr. Graves, in any thing that occurred; and that in accepting the call, he did nothing more than he believed independently to avoid disgrace to himself, to his family, and to his constituents.

It was then resolved unanimously that the senate attend the funeral of the hon. Jonathan Cilley and wear crape round the left arm thirty days.

And as an additional mark of respect the senate then adjourned.

In the House, Mr. Fairfield announced the death of his colleague. After the close of appropriate remarks, he offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the members of this house will attend the funeral of Jonathan Cilley, deceased, late a member of this house from the State of Maine, at 12 o'clock to-morrow.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to take order for superintending the funeral of Jonathan Cilley, deceased.

Resolved, That the officers and members of this house will testify their respect for the memory of Jonathan Cilley, by wearing crape on the left arm for thirty days.

Adjourned.

Tuesday, Feb. 27.

The Funeral.—The speaker called the house to order at 12 o'clock, when prayer was made by Mr. Slicer. The corpse was brought in by the committee of arrangements, with the pall-bearers, &c. The Senate, President and heads of departments then entered, the members rising to receive them, and took their seats in silence.

Mr. Slicer, chaplain of the Senate, read a chapter of the Bible, and the solemn service of the church, after which Mr. Reese, chaplain of the house, addressed the assembly in a most impressive manner. He came not to make personal reflections, for both the living and the dead had his sympathies, but he exhorted public men in the name of honor, religion and humanity to exert themselves to put a stop to the awful crime of duelling.

The procession moved to the Congressional burying ground, consisting of about 30 carriages and 700 individuals.

All felt a damning murder had been committed in cold blood of lawful reason—but the murderers themselves were not seen.

Wednesday, Feb. 28.

In Senate.—Mr. Prentiss, of Vermont, gave notice that he would to morrow introduce a bill to prohibit the giving or receiving a challenge in the district.

The bill constituting Jersey city a port of entry passed.

Mr. Davis commenced a powerful speech against the Sub-Treasury bill.

In the House, Mr. Fairfield, asked a suspension of the rules, to permit him to offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed to investigate the causes which led to the death of the Hon. Jonathan Cilley, late a member of this house, and the circumstances connected therewith, and to report thereon to this house.

Resolved, That said committee have power to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during the session of this house.

Leave was granted by a vote of 114 to 31.

After some debate, the resolutions were modified so as to add an enquiry whether there had not been a breach of privilege in the case. They were then adopted, 152 to 50.

Thursday, March 1st.

In Senate, Davis concluded his speech against the Sub-treasury bill. His speech is highly spoken of.

In the house, the speaker announced the committee in relation to the duel.

A resolution was adopted that reporters be not admitted into the hall, without the speaker's written permission.

The bill in relation to the late U. S. Bank, from the Senate, passed.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, March 7.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

The killing of Mr. Cilley at Washington seems now to be the main subject which occupies the public mind, not only where it occurred, but through the length and breadth of the land. Every tongue speaks of it in tones of abhorrence—every tongue speaks of it in tones of abhorrence—and the press, every where is doing itself honor, in uttering its deep and repeated denunciations against all concerned in the bloody transaction.—This duel is but another proof of iniquity in high places, with which the history of our country of late so rife. If even our rulers are such wicked men, what can be expected of the ruled but mobbing, lynching and murdering? And how much lower must we fall in crime, ere the civilized world can say of us, the experiment of man's governing himself has failed?

But we hope better things.—The House of Representatives have appointed a committee, by an overwhelming majority, to investigate the whole matter, and it may be, the ruffians who have disgraced this whole nation, will be expelled from the House. We are glad to see this one redeeming circumstance, and most happy are we, to notice another—The United States Supreme Court unanimously refused to attend the funeral, on the ground that the deceased fell in a duel. By that act, honored as they were before, they gained to themselves lasting honor.

In the debate preceding the adoption of the resolution appointing a committee of investigation, Mr. Cost Johnson said "it would be a delicate matter to serve on a committee of this sort!—that it would require more than ordinary nerve well braved!—that it would be necessary to be well armed!!" Indeed, and cannot American Senators deliberate and speak their minds against lawless crimes, unarmed, and without fear of their lives?—Mr. Parker, of New York, replied to him with truth and power.

The notorious Webb, editor of the Courier and Enquirer was the moving cause of all this atrocity—the fame he has obtained by his conduct, in this affair, and his own braggart and most criminal publications must sink him so very low he cannot we think in future have much influence for good or evil—the station he has so long disgraced, cannot much longer give him power—we hope he will not be able to do much more injury to his race.

We see by our exchange papers that mad dogs are at large in several parts of this state, and that cattle and sheep in abundance are destroyed by them. For the life of us we cannot see why our good Legislature did not lay a little heavier tax on dogs than they saw fit to. Year after year they destroy ten times their own value in domestic animals, and occasionally for a relish destroy a human being—and yet dogs are still permitted to continue their ravages. Not a year passes but more human lives are lost by means of dogs in this state, than all the dogs are worth, that were ever in it, to say nothing of the innumerable domestic animals yearly destroyed by them, mad or dumb. Why then should not dogs be more highly taxed.—Let those who keep them to the injury of their neighbors, be made to lessen his neighbors tax, or we should be happy if the tax were even so high as to amount to a prohibition: much better would it be for the community.

We have also too many taverns in the state, let them be taxed a little higher too. If so much money must be raised by tax, let it be laid on those things which can be spared, or on those, which, to say the least, are but of little benefit, and two good things will be done at once.

The house of Assembly in New York have at length agreed to the amendments of the Senate, in regard to small bank notes, and the bill is now a law. It suspends the operation of the restraining law for two years, and requires the banks to redeem their small notes in specie, on demand, under all circumstances.

Remarkable Temperance Society.—In the state of New Jersey, and not far from Morristown, about ten years since, a temperance society was formed having the following remarkable pledge, viz. that no member should be allowed to drink more than half a pint of liquor a day! The meeting at which this pledge was adopted, was large and respectable. It was finally, after much discussion, fixed at half a pint per day, and was considered as a great triumph—a great advance in temperance. Quere. If this was the reduction, what was the common practice? But now in that place the tee-total pledge is popular, and completes the victory commenced with half a pint a day ten years since.—N. Y. Evangelist.

Entire Abstinence Meeting

All persons favourable to sustaining the principle of entire Abstinence from all Intoxicating liquors, are requested to attend a meeting to be held at the Presbyterian Meeting House on Monday evening, 12th inst. at 7 o'clock. A punctual attendance is requested as it is proposed to organize a general society embracing that principle.

March 7th, 1838.

From the N. Y. Evening Post.

MR. JAMES WATSON WEBB caps the climax of his most ruffian-like conduct by announcing, under his own signature, in his paper of this morning, that he is determined to inflict chastisement of some sort upon every respectable person who shall dare to speak of his having been bribed to support the late U. States Bank. It is probable that this threat may silence some; but I trust there are yet more who will despise it as utterly as the wretch who proclaims it ought to be despised by every honorable man. For my own part, while the proof that this atrocious braggart's services were bought and paid for by the United States Bank exists on the enduring records of the National Legislature, I, for one, shall never hesitate to speak freely my sentiments of the contemptible apostate. I am willing to acknowledge that he is (technically, etymologically,) a gentleman—that is, that his father and grandfather were respectable men, and that some few gentlemen lend him their countenance in society—but as for himself, I hold him to be one of the basest and most craven braggarts that ever disgraced the human form. If every man and woman in this community should speak their true opinion of him, it would be found that but few voices would dissent from that which I have here expressed. I say this, not because I have any desire to obtrude myself personally before the community; but because, in the face of such a defiance as that thrown out in the Courier of this morning, I deem it the duty of those who have heretofore spoken plainly of this creature's character, to show that they are not to be intimidated by his bluster from continuing freely to express their sentiments.

WM. LEGGETT.

New York March 3d 1838

The Curse of a Committee.—A story is told in private circles, as if it were true, which is something as follows. Some years ago, the ground on which the Bowery theatre stood was purchased for a methodist church. Before the bargain was legally adjusted, a committee waited upon the owner, who demanded for what purpose the ground was to be used; on being informed, he declared that they should not have it for such a purpose. They threatened to take measures which would compel him to adhere to his agreement. He declared that he should regard no expense but that it could not be used as a place of worship. The soul of the zealous methodists kindled with righteous indignation, and one of them exclaimed, "The curse of God rest upon any building short of a church which shall ever be erected on that spot!" Three times already has desolation marked it.—N. Y. Evangelist.

The Anniversary of the Congressional Temperance Society was celebrated in the Hall of the House of Representatives, on Tuesday evening. Mr. Grundy in the Chair. Mr. Reed, and Mr. Grundy, and Mr. Briggs, of Mass., and Mr. Buckingham, addressed the meeting. The assemblage was large, and the meeting interesting and animated.

At Mobile, on the 21st ult. it snowed, for the first time since March, 1835.

At St. Augustine, on the 10th ult. the mercury stood at 28, and the ice was half an inch thick. The orange shoots which had put out were all blighted, but young buds were bursting forth to occupy their places.

It is stated in the Houston Telegraph, that 6000 emigrants have crossed into Texas at the middle ferry on the Sabine, during the last summer and fall.

Men and manners in Texas.—The same paper has the following item, by which it would seem that the new Republic is an asylum for the unprincipled"—

A man named, W. M. Brigham was mortally wounded with a dirk by a fellow named John G. C. Quick, on the evening of Wednesday last, in a brawl which took place at a gaming table, in the Houston House, in this city. Brigham has since died. Quick is in irons. Several persons who have recognized him, state that he has committed five murders!. A fit companion for Jones with whom he is now imprisoned, and who has been charged with three murders!

A Washington letter states that the Attorney General Mr. Butler, has expressed his intention to resign. "The alleged cause, he adds, will afford a striking commentary on the purity of the times. Mr. B. is a man of a religious turn, but finding that he cannot remain without a violation of those principles, he has concluded to throw up his commission. Mr. H. D. Gilpin, the present solicitor, is spoken of as his successor."

Mammoth Tree.—Mr. John O. Miller, sailed a maple tree on his farm between this town and Westfield, a few weeks since, which after being cut and corded in 4 feet lengths, measured 992 feet—or 7 3-4 cords, independent of the brush, which consisted of four ordinary two-horse sled loads besides filling 4 waggon bodies with chips and broken limbs. This tree was planted by Mr. M.'s grandfather, about 90 years ago. It was struck by lightning about 5 years since, and again last summer, which induced Mr. M. to cut it down. It measured 4 feet through, and 10 feet body. Beat this who can.—Elizabethtown Journal.

Mr. Rice Garland of Louisianna, is reported to have used, in the debate on Wednesday, most unbecoming and denunciatory language towards the Chaplain, Mr. Sibley, for his reference to the murder of Cilley, in his prayer at the funeral. The Speaker in a very animated tone, called him to order, and declared that no gentleman could reply to anything said during that ceremony

ENIGMA No. XXXVIII.

Admitting the diameter of the earth to be 7920 miles; how far asunder measured on the surface, are each two of four places on the earth that are equally distant from each other; and if one be the south pole and another on the meridian of London what will be the latitude and longitude of the last three?

PLAINFIELD CLASSICAL INSTITUTION.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is now at the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

English Studies, Common branches, per qr. $2 to $4.00
" Higher branches, 6.00
Studies preparatory to a Collegiate Course, 7.00
Collegiate Studies, 10.00
Modern Languages an extra charge.

Tuition bills of all pupils from abroad to be paid in advance.

No deduction for absence, except at the option of the Principal.

Scholars can board with the teachers for $2.25 per week, including washing, ordinary fuel and lights.—Boarders must furnish their own beds and bedding.

N. M. DEXTER, } Associate
HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendance.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs. Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and integrity to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and education.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—to which as well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY
At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to be known by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservation of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, will forbid the hope for evil deed turned back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is giv en without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access to all persons of the public, by either public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred in this section in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases yet the cause of disease (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any. Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and produce a due charge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretion—to purify the blood—to equalize arterial action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts—illustrated with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood—and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, art- engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecess ors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $6000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian and Spanish and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve give it variety, and render it one of the most piquan fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors. Fully maintaining its pre-eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictoreal embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, insidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

NOTICE

Of Domestic Attachment.

NOTICE is hereby given that a Writ of Attachment issued out of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas, of the County of Essex, at the suits of Alfred Berry and Cornelius Dunham, trading and doing business under the name and firm of Berry & Dunham, against the rights and credits, moneys and effects, goods and chattels, Lands and Tenements, of FRAZEE GRIFFIN, an absconding debtor, in a plea of Trespass on the Case, upon promises for one hundred dollars, hath been duly served and returned to the said Court in the Term of October last, by the Sheriff of the said County: and unless the said Frazee Griffin shall appear, give Special Bail, and receive a declaration at the suit of the Plaintiff's, Judgment will be entered against him, and the Estate so attached will be sold.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,

C. Postley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterboch cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neetness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patteons we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Ink, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great or Durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be imparted by Sea air.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Industry and Application.—Franklin has given you a lesson rich with salutary instruction. Toil, unremitted and zealous toil; severe, searching, and untiring thought, occupied both his mind and his body. You who have read his memoirs —and who has not?—have only to contrast your own situations with that of this persevering mechanic. Imagine yourselves the rudely dressed and ungainly boy wending his way, homeless and penny less, through the streets of Philadelphia. Look again, and how is he changed! The fineries of his greatness, arranged, and strengthened by years of painful exertion, have burst forth in all their splendor. He has called about him the elements of the storm, and made, as it were a plaything of the lightning. Kings, at the head of nations, are doing homage to his genius. The proudest and the lovliest of earth, the terrible in war, and the mighty in council, are bending like worshippers at the shrine of his intellect.

Romantic as this may seem, there was nothing of romance or poetry in the temperament of Franklin. He indeed sought out new paths, and looked deep into the phenomenon of nature, and the character of man—but it was no flight of his imagination that overlooked the false and limited boundary of science. It was the fixed glance of an inquisitive but disciplined mind.

Take Perkins for another example. He has acquired a high reputation in his native country, and in Europe. Yet had this man contented himself with listless activity—had he relaxed in the least from his habits of severe study and patient investigation, he would have been at this moment the very reverse of all he is,—an unregarded and indolent sojourner on the great theatre of human action. Talk of genius as you may—speak of it as unsought for, an immediate revelation of transcendant power—whatever it has been called, or whatever it may be, it is useful and glorious only in those who have struggled with passion and circumstance, and built up by slow and almost imperceptible degrees, the temple of their greatness. There may be, and is a phenomenon of mind which bursts forth at once in the full possession of power like Pallas from the brow of the infidel deity. It may flash out like a comet in the starry heaven of intellect—dazzling and flaming for a moment, but it will leave no traces of its path, no gem of light and knowledge in the horizon, over which it has hurried.

The subjoined story is doubtless the mere coinage of the brain of some crusty old bachelor. It is well told, nevertheless.

Can you keep a Secret.

"Dorothy," said Ichabod, pale and trembling, to his wife, "Dorothy, I have a secret, and if I thought you would keep it inviolable, I would not hesitate to reveal it to you; but, O, Dorothy, woman."

"Why, Ichabod, it must certainly be a secret of great importance, for you are in a woful state of agitation. You know, husband, you can place implicit confidence in your wife. Have I ever given you occasion to doubt my fidelity."

"Never, never, Dorothy, but the secret I have to communicate is one that requires more than ordinary faithfulness and prudence, to prevent you from divulging it. O, dear, I shudder when I think of it."

"Why, husband, do you know how your lips tremble and your eyes roll? What's the matter? Ichabod! you surely cannot mistrust the confidence of your wife. Come, unbosom yourself."

"May I rely on your fidelity?"

"Ichabod, you know you may."

"Well, then, we are both ruined! undone! I have committed murder!"

"Murder!"

"Yes, murder! and I have buried him at the foot of a tree in the orchard."

"Oh, awful! Ichabod. Committed murder! then, indeed, we are both ruined, and our children with us."

Ichabod left the room, and Dorothy hurried off to a neighbor's. Mrs. Prattle observed a great change in Dorothy's countenance, so great as to cause her to inquire into the occasion of it.

"Oh, Mrs. Prattle," said Dorothy, "I am the most miserable of women! I am ruined forever."

"Mercy, Dorothy, how gloomy you look.—What has turned up to make you look so dejected!" Why how you sigh, woman. Tell me the cause."

"I wish I might, Mrs. Prattle, but the occasion of my unhappiness is a secret which I am not permitted to divulge."

"O! you may tell me Dorothy. I shall never speak of it again."

"Will you promise never to reveal it to any person living?"

"You know, Dorothy, I never tell secrets."

"Well, Mrs. Prattle—I scarcely dare say it —my husband has committed murder, and buried him at the foot of a tree in the orchard! he told me of it himself. For heaven's sake don't name it to any one."

"Murder! your husband committed murder! indeed, indeed, Dorothy, you have reason to think yourself ruined! Poor thing! I pity you from the bottom of my heart!"

Dorothy went home weeping, and leaving her dough half kneaded, and her infant crying in the cradle, hastened to hold a tete-e-tate with a Mrs. Tuffail. Soon after the confab ended, the report of Ichabod's having committed murder became general, and the disclosure of the fact was traced to his wife Dorothy. Process was immediately issued against him by a magistrate, before whom and in the presence of a multitude of anxious spectators, he gave the following explanation.

"My object," said Ichabod, "in the course I have pursued, was to test the capability of my wife to keep a secret. I have commited murder inasmuch as I have killed a toad and buried it at the foot of a tree in my own orchard. How far my wife is capable of keeping a secret has been sufficiently proved: and, with respect to the murder those who feel any interest in it, are at liberty to inspect the body.

A Mr. John Gordon died a short time since, near Turiff, Banffshire, having attained the remarkable age of one hundred and thirty two years. All the travellers who chanced to call at the neighboring inn of Turiff were uniformly directed by the landlady, Mrs. Wallace, to the cottage of patriarch, where they would see (she used to say) the oldest man in Banffshire, "ay, or in the world." Among the visitors one day, about the close of harvest, was a young English man, who, coming up to the door of the cottage, accosted a venerable looking man, employed in knitting hose, with "so my old friend can you see to knit at your advanced period of life? one hundred and thirty two is truly a fine age." Deil's the note; it will be my grandfather ye're seeking—I'm only seventy three—ye'll find him round the corner of the house." On turning around the corner the stranger encountered a debilitated old man, whose whitened locks bore testimony to his having long passed the meridian of life, and whom the stranger at once concluded to be John Gordon himself. "You seem wonderfully fresh, my good sir, for so old a man; I doubt but you have experienced many vicissitudes in the course of your very long life." "What's your will sir?" inquired the person addressed, whose sense of hearing was somewhat impaired. The observation was repeated. "Oh, ye'll be wanting my father, I reckon—he's in the yard there." The stranger now entered the garden, where he at last found the venerable old man busily employed in digging potatoes, and humming the ballad of the bat's of Harlaw: "I have had some difficulty in finding you, friend, as I successively encountered your grandson and son, both of whom I mistook for you; indeed they seem as old as yourself. Your labor is rather hard for one of your age." It is (replied John,) but I am thankful that I able for's, as the laddies, puir things, are no verra stout now." The united ages of the worthy trio amounted to upwards of 300 years.—London Examiner.

American Sales at Auction.—The common mode of selling imported goods, by auction, in the large American cities, the most wealthy and respectable in New York. The auctioneer is frequently a partner, and takes a very short time to each lot, proceeding rapidly, never pausing, save for breath, and interspersing the biddings with observations. I have often been astonished at the melange; "Now gentlemen, lot No. 14, 2055 yards black Lowell satinet. What is bid?—will nobody give me a bid?—a bid, if you please gentlemen—20, 20, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, and a half, 27, 28, 29, 30, 30, and a half—thank you sir, 30 and a half, gentlemen, 30 and a half, and a half, and a half, 31—thank you, 31 and a half—don't make a noise—and a half, I can't hear myself speak, 31 and a half, send out that woman—and a half, what does she do there?—and drive out all these boys—31 and a half—what do they want?—and a half, 31 and a half, 32, 32 and a half—one of these boys has got a dog—and a half—32 and a half—will nobody give that dog a few kicks? 32 and a half, and a half, and a half—gentlemen this is a real bargain—and a half—I know some merchants—32 and a half, gentlemen who would give any thing—and a half—for these goo s—32 gentlemen it is a shame—and a half—last time, and a half, gentlemen,—once, twice, gone. Now, gentlemen, lot No. 15. &c. All this occupies only one minute, the whole being one incessant rattle, without pause or cessation.—English paper.

Mineral Wealth in Virginia.—A rich vein of Iron Ore has been opened on the south side of James River, near Richmond, on the new railroad which will soon be opened from the coal pits to the river. There has also been discovered a large bed of natural coke, just below the iron ore, and which is near 17 feet in thickness. This was first discovered by those who are engaged in laying down the railroad.

Pedestrian Feat.—The L. I. Star mentions that Abraham Nostrand, of Hempstead, walked from the Brooklyn ferry, to Elders's, at Hempstead, 21 miles, on Saturday, in three hours and twenty six minutes! on a wager that he could not accomplish it in three hours and a half. When the state of the roads is considered, they being slippery with ice and snow, this travelling is certainly extraordinary.

At recent meeting of school trustees in Jersey, a candidate for the "pedagogicy," of the district appeared with his father, a farmer, who had spared no pains to provide his son, not only with an adequate Architecture, but all other requisites for the desired situation. The importance attached to the possession of a watch was not overlooked by the old gentleman; and wishing to convey a hint to the board that his hopeful offspring was furnished also with this rare recommendation, demanded of him in a loud voice, "what time it was by his new patent lever, double case, silver watch, with a steel chain and gold seal to it."

"Sixty-five minutes past eleving, daddy," replied the aspirant for academical distinction.

Moral and Religious.

Infidelity and Novels.—At a public meeting at Cincinnati, Dr. Dyng, of Philadelphia advorted to the activity and peculiar character of the infidelity of the present time. It was not the open, bloody, gross, unmasked, daring infidelity of Voltaire and his day. It was now subtle and refined —clothed in all the attractions of eloquence and taste: it came to us even in the garb of virtue and religion. The sentiment had been uttered, and found favor with many, that when vice loses its grossness, it loses half its guilt." But, said Dr. T. "never was there a sentiment more completely dug up from hell than this." He mentioned that he had long since proscribed novels from his reading, but recently when stepping on board a steamboat on the Ohio, a friend placed in his hand two volumes of Bulwer. He had leisure and perused them, and found there sanctioned adultery, duelling, and things of that kind, not openly and directly, but under peculiar circumstances; yet in such a way as to break down all the barriers of virtue. He uttered a heavy and deserved denunciation upon those professed Christians who, as book publishers, and booksellers, were deluging the community with such works—who were in effect bartering the souls of their fellow-men for money.

Prof. Stowe expressed his gratification at the turn the discussion had taken—the sentiments which had been uttered respecting infidel and licentious publications, and said of the author who had been alluded to (Bulwer,) that he deserved only to be pitied, despised and execrated, and in this light is he looked upon by good men in his own country.

From the American Temperance Union.

An Appeal to Families of Influence and Respectability, on the ordinary Use of Wine.—There is nothing, perhaps, attended with greater difficulties, than an intereference with the internal arrangements of influential and respectable families.

As a man's house is his castle, which no one may enter, without his permission, so his table is preeminently, his own; and no one, ordinarily, may inquire why he spreads it as he does. The rule, in general, is good, "What ever I see before you, eat, asking no question;" and, if we have ever thought it wrong to partake of meats or drinks, we have simply declined, in silence, without remark, reproof, or admonition.

Yet there are, occasionally, great interests at stake, when we may enter our neighbor's dwelling, and ask his influence. Every family was subjected to domestic discomfiture, when our fathers refused to pay the paltry tax on tea, to England; and it was a noble triumph of principle for appetite and custom, when the pleasant beverage was banished from us throughout the country.

We are in conflict with an enemy to man in all his relations. Intemperance casts a blight upon our world. No age, no rank, no sex, no condition but feels its withering touch.

Its great support, "the worm of the still," is trodden under foot; but the wine cup is nurtured among us. It is so, we are persuaded, not from any charming love of its intoxicating quality, but because father or mother, son or daughter, have an uncontrollable affection for it; but through habit and fashion. The families, to whom we now would speak, have always used wine at their chief meal, and in their evening en tertainments; and to dispense with it would be a strange work. It would be breaking caste. They could not brook the appearance of inhospitality. They would be charged, too, with yielding to men who have made themselves a rule for others, without either interest or reason. But will not such for a moment listen to our appeal? We know they will. Their character ensures it.

What, then, is wine, that it should daily be on your table, and constitute a part of every entertainment?

Said the voice of inspiration thousands of years ago, "Wine is a mocker." "Who hath wo? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contention? Who hath wounds? They that tarry long at the wine! What disgraced the second father of the human family, and made him curse his children? Wine. What, for 5000 years, was the great cause of drunkenness in the world? Wine. And has its character changed since the discovery of the art of distillation? Has it not, by admixtures of brandy, become more intoxicating? more deadly in its results? Has it not, at least, 25 per cent. of alcohol; an article which you would never drink in other forms? Why then should you daily use it?

Is it healthful? Is it beautiful? Is it even pleasant? Are you not always better without it, than with it? Does it not excite and inflame? disturb healthy mental action, and purity of feeling? Is it not dangerous? Has it not ruined thousands on thousands, and may it not ruin you and your children?

We make these inquiries, not in disrespect, but to excite reflection, and lead to investigations for, I may be, you have never thought of giving a reason why you use it, or why you should abandon it.

Perhaps you say, habit has made it essential. But is it so? Are you willing to acknowledge, that habit, not principle, governs you? Or, fashion requires it? But who creates fashion? You say, your neighbor. And who creates it for your neighbor? He says you. He sets up a standard. You call it fashion, and follow it. Now set your standard be right and it will create the correct fashion for all influenced by you.

But what is the fashion on this subject? Very different from what it once was, in thousands of influential and reputable families. We can point to such all over the land, where wine is not tolerated. We can name hundreds of both sexes, with whom you would be proud to associate, whose presence would banish it from your table. Fashion, then, unless you look to the theatre-going, voluptuous, pleasure seeking population, does not demand it. Why, then, do you continue to use it?

Has it not had influences? Does it not fearfully retard the Temperance reformation? Does it not offend Christian brethren. Does it not lay a snare and a trap, in the way of unfortunate, miserable men, who have been reformed, and snatched as brands from the burning? Are you sure that no child of your own, or no child of a friend, will hereafter remember you as the cause of his ruin?

Perhaps your residence is near one of our distinguished schools of learning. A youth of promise brings you letters from a distant friend, asking your kind attentions to his only son. You invite him to dine. You place him with your sons and daughters, in their evening parties. The wine flows freely. He drinks. He cannot do otherwise. He may shrink from it, as that to which he is unaccustomed; which he does not need; which unfits him for study; which makes him feverish and restless; but you urge it upon him. His Temperance friends would enlist him in their ranks. But he is committed to drink wine at your table; to drink it with your son, who visited at his room; to drink it with your daughters when he mingles in their pleasure. Wonder not if that young man is ruined. We have the testimony of the professors of our colleges, that wine is the chief source of intemperance in those institutions, and the ruin of some of the finest youth of our country. Ought not this consideration to weigh with you? Have you no sons, the pride of your families? no hearts that would be broken by their adoption of destructive habits; especially when recommended to friends, in the unrighteous of whose ways you had entire confidence?

Perhaps you say, your clergymen approves of your practice, and the Bible pronounces wine a blessing. And are you certain that he does not do it, because in his private practice he declines to number himself to oppose the ways of those on whom he is so much dependent for support and happiness?—certain, that he does not wish in his heart that you would abandon it, that he might also; and that he might rise against it his own testimony? Or on the other supposition, fearful and terrible as it is, that he loves the wine when it sparkles in its cup, will you consent, as there many hospitable parishioners in whom pen, (O that hospitality were more equal than the general!) and your minister down as ignominy and death?

And when you appeal to the Bible, can you, anywhere, find it written, as with a sunbeam, Wine is a blessing, as it is, Wine is a mocker!! And if the Bible allows you to drink it, does not the Bible also allow you to let it alone? and does not God often express his high approbation of those who drink neither wine nor strong drink? Does not Paul say, "it is good, neither to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth;" and would he not, beholding the stumbling falling around us into the drunkard's grave, say, if there ever was a call for this Christian charity it is at the present moment.

We beseech you, ponder these things. You create fashion. You have influence. You will hand down a generation either to bless or curse the earth.

If as we cast an eye back some twenty years into some of the most respectable families of England, where the wine flowed freely, and the father and mother gone—gone, under the mandate, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and now nothing remaining but profligate, drunken sons, fast wasting their fair estates, we have an argument, which must, we think, come home to your bosoms, and which you will not, cannot resist.

Remarks on the General Principles of Husbandry.—1. Whatever may be the nature of your soil, and situation of your farm, remember that there is no soil so good, but it may be exhausted, and ruined by bad tillage, and that there is none so bad, that cannot be rendered fertile by good tillage, even barren heath if it can be plentiful and swarded.

2. The true art of husbandry consists in suffering no crop upon your land, that will so far exhaust your soil, as to lessen the value of your succeeding crop, whatever profit such a crop may afford you.

3. To avoid this, suffer no one crop to grow two years successively, upon the same piece of ground, excepting grass, and buck-wheat, without the fertilizing aid of rich manures to support the strength of the soil; and even then, a change of crops will generally do best, excepting roots, carrots, and hemp.

4. Every plant derives from the earth for its growth, such properties as are peculiar to itself; by this plant, when followed successively for two or more years upon the same ground, will exhaust the soil of those properties peculiar to itself, without lessening its powers to produce some other plants; this fact is most striking in the article of flax, which will not bear to be repeated oftener than once in seven years, and is common to all crops, with the exception of those noticed in article 3.

5. To avoid this evil, arrange your farm into such divisions as will enable you to improve alike the variety of crops your lands may require, in such regular succession, as to form a routine of 9, 8, or 7 years, according to the nature, quality and condition of the ground.

6. This method will make poor land good, and good better. Try and see.

The following article from the Editor of the New York American, now at Washington, was published in that paper Febuary 29.

THE LATE DUEL AT WASHINGTON.

From the Editor.

WASHINGTON, 26th Feb. 1838.

I send the following statement for publication, to prevent Col. J. W. Webb. It is accurate, as I know in its essential particulars, in the which related to the impression and s which Col. Webb rested on the evening of Friday, 23d, and up to 10 o'clock A. M of Saturday that no meeting could take place on that day between Mr. Graves and Mr. Cilley.

"Col. Webb evinced the most resolute purpose to prevent, at any rate, and at any hazard, the destruction of Mr. Graves for himself, in the combat, and nothing but the unusual haste with which the matter seems to have been pressed to an issue, could, it is believed, have defeated the success of the interposition and that of other friends as well as of the law, to prevent the duel.

"It is not deemed necessary to give the signatures to this paper, as it might not be agreeable to the parties to see their names in print, on such an occasion. Any gentlemen, however, desiring it may see the original statement at his office.

Gadsby's Hotel.

Washington, Feb. 25, 1838.

Early in the morning of yesterd y Col Webb, of New York, called at my lodgings while I was yet in bed, and stated that on the evening preceding, Mr. Cilley, of Maine, had accepted a challenge from Mr. Graves of Kentucky, and that they were to fight at eighty paces with rifles. Col. Webb said that the proposal meeting grew out of a correspondence between Mr. Graves and Mr. Cilley, founded upon a letter from Col. Webb to Mr. Cilley asking for an explanation of certain language used on the floor of the House of Representatives, and of which letter Mr. Graves was the bearer He said that it was utterly impossible that any meeting could be permitted to take place between Messrs. Graves and Cilley until Mr. Cilley had first met him, and that he was determined to prevent a meeting upon Mr. Cilley, he then soon questions what they might; and that in pursuance of that determination, he had secured the services of ——— on the evening previous, shortly after the acceptance of Mr. Graves challenge by Mr. Cilley, and now called to ask my co-operation in the following proceeding, viz:

"That Col. Webb, accompanied by Mr. ——— and myself, properly armed, should repair to Mr. Cilley's room, with Mr. Webb, should offer Mr. Cilley the choice of two dueling pistols, with the following agreements; viz: that a word of honor that he would give Col Webb a meeting before Mr. Graves, at such place and time, and with such weapons as Mr. Cilley might prefer; and in the event of doing neither, then to expect the most summary consequences on the spot." Webb then added, "Should he refuse either to fight me at once, or give the pledge required, I shall have the alternative left me to shatter his right arm and then by force of circumstances say fresh, and considered Col. Webb bound in honor to take the course he suggested, and promptly declared my willingness to accompany him. At 10 o'clock I was informed by Col. Webb, that although he had been required on the evening previous, that Messrs. Graves and Cilley would not meet for some days, he had reason to believe that he had been unnecessarily deceived, and that the meeting would take place that day at 12 o'clock. At his request, he decisively took measures to obtain whether Mr. Cilley was at his lodgings, and finding that he was not, Col. Webb, Mr. ——— and myself, all armed, took a carriage and repaired to Bladensburg, where it was said the meeting was to take place. Before arriving at the ground, Col. Webb designated the following as the order of proceeding, to which we assented. "Arriving at the ground he would call him, and demanded by every consideration of duty towards his chivalric friend Mr. Graves; "On meeting the parties," said Col. W. "I'll approach Mr. Cilley, and tell him that this is my quarrel, and he must fight me, and if he name his rifle as my friend, I'll shoot him on the spot." We know that upon this, Messrs. Graves and Wise will interfere, and that we will be ordered off the ground but I shall tell them that we have come prepared to fight all three or perform the meeting, and that it cannot proceed without first settling with us." From our knowledge of the parties it is probable that some one of them will then raise his weapon at me, when I shall instantly shoot Cilley, and we must proceed to defend ourselves in the best way we can.

On arriving at the usual dueling ground, we discovered that the parties were not there; and after waiting half an hour, returned to the Capitol, when Col. Webb had a conversation with, and we understood, requested General Mercer to go to the civil authorities, make a formal complaint in his (Col. W's) name, and cause officers to be dispatched in every direction to discover and apprehend the parties.

We learnt at the Capitol, that the parties had only been absent about twenty minutes, and that the meeting was to take place at the old Magazine. We instantly followed in pursuit; but on arriving at the place designated, understood that the parties had not been there. We were then induced to believe that the shore of the Potomac, near the Arsenal at Greenleaf's Point, was the place of meeting, and we followed in pursuit. But here again we were foiled; and I have since understood that the place of meeting was changed to avoid interruption by Col. W. It now being after two o'clock, P. M., we returned to Gadsby's House and there awaited the result.

It is unnecessary to add what would have been the course of Col. Webb, if Mr. Graves instead of Mr. Cilley, had been injured. Suffice me to say, that the determination was sanctioned by us; and however, in fact, we explored it, we could not doubt but the same ordinary position in which he stood would have warranted the course determined upon.

(Signed)

The foregoing statement of major ——— is correct as to that which relates to myself, and to our join proceedings—or in other words, in all its parts of which I could have any knowledge, not having been present at the time major ———'s services were sought for and secured.

(Signed)

The seconds to the parties have made a statement of the affair, and pledge the word of honor that the matter will rest with their signatures. Which can never be the case as long as there is suffic- ient personal responsibility left in the community to frown upon lawless violence. Hear them;

"We considered to discharge our duties according to that code under which the parties met, regulated by magnanimous principles and the laws of humanity. Neither of us has taken the least exception to the course of the other; and we sincerely hope that here all controversy will end or may cease. We especially desire our respective friends to make no publication on the subject. None can regret the termination of the affair more than ourselves, and we hope again that the last of it will be the signatures of our names to this paper which we now affix.

For the Plainfield Union.

Cedar Brook, March 7th, 1838.

Mr. Cushing;

Sir—I have copied a letter from Guy Richards, Esq. of Canada, inserted in the Cultivator, of September last, for the Union—I have done it, that the remedy recommended for the hydrophobia might be known in this vicinity, but especially, because I have been acquainted with Mr. Richards from his youth, and consider him entitled to full confidence.

I am yours respectfully,

D. L. Dodge.

"St. Andrews, L. C. Feb. 1836.

"Messrs. Editors—In your paper of the 20th inst I find a notice copied from the Journal of Commerce, that one of your most respectable merchants had been bitten by a mad dog; and being in possession of a certain remedy for that dreadful disease, hydrophobia, I beg leave to communicate it to you, in the hope that it can be received and applied in the case referred to, before it may be too late. The remedy can in no case do him any harm, and I have known it tried in many cases with success. I have readed here more than twenty-five years, and although canine madness is more common here than in any other country, I have never known a fat case of hydrophobia, where this has been applied. It is universally known and used among the Canadians—I am acquainted with six persons who were bitten from eight to fifteen years ago, by dogs that were afterwards proved to be mad, from the fact, that animals bitten immediately thereafter, died with every symptom of hydrophobia; but by the use of this remedy are in perfect health. I am aware that a remedy coming from such a distance, and from a stranger will not likely meet with a cordial reception; but I am induced to give it, in hope that its evident harmlessness will insure a trial. It is as follows:

"Take three spoonsful of oyster shell lime, powder it, and sift it through a piece of book muslin; to this add a sufficiency of egg to give it a consistency something like soft dough—fry it in a little fresh butter or olive oil. Let the patient eat this twice in the morning, and abstain from food or drink at least six hours. This dose repeated for three mornings in succession, is in all cases sufficient.

"As it may be satisfactory to know something of the character of the writer, I beg leave to refer you to Charles H. Castle, cashier of the City Bank, Montreal.

Yours, with respect, GUY RICHARDS."

A Delicate Hint!—The Philosopher is inimitable in his mode of giving instruction. Yesterday he was trying to sell a cake of perfumed shaving soap, and a third person stepped up and interfered in the bargain, by depreciating it. The Philosopher bore with his usual meekness for several minutes, and then calmly remarked—"Stranger, I don't know how it is up what you got your boughten up, but in the town what I come from, there was two nation smart men who make consider bit of a forin just by minding their own business."—The crimson suffusion that o'erspread the stranger's countenance indicated that the Philosopher's seasonable advice had sunk deep into his heart. He opened the door, and went out, and the Philosopher stroked his chin gently.

There are some folks, who think a good deal, and say but little, and they are wise folks; and there are others ages who blate right out what- ever comes uppermost, and I guess they're pretty considerable darned fools.

Fearful Dying Loss from Europe.—After a very unusual interval we have at length further intelligence from Europe. Paris papers to the 13th, and London dates to the 12th, have been received, being nine days later from the Havre than the packet. There appears to have been no positive news of a pacific complexion.

A treaty has been concluded between the French government and Greece, providing for the transportation of the mail by a line of steamboats between the two countries.

Three large buildings have been destroyed by fire viz: the Royal Exchange, in London, was burnt down on the 10th January. The Italian Opera House in Paris, and the Winter Imperial Palace in St. Petersburg are also destroyed.

The Royal Exchange was a quadrangular stone building, in the center of which was an open area where the merchants met, and around it a piazza with offices. The Bank was only separated by one street. The merchants knew most of Gaddhall. No! very few lost, but many firemen were injured, and the loss of papers and property is incalculable.

The Opera House in Paris was burnt on Sunday night the 16th Jan., about an hour after the performances had closed, and the audience retired. It was a frightful scene, and many fivers were lost.—The building was insured, and the furniture for 30,000 fr.

Important from the Canadian Frontier.

Gen. Scott arrived at Monroe, Michigan, on the 25th ult. On the 24th a party of patriots took possession of a small island on the Detroit river, on the Canada side, and the next day were dislodged by the British Batteries, and escaped to the American shore.

They were about 150 in number, and were immediately disarmed by Brig. Gen. Brady, and suffered to disperse.

A deputy marshall was in pursuit of the leader the patriot adjutant Gen. McLeod.

At the North, they had been collecting, for some time at a place near the lines in Vermont, and on the 28th ult. they passed over into Canada, under Drs. Nelson and Coe, British refugees, and encamped for the night about two miles from the lines. On the next morning upon organizing their forces, they became convinced that they could not stand against the Royal force that were marching against them. That morning, previous to disbanding they received intelligence of the defeat of McKenzie and Van Rensselaer. They therefore came to the conclusion that discretion was the better part of valor and delivered up their arms to Gen. Wool, who met them at the lines and received them, including two field pieces. The number who laid down their arms was about two hundred and fifty. The whole amount of their forces was probably about 400.

The valliant Doctors, were taken into custody by Gen. Wool.

The most of the arms and ammunition recently stolen from the N. Y. Arsenals, have been recovered by Col. Worth.

Van Rensselaer has been arrested, at the suit of the U. States, near Auburn, and put into the County Jail.

MRS. GRAVES.—The Washington Correspondent of the Pennsylvania Inquirer, states that this lady, the wife of Mr. Graves, was not aware until late in the morning that her husband was about to be engaged in a duel. It came to her knowledge by accident, when she immediately proceeded to a Magistrate and procured a bench warrant for the arrest of all the parties concerned.—She then proceeded to the Marshall, procured a carriage, and accompanied the officer in search of the combatants. The duellists, however, had gone to a secluded place across the Potomac, and Mrs. Graves, after a long search, returned in despair. Before she reached her lodgings, "the deed was done."

From the Baltimore Patriot:

We cannot so far disregard the public good, and the ends of truth, as to look upon the present tragedy, or speak of it in a party point of view or character. Neither can we be insensible to the efforts that are making in certain quarters, to give it precisely that aspect calculated for from the lamentable affair to draw some miserable temporary advantage to their party. The effort is well understood to be a moral sense of all thinking men. It cannot but tend to compromise all the advantage which might be derived from the public good by a just and candid discussion of the subject, and must even end in securing its own selfish and sinful object.

REGULAR BORES.—Let Loungers attend to this,—How unutterably provoking it is when one sits down at his desk or to his business to be interrupted by a regular waster a man who has a regular business of his own, but desires to interrupt others who have any, or at least from attending to it if they have. Such men know nothing of the value of time, and while away whole hours of your precious days as unceremoniously as if they supposed you were paid by the hour for listening to them.—Coughing, yawning, or even reading aloud, can have no effect on them. They journey in all with infinite complaisance and good humor, and when in despair you have ceased from all these, and submitted silently to your fate, throwing yourself back in your chair and folding your arms with a sigh, while a look of doleful resignation fixes itself upon your brow, they exclaim with a tone to signify the fit of thoughtfulness and absence of mind, which they imagine has temporarily seized you, by having you with long stories about their families, their dogs and their travels. Then after they have totally exhausted your patience, and excited you into fever, they but you adieu with an expression of regret that they have not time to remain longer. Some scheme of reform should be devised for the relief of those whose time is too precious to be thus idly wasted.—Com. Bulletin.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, March 2d.

In Senate, A bill was introduced to prohibit the giving or receiving a challenge within the district to fight a duel, and for the punishment thereof, &c.

The bill was read twice, by general consent, and referred to com. on the judiciary.

Mr. Strange addressed the senate in favor of the Sub-treasury bill.

In the house, the neutrality bill passed, 130 to 45, and sent to the senate.

Mr. Cambreling reported a bill for the collecting, safe-keeping, and transfer of the public money.

Saturday, March 3d.

In Senate, Mr. Strange concluded his speech in favor of the sub-treasury bill.

In the house, the pension appropriation bill passed.

Monday, March 5th.

In Senate, Mr. Clay presented a memorial, praying Congress to establish a Great National Internal Improvement Loan company, with a capital of $100,000,000,—referred to the committee on Finance.

Mr. Merrick spoke against the sub-treasury bill.

In the House, the following joint resolution was offered and twice read:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, which when ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution;

Congress shall have power to prohibit by law that no person shall be capable of holding or being elected to any post of profit, trust, or emolument, civil or military, legislative, executive, or judicial, under the Government of these United States, who shall here-to-fore fight a duel, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel, the probable issue of which may be the death of the challenger or challenged, or who shall be a second to either party, or shall in any manner aid or assist in such duel, or shall be knowingly the bearer of such challenge or acceptance; but no person shall be disqualified first by reason of his having prior to the passage of such law, fought such duel, or sent or accepted such challenge, or been accessary in such duel, or bearer of such challenge or acceptance.

Mr. Adams created some amusement by presenting the following resolution with the most perfect coolness—

Resolved That the letter and petition of John V. Brown and twelve others from Rocky Mount Friendly Association, Virginia, praying for reasons therein assigned, for the arraignment at the bar of the House, and expulsion of John Quincy Adams, a member of its House, be printed, with the names of the signers thereto, and referred to a committee of nine members and consider and report thereon, with liberty to send for persons and papers.

The letter and memorial were read at his request. The names were read, when Mr. Sergeant, of Va. remarked that he paper purported to come from his constituents, and that he believed them to be fictitious, and on his motion the whole of that was laid on the table. Among the petitions, was one from Alabama, in favor of the annexation of Texas. Mr. Adams made an effort to refer it to a committee, but it was laid on the table by a large majority.

Tuesday, March 6th

In Senate, Mr. Norvell spoke two hours in favor of the Sub treasury bill.

A bill was reported from the Judiciary committee against Dueling, and was made the order of the day for Monday next.

In the House, Cambreling presented a report on his sub-treasury bill.

Mr. Adams asked leave to present a memorial from 270 citizens, in relation to the late duel, designating by them as a most atrocious murder.

Objection being made to the reception, it was decided to receive it, 103 to 43.

It was read and referred to the committee appointed to investigate that subject.

Mr. Fairfield presented a similar memorial, referred in the same way,—ayes 107, nos not counted.

Both memorials were from Newark, and are the first that have been presented.

The rule was on the committee of the Judiciary, occasioned by the death of J. Cilley, was directed to be filled.

Wednesday, March 7.

Sub-Treasury Bill.—Three strong remonstrances were presented against it from N. York and Philadelphia. After considerable debate, the papers took to their course.

Mr. Robinson, in obedience to the instructions of the Pennsylvania legislature, moved to postpone the bill to the next session. The motion failed, yeas, 23—nays 29.

In the house, Mr. Adams made an effort to present two memorials from Mass. in relation to the late duel. The vote to suspend the rules stood 99 to 55—not two-thirds.

The appropriation bill was under discussion nearly all day.

In a trip to Washington, there is nothing so forcibly strikes the mind as the immense line of Rail Road, which connects the commercial emporium (N. York) with the capital of our republic. With the exception of the Passage between South Amboy and New York, it runs on one continuous line of Rail Road, over which, by the application of steam, you are impelled with a velocity truly astonishing. The cars on these roads are immensely large each of them being capable of seating comfortably sixty persons. They are fitted up with cushioned seats, and warmed by sheet iron stoves. You suffer no inconvenience from the severest cold, and so smooth and regular is the action, that you can read with perfect ease.—Correspondent Journal Com.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, March 14.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man.
Thomas Jefferson.

We have given some further accounts of the Late Washington tragedy, this week. The excitement appears to have lost none of its intensity, from the lapse of time. Meetings in relation to it have been held in several parts of the country. The transactions of Col. Webb and friends, which will be found in another column, places the affair in even a more atrocious light than before. The matter is now fairly before Congress, and it is probable that laws will be en cted to prevent the like occurrence,—and may be, to punish the offenders in this case.

How strikingly does this whole matter illustrate the importance of our having good men for our rulers and legislators. Surely they should be our examples in well doing, but how seldom are they so! Christians in general, and good men, are not careful enough, in this respect, for whom they vote. Bound in the strong chains of party, they vote without hesitation, for the man nominated by their party, even when they know him to be one of the wickedest in the land. This ought not so to be. Let our love of good order be in all cases, stronger than our love of party, and our halls of legislation will not so often be disgraced by scenes of violence and crime.

The last accounts from Florida are very favourable, as the 8th February, 110 Indians and Negroes had come in and surrendered, tired of the war, as they said, but more probably starved out, as they ethad been obliged to subsist on the palmetto root and cabbage tree, which are about the last resort. Col. Taylor had captured 600 of their cattle recently.

So it appears that this expensive and dishonourable war is about terminating at last.

We are happy to be able to state that the banks of New York have announced their determination to resume specie payments on or before the 10th of May next.

A meeting of the merchants, &c. of the city, called by J. J. Astor, Ward & King, and many others, was held in the exchange, on Thursday last, in reference to this subject, at which the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That this meeting hails with great satisfaction the declaration on the part of the New York city banks of their purpose to resume specie payments on or before the 10th of May next.

Resolved, That we have entire confidence in the integrity of our banks, and in their ability to resume and maintain specie payments, and that to this measure it will give them our cordial and active co-operation.

Resolved, That independently of moral obligation and legislative enactment, the favorable state of foreign exchanges and the diminished liabilities both of banks and individuals, call for a prompt resumption of specie payments, and we consider such a course the surest means of equalizing ultimately our internal exchanges and of restoring general prosperity.

Resolved, That in contemplating the resumption of specie payments, we can perceive no reason to apprehend that it occasion any further contraction on the part of the banks; but, on the contrary, that the restoration of confidence, which must necessarily grow out of that measure, will lead to a gradual increase of their issues, and enable them to extend greater facilities to community.

Resolved, That regarding the general resumption of specie payments by the banks throughout the United States as essential to our national credit abroad, and as calculated to regulate our internal exchanges we respectfully invite the institutions of other states to a simultaneous effort to accomplish this most desirable object.

If a man don't hoe his corn, and he don't get a crop, he says 'tis all owing to the banks, and I be runs in debt, and is sued, why he says the lawyers are a curse to the country.—Sam Slick.

The Whig members of the Legislature of Massachusetts, have nominated Daniel. Webster, as their first choice, and Henry Clay, as their second choice, as candidates for President: but pledged themselves to abide by the decision of a National Convention.

Wheat and Flour.—Wheat is abundant at $1 per bushel, which is a shade too high, when it is considered that flour will not command $5 per barrel in large quantities. The great quantities of flour in stores at various points, and the unusually large crop of wheat last year, added to money being very scarce, and daily growing more so;—all these causes justify the fall of that grain of every kind, flour and other produce, must yet experience a still further decline.—Indeed we are assured by intelligent farmers, that the country is full of every thing, and if our currency was better, our market would be overflowing with all kinds of produce.—Pittsburg Int.

A large meeting was held in Charleston S. C. on Tues lay last to receive the report of the delegates to the late Southern convention at Augusta. Gen Hayne and Mr. McDuffie addressed the meeting, and resolutions were adopted that it is expedient to open a direct trade with Europe. Delegates were appointed to the April Convention.

For the Plainfield Union.

In the social circle, where the cause of Temperance is made the subject of free conversation, nothing is more common than bitter remarks against the keepers of tippling houses. We speak of them in terms of unmingled censure; and having each in his turn expressed his abhorrence of the vice of dram-selling, we congratulate ourselves as the conservators of the peace and order and virtue of society.

It is by no means my purpose in this article to turn advocate of the dram-seller. His traffic is a wicked one, and his gains are the constant mementos of the sighs and the tears, the rage and the wretchedness of which he is himself the conscious but unblushing cause. Tippling-houses, (by which I mean all houses at which distilled drinks are sold to those who are better off without them) are in all cases a public nuisance. It is impossible to look otherwise than with proud contempt on the man, who, for the paltry gain made on a glass of liquor, will consent to be the means either or exciting or of cultivating in his neighbor a thirst for intoxicating drink.

But with all my abhorrence of the dram-shop, I must say that it is not the only thing which merits censure. The dram-shop is an Effect as well as a cause. It is the effect of the carelessness, or cupidity or misrule of parents and guardians. If the heads of families, who are in fact opposed to intemperance, would attend to their own business and perform faithfully their own duties to their respective families, such houses could not exist. They would cease for want of support. Show me a man whose sons or apprentices or journeymen frequent such houses and I will show you a man, whose domestic arrangements are either radically defective or unhappily wrong. In too many instances heads of families secure the labor of our youths and make provision in their own houses only for their eating and sleeping. Consequently the Bar-room or the Oyster-cellar is sometimes the only resort of young men, who during the intervals of work would enjoy social pleasure.

The laws that govern the human mind are as immutable as those that govern matter. They are not indeed the same laws;—but they are as regular and as fixed. And that man whose family governme it is at variance with the Laws of mind would not probably train boys to habits of virtue, even if our contemptible grog-shops and grog bars or Orphan-factories were annihilated. I shall close this article by remarking that as a general thing our haunts of early dissipation are frequented only by those youth who are either badly governed or badly provided for at their respective residences,—and that every man who sincerely desires his family to avoid these haunts can easily prevent it. If they cannot they are surely unfit to assume the charge of youth.

Prolific Corn.—A stalk grew the last season on the farm of Messrs. Foster Day & Son, near this town, which bore seven ears of corn, on six of which were seventeen hundred large plump grains, and on the seventh, there were about one hundred, making in all about 1,800 grains from a single seed. It is worthy of record, that this stalk from eight rooted seed and produced two ears of ten, two of twelve, and three of eight rooted each. Our informant says he never heard of an instance of such prolific production. Essex county goes ahead in raising good corn.—Elizabethtown Journal.

A Committee of the Legislature of Maine have reported a bill which repeals all existing license laws—prohibits the sale of ardent spirits in a less quantity than twenty eight gallons—provides a fine of twenty dollars, or imprisonment for thirty days and a penalty for a violation—and makes it an indictable offence to sell ardent spirit so as to produce intoxication.

The last Tennessee Legislature—moved thereto by the wasting pestilence of intemperance in the State—repealed all acts authorizing license, and made the retailing of ardent spirits a misdemeanor.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located, and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of their department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

English Studies. Common branches, per qr. $2 to $4.00
" " Higher branches, 6.00
Studies preparatory to a Collegiate Course, 7.00

Modern Languages an extra charge.

Tuition bills of all pupils from abroad to be paid in advance.

No deduction for absence, except at the option of the Principal.

Scholars can board with the teachers for $2.25 per week, but find their washing, ordinary fuel and lights. Boarders must furnish their own beds and bedding.

N. M. DEXTER, } Associate
HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y., and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—in which as well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the Inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Philad. patent for wood,

C. Pontley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterboch cooking stoves, from Philidelphia, for coal only. These stoves are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size, Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which the letters are bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its greater Durability; and its quality to resist the power used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

PROSPECTUS OF THE New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for pianoforte, &c. &c. &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, original and selected—comprising in the several number, including original poetry—tales and essays—humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign events, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will excel its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass its illustrious predecessors, fully maintaining its eminently popular among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT THE

AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY

At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the principles, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its Auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to be known to every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for good or evil. We believe its principles, intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservation of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired

All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

GREEN BROOK Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished, without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access to all scholars of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory reference will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred in his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, as there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any case. Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize arterial action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at the Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

From the Portland Transcript.

The Cottage on the Cape.

BY CHARLES P. ILSLEY.

"Put the large lamp in the window, wife—it is a dismal night, and hard will it be for the poor sailor, if he has no beacon to guide him through the darkness."

"Hard, indeed, James, unless the Almighty should watch over him and guide his vessel. Terrible—terrible storm! May God have the poor sea men in his keeping!" solemnly ejaculated the woman, as she hung a large and brilliant lamp in the window of the cottage facing the sea.

"Amen, Amen!" was the hearty response of her husband.

James Richards lived on cape. His house, a neat one story building, was situated on the furthermost part of the Cape toward the sea. He was an old sailor, and had followed the sea until he was three score years of age, when he bought this spot and built him a house. It was a dangerous part of the coast; and this was one great reason, he said, why he settled there. "For he meant to keep a bright light burning in the dark night, to light his brother tars on their way."

Richard's family consisted of nine sif, wife and two sons, the eldest thirty, and the youngest, thirty five years of age. "And smart active boys they are too," the old man would say, "as any about these parts."

The afternoon of the day on which our story opens, had been lowrey and the appearance betokened a tempest. The young men had been absent about a week on a fishing cruise. They were therefore anxiously looked for all the afternoon by their parents; more especially, as they had been out several days longer than usual.

As the day wore away and the appearance of a storm increased, the mother's fears arose proportionally; although the Father was too much of a sailor to be frightened, as he expressed himself at a black cloud. However, as the day drew near its close, and the wind began to increase, the old man became uneasy, and his eye was directed oftener than usual, seaward. The sun went down luridly in the west, and the large waves began to heave in their feathery tops. The old man left the house and proceeded to the shore. There was a smooth sandy cove which made a snug little harbor; but save this, the cape was lined with high, rugged, and shelving rocks. Mr. Richards seated himself on the highest eminence —Broadstone, it is called, directly on the pitch of the cape, from whence he could overlook the sea at all points.

Here, as he sat gazing off, he would mutter to himself—"I don't like that white streak in the east; it is a weather biter, and bodes no good;—and the sea there in the South looks badly skimming over the water at such a rate. It will be an ugly night this. The plague is in the boys that they don't come home—they ought to know better than to be abroad in such a night as this. Time and again, as the dusk crept on, he would rise from his seat, and throw anxious glances in bout, in hopes of detecting an approaching sail; one then he would give vent to his spleen for their absence, unveiled, in which, however, fear, as could easily be seen, rather than anger, was predominant. Darkness settled down on earth and ocean, still nothing met the eyes of the anxious watcher but the dark green waves rolling turbidly to the shore, with a sullen, fearful murmur. The wind blew furiously, and the rain came with a heavy splash to the earth. As the hour grew late and no hoary prow could be espied by, and Mr. Richards had been once or twice to the shore without any signs of their approach, their anxiety became too great for silence, and impassioned prayers were put up by the mother for her sons's safety: while the father in a voice slightly tattling, tried to comfort her, by saying "Fear not wife—the boys are strong, and a better boat never swam: they are well acquainted with the coast. Besides, God will have them in his keeping, and we'll not, therefore, be childless in this night. Cheer up, and put your trust in Him, at whose bidding—"peace be still"—the waves cannot harm."

Ten o'clock came and went by. The boys came not. The storm was at its height. After walking the room awhile, Mr. Richards asked his wife to prepare a lantern. "I am going, said he, in answer to his wife's inquiries, "to kindle a fire on Broadstone, if possible. Keep a good heart—trust in God, and all will be well." So saying, he left the house. It was a short time before he had a bright fire kindled on Broadstone, which threw its light far on the troubled waters. "Pray God the youngsters may see it!" the old man muttered to himself, as he heaped on the brush "He will not leave me desolate in my old age! Take me Father Almighty," dropping on his knees, and raising his arms on high, in a prayer for all—"take me but spare my children! take me, who am nothing worth—a worn out hulk, but spare my children to support their aged mother!" A naud this moment was laid on his shoulder, and a trembling voice said lastily—his will not ours be done!

"Wife, how came you here! You should not be abroad in this tempest——"

"Hark! there it is again—I was sure I heard it!"

"Heard what?" said the husband in astonishment.

"Hark—listen," said the woman, pointing her arm seaward.

Just at this moment when a bright flash was seen, and a faint report was borne on the breeze from the seaward.

"They are coming—the boys are coming," burst simultaneously from the lips of the aged pair.

"They see the light," said his wife, hurriedly —"let us heap on more wood, James,—praise God!"

"We have reason to praise Him, wife, and may He who has protected them thus far, restore them to us in safety!"

"He will—he will," said his wife, as she heaped a large quantity of brush on the fire.

As the flames shot up in the air, and were curling about in the wind, the old man and his wife seated themselves to await the approaching vessel that contained all that was dear to them. Their eyes were strained towards the cove, in the hope of seeing her in that direction; but happening to turn their eyes, they saw the little schooner dashing over the waves, right towards the rocky part of the cape. They both uttered a cry of terror. Death—inevitable death seemed the doom of those on board. Onward she came, now rising high on a towering wave, flattering on it like a frightened bird—and now plunging down into the gulf of foaming waters, as if to destruction—then slowly rising again, still struggling towards the rocks. The caged pair stood for a moment like statues gazing on the scene before them, until the little bark shot into the shade made by the cliff, and was lost to sight. The old man then put on the 'old sailor.' Bidding his wife advance to the edge of the cliff with the lantern, Mr. Richards, with the speed of one some two scores of years younger, went to the house, procured a coil of rope and a fishing line, and was back to the cliff nearly as soon as his wife.

At this place, the cliff rose perhaps forty feet. About two thirds of the way down was a shelf, projecting out three or four feet. It was here the boat came ashore.

"Husband!" said Mrs. R. wringing her hands in agony, "what can be done! Father in Heaven, counsel thou not have spared them to us!"

"Peace, wife, peace!—wouldst thou chide thy Maker! say not a word, but attend to me; it is no place to be womanish here. Now, wife, pitch your voice to its shrillest tone, above that of the wind, and see if the poor boys are alive to give an answer."

The woman did as she was bid; and bending over the cliff, screamed in a high sharp tone,—"John, Samuel! my children!"

Her voice rang shrilly above the dash of the waves and the blast of the gale.

"Quick—the light—there is hope!" said Mr. R. Immediately the lantern was lowered down by the line, and by its feeble light, the oldest son could be seen on the shelf, leaning back against the jagged rocks, looking downward.

"There is but one—it is John!" said the old man wildly, as he bent in eagerness fearfully over the edge of the cliff. "The rope, wife, the rope!" shouted he. In a second, it was lowered down, swayed to and fro by the wind. John caught it, and began preparing himself for it. But what was the old man's horror when he saw his son cast off his jacket, and grasping the end of the rope, walked to the edge of the shelf, as if to jump into the waters that foamed at his feet.

"What is he doing! he is leaping into the sea! merciful Parent! boy, boy, will you leave me childless in my old age?" shouted he, in a voice fearful with emotion, as he saw his son dive into the sea. He stood transfixed with horror. In a few minutes, John appeared on the shelf, and made signs for those above to pull the rope. The old man commenced giving directions to his wife to watch the motions of John. He soon made signs to stop hauling, and then was seen to lift the apparently lifeless body of his brother on the shelf. After examining the rope, he made signs for them to haul again. It was a sight to witness that old man by the uncertain light of the fire, the rain beating upon his grey head—straining himself to raise from the jaws of a watery grave the dark depths below—and when the body was raised to the cliff, to see the aged mother clasp it in her arms, and hear her voice thick with agony—"Samuel, my son—would to God I could have died for you!"—the wind and rain the while beating down on her uncovered head, and flinging her gray and tangled tresses to the air!

The old man's attention was now directed towards rescuing his other son who was in imminent danger, as the tide was setting in, and ere long would probably wash him off, the wind having raised it more than its usual height. He made fast the rope to a neighboring limb, and binding it over the cliff, gave directions to his son to avoid the sharp rocks that jutted out, as he attempted the perilous ascent, steadying the rope, and encouraging him the while.

"Father, your hand!" said John, breathing thickly, lifting his arm to the edge of the cliff, well nigh exhausted. At the moment he uttered these words the rope, which had worn against the sharp rocks, parted, leaving him dangling over the horrid depth below, holding by one hand to the edge of the cliff, and by the other to the tired arm of his father.

"Wife! wife!" shouted the old man, in a voice hoarse with agony; "leave the dead and attend to the living." His wife was too absorbed in grief to heed or pay no attention. "Woman!" shouted he, in a voice of despair, "will ye sacrifice the living to the dead? Will ye see your first born perish!—Quickly for my strength fails."

"What would ye my husband?" said she starting up, and seeing the situation of her husband stretched on the ground at full length, holding one arm of her son, she sprung forward, and bending down grasped the other hand, and with supernatural strength by one effort, lifted her son safe on the cliff and the tl sunk beside him with no more strength than a child. She soon recovered and the next earnest of the moment being over, their attention was turned to the younger son who laid stretched out upon the wet ground, without cause or motion, exhibiting a pale, ghastly face, as the light of the fire expiring fits occasionally flashed over it.

"He is dead, father!" said John, as he gazed wildly in his face. "It was an ugly blow the main boom gave him as we struck."

"Heaven be praised," said the father, "that we have left—and thankful am I that the waters did not devour him. Wife let us be comforted that his grave will be on the land, and that he was not fated to float on the cold caverns of the deep."

"Father—mother!" said John, who had been beside his brother, "he lives! I feel his heart beat!" And truly enough it did beat with returning life, and by midnight they were all gathered in a happy group in the front room of the cottage, congratulating each other and thanking God for their safety.

Where stood the humble cottage of James Richards, a brilliant light house now stands—and it is the "best light" on the eastern coast. Old John Richards is the keeper of it. Visit him, and he will tell you the story I have related, far better than I have done; and will show you the graves of his father and mother and will tell you he and them watched for them and made them comfortable in their old age—how, after they were dead Sam went to sea, and found after all, a grave "in the cold caverns of the deep:" and that he never lights the lamps of the light house, without thinking how anxiously he watched the fire, kindled by his father on "Broadstone," in the night of the tempest, when he was off in the boat tumbled about by the waves; and now, upon the dark and angry waves, he vowed if God spared his life he would consecrate it to him forever and ever, and try all no more—how Sam broke his vow that he made on his knees beside him; at that terrible hour—every one which the world went hard with him, until he was punished by a drowning death; of his own vow he speaks not but from appearances he has not forgotten it.

Marriage struck.—Up in one of the upper counties of this State (North Carolina) a young fellow named Ben Sykes, had courted a fair one for some years but either himself or wife could not put the question; one was full willing, but he never came to the scratch. At last she got mad, and swore she would marry Bill Patterson if he courted her again. Bill hearing of this, went, and once more put in his claim but he was a scurvy fellow in some things, and neither Mammy Dad was willing to it. So he secretly goes to R——, gets a license, and that night they made off for Gretna Squire. Their speed was happy in a degree, for in scarce two hours they met but Ben Sykes. He had got an inkling of what was going on, and when he met them, he understood how the case lay. "Sally," says he, "I have fooled with you—that's a fact and I am sorry for it. But if you still prefer me to Bill Patterson, just say so, and I will give him a thrashing, take his license, and make old Moody marry us to night." The old love was too strong for the new. Be gave Bill a thrashing, took his License and the old Squire did not so well understand how the matter stood, but made no scruples when cost him nothing, to marry the plunder to Moody's The old Squire did not so well understand how the matter stood, but made no scruples when cost him nothing, to marry the plunder to Moody's The old Squire did not so well understand how the matter stood, but made no scruples when cost him nothing, to marry the plunder to Moody's granted to another. Ben and he did not like to understand; by squibbles, but this he knew, that unless he did it, he (the squire) would "catch it" too. This hint was enough for Moody, who, without more to do, pronounced them man and wife. So says our Mountain Correspondent.—Carolina Watchman.

Poetry for Farmers.

To put off till to-morrow what ought to be done to day, is bad economy.

To consider any thing done well enough, that can be better done, a bad economy.

To plough four inches deep instead of eight is bad economy.

To sow grain whole, without bolting or grinding is bad economy.

To feed hay or corn fodder, without cutting it short is not good economy.

To keep more horses than cows is not good economy.

To suffer the essence of your dung-hill to be washed away by rain is not good economy.

To omit to mix good earth and soda with your hog pen is not good economy.

To neglect to haul good soil into your hog pen is bad economy.

To permit docks, mullens and thistles to grow in your grounds, is not good economy.

To give your stock less than will keep them in a thriving condition is not good economy.

To permit your stock to pasture when the grass is very young, is bad economy.

To be in the rear of the season with your work, is bad economy.

To neglect your kitchen garden, is bad economy.

To permit your small dues to remain unpaid is bad economy.

To undertake to farm without an industrious, frugal wife, is bad economy.

To omit to read the Bible and good books on agriculture, is bad economy.

To neglect to subscribe for the "Farmer's Cabinet," and to pay for it in advance is the very worst of economy.

Moral and Religious.

Home.

O! land of rest, for thee I sigh,
When will the moment come,
When I shall lay my armor by,
And dwell with Christ at home.

No tranquil joys on earth I know—
No peaceful sheltering tomb,
This world's a wilderness of woe,
This world is no my home.

To Jesus Christ I sought for rest,
He bade me cease to mourn,
And By for succor to his breast,
And he'd conduct me home.

I would at once have quit this place
Where foes and fury come,
But ah! my passport was not seal'd,
I could not yet go home.

When by affliction sharply tried,
I vowed the gaping tomb,
Although I dread death's chilling flood,
Yet still I sigh for home.

I'm weary of wandering round and round
This vale of sin and gloom,
I long to leave the unhallowed ground,
And dwell with Christ at home.

The Three Prayer Books.—I had three prayer books," said a patriarchal minister of the gospel; "and they lasted by my side two fortnights. They were three praying mothers in Israel; one of them sat on my right hand and the other on my left, the other further along the broad aisle. I always expected to see them in the house of God, as if they were praying for a blessing on the word e they drank in the truths of the gospel with eagerness. And I felt myself strengthened by them."

Did you ever think how much good you could do by praying silently in the house of God for a blessing on the word preached? It does you good for you are not then so fastidious, and difficult to be pleased; for a spirit of prayer does you to receive the word with meekness and self-application; you make it a transaction between God and yourself.

You do others good; when the minister feels encouraged by your great attention, he is inspired to speak more energetically and feelingly. He gives you confidence and enlargement; and thus you help him to reach the hearts of others.

And more; God hears the prayer you raise, and gives the Holy spirit to apply the truth with Almighty force. Then be you a prayer book! And you will be really a preacher! for your silent voice shall be a still, small voice, calming and subduing the hearts of men. Be a prayer book—a true open prayer book—that all may read and be profited by reading.—N. H. Observer.

A Bad Husband Cured.—"An elderly man in my district," says the Tract Visitor, "had for many years been very intemperate, the consequences of which were strikingly apparent in the remnants and rags which occupied the place of furniture and wardrobe in the miserable garret where I often visited his heart broken wife. A loud and neglected were the only voices she received from him, who would have loved and cherished her, but for our ruinous and wicked license system—that bride of anguish, tears and blood. On a visit about five months since I found the husband at home and sober. Now thought I is my time. I knelt, I prayed, entreated, and at last obtained her a promise to the temperance pledge, and she felt that he had gained a victory. I then called to the verse and pray with him. He seemed expressed a desire to go to church, from which he was prevented by the want of decent apparel. He was supplied, and was seen going to the house of God with his companion. He is hopefully converted, has erected the family alter is propounded for church membership, and expects soon to sit down at the table of the Lord with his happy wife."

One hundred years ago.—Nearly a century ago, Bishop Berkly, of England, made the following protest against drunkeries of ardent spirits.

"Why should such a canker be tolerated in the midst of a state under any pretence whatever? Better by far that the whole present race of distillers were pensioners of the public, and their trade abolished by law, since all the benefits thereof put together would not balance the hundredth part of the mischief.

"If I prove the destructive effects of such spirits, both with regard to the human species and the individuals, we need not go so far as to the colonies of the savage nations of America. Plain proofs may be had nearer home. For albeit, there is in every town throughout England some tough drum drinkers, set up as the devil's decoy, as the sin in proverbs; yet the ruined health and morals, and the beggary of such numbers, evidently show that we need go no other enemy to complete our distraction than the riotous luxury of the lower end of the st. ay, and that is nation lighted up at both ends more soon be consumed."

Try to make your family temperate. Temperance is the handmaid to domestic happiness.

Slavery.

America! America! boast not that thou art free,
While not around thy nation hangs the chain of slavery!
Thy spangled banner' deep is stained with injured African's blood,
While, from the soil of Southern climes, for vengeance cries to God;
The breeze that fans the Orange groves, bears on its wings a sigh,
And fertile plains are wet with tears that dim the bondman's eye.

Oh! why does nature smile so sweet, and yield her balmy breath,
O'er scenes of anguish, which surpass the bitterness of death!
Her holiest ties are severed there, and broken hearts are poured,
To make the stable not a slave—to make the white man lord!
Lord of his brother! whom the Eye of all mankind made free,
And gave the purchase of his life to seal that liberty.

Rich Planter of the gentle South, yet roast in thy wealth—
Counter and over again the slaves secured to thee by stealth!
Measure thy vast plantation bounds and feast thine eyes with gold;
Then weigh thy wealth in scales of right!—Is it the price of blood?
And know for all these things, that thou before the judgment throne
Must give account to him who hears the suffering cap. tive's groan.

Sons of America! the your's, ye of the favored North!
To fearless wield the Christian's sword, and march as champions forth!
That slavery's foul reproach be wiped from off Columbia's name:
That Southern altars rear to God, and burn with free dom's flame.
Then may the sons of Afric sit beneath their native vines
Or walk unchained the land o'er which the sun of freedom shines.

POPULAR ERRORS.

Mr. Editor. The late melancholy duel at Washington having, in some measure, revived the old charge of Colonel Webb, editor of the Courier and Enquirer, having been bribed by the United States bank, I have read the correspondence carefully, examine the report of the committee of the house of representatives of 1832, (a majority of whom were Jackson men) upon the subject. This charge, for a long time, was a favorite theme for the bar-room politician, the orator of political meetings, the newspaper press, and I am sorry to say, in several cases of grave and honorable (as they are styled) members of congress.—The substance of the charge, as I have always understood them, were, that James Watson Webb had no heart in opposing of the late second United States bank—had, though the columns of the Courier and Enquirer, opposed its recharter and, all of a sudden, in consequence of receiving a loan, in the shape of a bribe from the bank of $52,975, come out strenuously in its support.

Without attempting, by any system of argument of my own, to substantiate or refute the charge, I shall content myself with barely giving a plain statement of facts, as they appear in the report filed to, leaving the question of bribery, or anything dishonorable, either on the part of colonel Webb or the bank, to the decision of the candid and respectable readers of your paper.

It appears that James Watson Webb was, and had for some time been the proprietor of one of the most lucrative newspaper establishments in the United states, as at least receipts being from $75,000 to $100,000. The first article that appeared in the Courier and Enquirer, in relation to the bank, was in the month of November, 1828. This was previous to the election of Jackson, and the object was to denounce the bank—but it found its way into the columns of the Courier, during a temporary absence of colonel Webb, without his knowledge or consent.

This was followed by the first message of president Jackson, also denouncing the bank as unconstitutional, and signifying his opposition to its recharter. After this, the Courier and Enquirer being then the organ of the Jackson party in the city, several articles of like import appeared in that paper, all written by major Noah and Mr. Bennet, their resident editors of that paper, the publication of which colonel Webb considered to although they had not entirely met his approbation. He was willing, however, that the bank should occasionally be assailed, from the fact that it had been represented to him that it was interfering with the politics of the country, and was devoted to the interest of Mr. Clay.

In February, 1831, the legislature of the state of Pennsylvania, which was almost unanimous for president Jackson, passed a resolution, with great unanimity, which was decidedly in favor of the bank, and strongly recommended its recharter.—About the same time, a resolution was introduced into the legislature of the state, (but which was not acted upon during that session) disapproving its recharter. Colonel Webb went to Albany, to oppose the measure. He learned that senator Marcy, (now governor Marcy,) the secretary of state, the comptroller, Mr. Livingston, speaker of the assembly, and several other distinguished members of the Jackson party were also opposed to the resolution, for fear that its passage might produce a collision between the republicans of the state of New York and those of Pennsylvania, and also of Webb determined to advocate through the columns of his paper, a modified recharter of the bank. The Courier and Enquirer, from that time, did strenuously advocate its recharter; in consequence of which, as the editor supposed, he was not only refused his usual accommodations from the state banks in the city of New York, varying from $15,000 to $30,000, but was required to pay up what was then due those institutions. Thus situated, he applied in August following (five months after he had been advocating the recharter of the United States bank,) to Walter Bowne, then mayor of this city; and formerly one of the government directors of the bank of the United States, a high character in this city, and standing at the head of the Jackson party—and expressed a wish to obtain accommodation from the United States. Mr. Bowne gave him a letter of introduction to Mr. Biddle, president of the bank, in which he (Mr. Bowne) makes use of the following words.

"I see no objection against its application being treated as a fair business transaction."

Colonel Webb, it appears, called on Mr. Biddle, and exhibited a full statement of his affairs, showing that his paper, with reasonable facilities, afforded an annual net income of 30,000 or 40,000—upon which, and upon the strength of the letter from Mr. Bowne, the bank discounted his (Webb's) note, endorsed by M. M. Noah, for $20,000, at six months. When the note came due, $20000 were paid, and a new note was given for the balance, (18,000) payable six months from date. On the 16th of December following, another, but merely temporary accommodation, of $15,000 was granted col. Webb for six months; which note was likewise paid on the 14th of March following, being three months before it came due.

In the month of March, 1831, Silas E. Burrows a wealthy merchant of this city, obtained a loan from the bank, of $17,975, on the note of M. M. Noah, endorsed by colonel Webb. It appears from the testimony, that Noah negot ated with Burrows for this loan, for which B. was to receive and did receive, a commission of 2½ per cent.—Burrows, representing to them that he could obtain the money from his (B's) father. It further appears that both Webb and Noah supposed that Burrows did obtain the money from his father and that neither knew anything about the notes being discounted by the United States bank, till they appeared before the committee of investigation. It appears, however, that Burrows produced these notes to be discounted at the United States bank without the knowledge of either Webb or Noah; that he was understood by that institution to be a very wealthy merchant in this city; that he called to the bank that although he did not wish his name to appear in any paper not strictly mercantile, still, he would endorse these notes whenever the bank might deem it necessary for its security; and that on the second of March following, long before the committee of investigation was appointed) Burrows called at the bank and paid the notes.

The foregoing, as it is believed will be admitted by every candid person, is a true and faithful statement of all the facts in relation to the $52,975 affair—that amount, as will be perceived, was obtained at three different periods—but only $35,000 were obtained by Webb and Noah. It also appears from the same report, that loans were made to various other editors of papers, amongst whom were the editors of the Washington Telegraph, Richmond Enquirer and United States Gazette—the two first mentioned opposing the recharter of the bank, the last supporting the measure. Assuming, therefore, the ground that a loan by the bank to a friendly editor was intended as a reward for his services, we are led by the same course of reasoning to conclude that whilst that institution was rewarding its friends, it also rewarded its enemies

In conclusion, the writer will observe that he has no particular sympathy for colonel Webb, nor prejudice against him; it is well aware of the use that has been made of $52,000 and the object of the writer has been to give, as he first promised, a plain statement of facts, which he is conscious of having done and which may be summed up as follows:

Webb and Noah borrowed of the United States bank $20,000, payable ten per cent, every six months. At the expiration of the first six months $9000, or ten per cent., was paid, and a new note given for $18,000. In the mean time, they received the temporary loan of 15,000, all of which was paid at the expiration of three months, leaving Webb and Noah indebted to the bank in the sum of $18,000, $20,00, of which was the whole amount of their indebtedness, at the time the committee of investigation, or rather, C. C. Cambreleng, attempted to prove that they had received $52,000.

When Noah bought out colonel Tyler, Barrows loaned him $15,000, on his note endorsed by Webb all of which were regularly paid at maturity. These he temporarily deposited with the bank as collateral security, but shortly after took them up, and received a mortgage for them. So that, in point in fact, Webb and Noah, neither jointly nor individually, owed the bank but $ 6, 000, when they were charged with the indebtedness of $52,000—a sum which was made up by adding together all their notes, paid and unpaid

Mine Brook Railroad and Transportation Co. The Commissioners acting under a charter obtained at the session of the Legislature in 1835, have, we understand, completed the explored the whole route of the projected road, in company with their Engineer, Mr. L. F. Douglass; commencing in the township of Springfield, in this county and running through Baskingridge or Liberty Corner, Cross Roads, Lamington, New Germantown, &c. to Sydney, where it unites with the Somerville road and proceeds direct to the Delaware, and thence to Easton.

Mr. Douglass informs us that the route is not only practicable, but of easy grading, encountering no serious obstacle to a very direct line through to its termination. The Commissioners have authorized an immediate commencement of the instrumental examination, with a view to estimate its cost.

It is also remarked that the communication may proceed to New York, either by the Morris & Essex Railroad to Newark, thence via New Jersey Railroad; or, connect with the Springfield & Elizabeth Railroad, already chartered, to Elizabeth-Town, and thence by Steamboat, or the New Jersey Railroad.

A Short Sermon from a Little Text.

Temperance.—II Peter 1—6.

The Gnostics in olden time believed matter to be essentially and unalterably evil. From this proposition they deduced the inference that no bodily appetite should be indulged—as a vile gratification allowed. "Total Abstinence" was their creed, if not their motto. Christianity, however, takes the wiser and better course of acknowledging the claims of the body as a part of divine creation; and recognizing those claims, makes provision to satisfy them. "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with Thanksgiving."

The Gospel gives a rule which we may not transcend "Let your moderation be known unto all men." This rule is Temperance—" add to knowledge Temperance, as we understand the modern use of the blessings of Providence.

Temperance as we understand it, is opposed on the one hand to excess and on the other to abstinence. Its old nary and appropriate signification it stands opposed to gluttony and drunkenness. One who eats and drinks to supply his natural wants—partaking moderately of the good things in Providence, is, in the light of scripture, a temperate man.

Temperance is also opposed to abstinence." and excludes neither flesh nor wine;—that is there is no immorality in eating the use or drinking the other. "Meat commendeth us not to God—flesh—be it so. To eat less were better. But it is said that we ought to abstain, and that health would be preserved, and life prolonged, if we did. In some cases such might be the effect. But as to what we ought or ought not to do, I am content to take the bible as the standard.

To pass by the permission given to Noah, and the feasts of the Patriarchs, and the institution of sacrifice under the law which from their very nature implied the eating of animal food, we come to the New Testament, and to the customs of christians under the Gospel. If the Saviour wished to discourage the use of animal food, why did he say in the beautiful and affecting Parable of the Prodigal Son, "Bring hither the fatted calf and kill it, and let us eat!" Why did Peter see in the vision, "four footed beasts," and hear the voice, saying "rise, kill and eat, if flesh were not proper food? Why did the council of Apostles and Elders in Jerusalem, write to Antioch, enjoining to abstain only from "things strangled?" Why does Paul say to the Corinthians, whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no questions for conscience sake," if the butcher's stall was an improper place of resort for the christian? Why did he say, "I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend," if it were not lawful and proper under other circumstances to eat it, where no offence from partaking of it could be apprehended? The apostle speaks also to Timothy "of meats which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving."

Yet we conclude no sin in that differs; but we "receive" him under high authority. "Him that is weak in the faith, receive ye;" for one believeth that he may eat all things, and another—who is weak—eateth herbs. Let each observe the rule of Temperance, and both will be accepted.

Nor is the use of Wine interdicted. We refer only to the New Testament; and there find no countenance whatever, given to the doctrine of "total abstinence." except a few scattered texts also to flesh, see Romans XIV, 21. If Christ designed to condemn the use of wine, why did He make it the subject of a miracle? If he thought his followers would not drink it, why did he use it habitually himself? "John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say he hath a devil. The Son of man is come eating (bread) and drinking (wine) and ye say, behold a gluttonous man and a wine-bibber," (Luke VII. 33.) Why, above all, did Christ institute wine to be the sacred emblem of his own blood, to be taken by all his followers, if its use were dexterous or improper?

We are not indeed at this point, with the remark that the wine of the New Testament possessed no intoxicating qualities "Prove, says "total abstinence," that the wine intoxicates and we yield the point." But does not the proof lie on the other side? Wine has this property now; had it not then? Suppose we take the burden, and how do we stand? "New wine" was put into "new bottles," and not into old ones, lest they should burst. Why? Manifestly because of the fermentation; and who does not know that fermentation is one of the principal agents in the production of alcohol? But St. Paul who advised Timothy to take all the wine (some) also tells Ephesians to be not drunk with wine." Why so? The fact is, that wine is wine—all the world over. As the juice of the Grape, fermented as it must be by, e especially in warm climates, such as that of Judea, it must have an intoxicating power.

We take it then as an incontrovertible fact that scripture countenances the use of wine. And that the tee-totalers" are wise "above what is written." A Believer in the Gospel will scarcely subscribe to this modern Reformation when he remembers that he is to drink "new wine" with Christ in the kingdom of his Father.

The scripture rule here, as with Eating, is Temperance. Neither excess, nor abstinence. With the blessings of Providence we have received judgement and conscience to regulate our appetites.

"It is curious to observe that the word "abstinence" occurs only once in the Bible, viz; where Daniel and the seven with him were superseded upon the Island of Mediterranean That little company is fear for their lives, was the first "total abstinence society"—since the Christian era. It was dissolved by St. Paul; see 33d verse.

Improvement of a short Sermon

I am uncertain what the aims of the writer of "a short sermon on a little text," may be. Nor was I any more willing to be sure of the design of a strange "Scripturalis," who appeared a year a go on the same subject. But I am sure of another thing. Intemperate persons are extremely pleased with both, and the friends of suffering men are grieved. And if such a consideration will afford the writers pleasure, they have the means of being very happy.

I hope the last writer will call to mind, that in "olden times" there were other classes and sects of philosophers, besides the "Gnostics"; who were so called, because they either did, or were supposed to, know much. Your writer evidently desires not to be reckoned in this class. And so he may set his heart at rest. No body has the least suspicion of him. At least from his "short sermon.

And I beg he will look over his sermon and then review the principles of the Epicureans of old and decide whether he does not belong to this class. For it will be an enormous retribution, if he should be expelled from both. This will be the worst for him, because he must know that he has little prospect of being reckoned among Interpreters of the bible, taking his sermon, as evidence. And when the effects of his views, and manner of treating the subject of Temperance, are considered, he is in no danger of being among the benefactors of our race. For the whole drift of his sermon is to make men indulgent, and intemperate—And this plain tendency has given me a good thought, viz. The people of this country become or becoming, so abstemious, as to commit more sin, and bring more misery and ruin on us, than Intemperance has done. And so we must have a preacher to persuade people to their cups and their Epicurean indulgences.

His high and grave position is that religion takes a high and wise course, "to recognise all the claims of the body as a part of divine creation. And does this prove that our bodies demand intoxicating drinks to nourish their strength and prese rve their health? And does the mind and moral powers demand that "good creature," to keep them in safe, and regular exercise? And are those persons the most healthful, and intellectual, and moral, who use wine, &c. &c. habitually? And do those members of our churches sustain the best character, and enjoy the firmest health, who are temperate upon the principles of this "short sermon?"

I would advise this Preacher to be a little better acquainted with the state of his Congregation before he preaches another Sermon. PHILO.

Silk Culture in Monmouth County—We are glad to learn the enterprising farmers of Monmouth county, in this state, are embarking extensively in the culture of silk worms. The Enquirer, (published at Freehold,) tells us that large numbers of the morus multicaulus, which were introduced last spring, have done remark ably well and multiplied beyond all expectation. The demand for trees and cuttings is very great, and many are now engaged in the business. A large building is to be put up in Freehold this season by an enterprising citizen, as a nursery. Ere long we may expect to see Jersey girls in Jersey silk.

Capture of 400 Indians.—An officer of the army who arrived at St. Augustine, the 23d ult. from the interior brought intelligence of the capture of about 400 Indian warriors, in two bodies about 20 miles from fort Bassinger, in a northeasterly direction, by Gen. Jessup. It is said the first party were captured by the army and they acted as guides, which led to the capture of the second. After their capture they requested permission to go out and bring in their families, which Gen. Jessup refused, but suffered a few only to go out for that purpose.

The report came from Tampa, and was confirmed by express from Fort Melion at Picolata.

A Hard Hit.—"If I were so unlucky," said an officer, "as to have a stupid son, I would certainly, by all means, make him a parson." A clergyman, who was in the company, calmly replied, "You think differ tly, Sir, from your father."

Among the competitors for the site of the proposed National Foundry, is the Monmouth Purchase Company; which, we understand, has offered to the general government a suitable location for the establishment, on its lands in Monmouth County. Proper measures have been taken to make known to the government the merits of this application. In the proceedings of the New Jersey Legislature, Feb. 23d, we notice an allusion to the subject, as follows:

Mr. Dayton presented a communication from the Monmouth Purchase Co, setting forth the advantages afforded by the County of Monmouth, for a National Foundry, and presented a Resolution (concurrently that our Representatives in Congress, be requested to use their exertions to procure the establishment in this State of a National Foundry, and Dry Duck. Agreed to.

New York Elections.

Power Van Buren paper.

"Great Reaction."—The local elections in the State of New York, continue to come in gloriously for the cause of democracy We have returns from 75 to 86; in 80 of which the democratic gain has been large since the election last fall. In 4 towns where gave a majority for the whigs last fall, now give from 50 to 100 or more majority the other way. In one town we perceive the gain 248 since last fall. Whiggery will be prostrated at the next great trial.—Republican Farmer.

From a Whig paper.

The local town elections in New York show a great increase of the opposition to the Regency. Towns and counties heretofore devoted to the Regency, have now indignantly spurned Locofocoism. Seneharie, Otsego, Oswego Chenango and Jefferson counties have each elected Whig supervisors for the first time.—Newark Daily.

Be saving of time. Remember that time is the stuff that life is made of.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Thursday, March 8.

Nothing of importance was done in either house. On Friday, in Senate, the pension appropriation bill, which passed the house some days since, was read a third time and passed.

In the house, Mr. Randolph, of N. J. spoke at length in opposition to the bill for the relief of the heirs of Robert Fulton. The house adjourned without coming to a vote.

On Saturday, 10th, there was a very interesting skirmish in the Senate, and nearly all the house was there. Mr. Calhoun spoke near two hours on the sub-treasury bill, chiefly in reply to Mr. Clay, and in defence of his own political course and consistency.

Mr. Clay promptly met the expectations of the united audience, in his response. The Alexandria Gazette thus speaks of it:

War of the Giants.—Saturday last was a great day in the Senate of the U. S. At an early hour, the Senate Chamber was crowded to overflowing, the galleries, lobbies and entrances being filled with anxious spectators. Nor were the expectations of the public unappointed. It was our good fortune to be present, and we think we but speak the sentiments of all that multitude when we say that a finer intellectual treat was never enjoyed.

Mr. Calhoun's defence of himself, and his political course, was most able and ingenious, and this reterie upon Mr. Clay managed with great skill and address.—Mr. Clay's rejoinder, as an impromptu effort, was unequalled. He gave his audience, in that clear, silver voice of his, the tones of which are sometimes as melodious almost as music, a specimen of off hand argument, adorned with all the graces of eloquence, wit, and humor, when distinguishes him above all other orators in the country. He renewed his attacks and sustained them—he triumphed in them.

On Monday and Tuesday, Mr. Wenner spoke in opposition to the Sub-treasury bill. Of his speech the National Intelligencer says:

Mr. Webster concluded yesterday, in the Senate, his great speech—we may say the greatest of all his speeches—on the Constitution and the Union, their origin, powers, and obligations. The solemnity and eloquence of his close were impressive and soul-stirring as his argument has been transcendent and unanswerable. In saying thus much of the extraordinary speech, there is not one of the crowded audience which it addressed, who will deem the praise too high; nor one to his distinguished peers, however eminent, who will consider it as derogating from his own just claims to distinction as a statesman or an orator.

Mr. Legare of S. C. said in reference to this speech:

Mr. Webster is the greatest speaker of the world—I have seen all the prominent statesmen in England, the debaters in France, and elsewhere in Europe, but take him all in all Mr. Webster has no equal in the or any other country."

On Monday, several petitions against duelling were presented, in both houses.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, March 21.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

RAIL ROAD MEETING.

The citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity are invited to attend a meeting at Jacob Thorn's Long room, on Thursday evening next at early candle light, with a view to aid in concerting measures to ensure the completion of the said road as far as this village the ensuing season.—Several gentlemen from Elizabethtown and Somerville are expected, who will give all necessary information and explanation. The great importance of the object, it is hoped, will ensure a general attendance.

The "Short Sermon on a little text," from the Newark Daily Advertiser, the insertion of which was requested by a "Subscriber," will be found in our columns. The answer to that article, or "Improvement of a Short Sermon," will also be found in our paper, inserted at the request of those who think differently from a "Subscriber." We are happy to be able to accommodate both parties, being unable or unwilling to decide, when "doctor's disagree."

The communication of Philo, is answered by "Unus," and Temperance" in the Daily of Friday last, but we have room only for the latter which we here subjoin:

A Card.—When the abstinent Philo,' instead of abstaining from argument, abstains from 'throwing dirt,' the writer of 'a short sermon' will not abstain from answering him.

TEMPERANCE.

P. S Scripturalis must answer for himself.

In the present number will also be found a long article on the $52,000 affair of J. W. Webb, inserted at the request of "A. B." We presume both friends and foes of Col. Webb will be gratified in perusing it—it being but a plain statement of facts, without any deductions drawn from them. Each party can therefore, and probably will, make their own inferences in relation to it, and as diverse from each other as their previous opinions.

By the notice given above it will be seen that our citizens are invited to attend a meeting in relation to the projected Rail road through this place. It is the confident hope and expectation of several of our most influential men, that the road will be completed as far as this place this coming summer. In such a state of things it becomes all our citizens, who wish their own prosperity, and the vast growth of the place, to attend this meeting, and encourage the immediate prosecution of this work to the extent of their means. If Plainfield does not come up to their accustomed public spirit in this thing, and that quickly, the great advantages of this work may be lost to us, and other places will soon leave us far in the back ground.

The New Hampshire election took place on Tuesday of last week, for Governor and other state officers. The returns are not yet received, but we hope to give the full result in our next.

The Connecticut election for state officers is soon to take place—three sets of candidates are nominated, and are to be run.

The New York city charter election takes place in the beginning of April—three sets of candidates in the field. Aaron Clark, is the Whig candidate—Richard Riker, the candidate for the Conservative party, the Van Buren candidate we do not know.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to the Hon. Mr. Randolph, member of the House of Representatives from this State, for valuable public documents.

Late advices from Washington say that it is not now as probable as it was a short time since, that the sub-treasury bill will pass at the present session. Mr. Webster's speech it would seem had much influence. At the same time it seems that no other bill will pass, so that the scheme will still be in practical operation as in months past.

An Entire Abstinence Society was formed in this place, on Monday evening of last week—Near one hundred members joined. The Society adjourned to meet on the evening of the second Monday of April next, at the first day Baptist church.

We are very happy to see this—quite a step is gained in the cause of temperance here, and we hope the Society will not be disappointed in their expectations of a large addition at their next meeting.

Communications on the subject of Temperance always welcome.

Benjamin Lundy has retired from the editorial department of the National Enquirer, and the talented poet, J. G. Whittier, takes his place.

Subscriptions received here for the Farmer's Cabinet, and a number will be sent to any one desirous of seeing it.

Mr. Wise has published an address to his constituents in relation to the late duel, accompanied with a statement of the whole affair. This statement he is to testify to, under oath, before the committee of investigation; and it places the matter in rather a different light from what we have before viewed it.

In the address we notice the following sentence. I have often told you, my protection in the discharge of my duties to you here, has depended upon my own trusty weapon, and a trusty friend upon whom I have been daily liable to call to discharge the same duty to me

Is it possible that society is in such a state at Washington, that members of Congress must depend upon their arms for protection?

Later from England.

Paris papers are received to the evening of Feb. 8th, and Havre to the 9th, containing London dates to the evening of the 6th.

The Sully brings 288,000 francs in specie.

The news of the affair at Schlosser, (received at Liverpool Feb. 1st by the Bosomo,) in connection with the President's Message to Congress on the subject, and Gov. Marcy's Message to the N.Y. Legislature, had created a good deal of sensation in England.

Seasonable Advice to the Unemployed.—A sensible old Farmer recommends, through the Rhode Island Herald, that laborers and mechanics turn their attention early this spring to the cultivation of the ground. Cultivate every spot of ground to the utmost, and let those who hold no land, seek it on shares. Raise something to support life; something to carry them through another gloomy winter. Farmers are advised to avail themselves of the opportunity to employ laborers at reduced wages, to repair buildings and fences, and improve their farms generally. By skilful husbandry every farmer may double his produce. They are especially advised to take a newspaper—and to pay for it.

Longevity among the British Peers.—There are twenty-one members of the House of Lords who have outlived fourscore years.

The Royal Exchange was first opened, with great ceremony, by Elizabeth, a maiden Queen, and will, in all human probability, be again opened, on its reconstruction, by another.

The great O'Connell was christened without the aristocratic Milesian prefix 'O,' and was called to the bar, also, as plain Mr. Connell but assumed it in order to pass for a person of patrician extraction.

Temperance, at this time, seems to be the all-absorbing topic of interest in Plainfield. The three following pieces, in addition to what has already been offered, have just been handed in for publication:

For the Plainfield Union.

I am not ignorant of the fact that he who ventures to withhold his name from the "Abstinence Pledge" is often quoted as a false friend of the Temperance cause. His motives are frequently impeached. His refusal to subscribe the Pledge is sometimes attributed to his love of self indulgence; and sometimes to his want of true philanthropy.

It is not my purpose here to defend the use of wine as a common drink. As an ordinary drink I do most sincerely believe that there is nothing so wholesome as water—simple water—especially such water as every where offers itself to the citizens of Plainfield at home. Still however I am unfortunately one of those who have as yet refused to sign the "Pledge." My reason for with-holding my name, is, that I do not believe that the laws of Expediency requires such a pledge. "If you will not join us do not oppose us." To such a society I feel no hostility, and consequently am not disposed to do or say anything that can be considered as opposition to it. The man who, for the sake of benefitting his fellow men comes forward unostentatiously and binds himself to practice self denial is worthy of all respect. I appreciate his motives and both love and admire his philanthropy.

To the public speaker or writer, or agent, however, who tells me that I ought to sign the pledge—that it is my duty to do it—that all the respectable part of society have done it, I have a few words to say.

Having made an unsuccessful appeal to my moral sense you of course mark me down in your book as a bad citizen—unwilling to do my duty—and unworthy the confidence of the respectable part of society. Now before you assail my motives further please to answer the following questions, viz: is it fair from the 23d, and 24th verses of Luke and from other positions of the New Testament to infer that our Saviour did occasionally drink wine? And 2d. If you admit the inference to be just, do you attribute his conduct to his love of self indulgence, or to his want of sagacity to perceive the influence of his acts on the practices of men. He (Heb. VII. 26) was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, and went about doing good. PHILOPATOS.

For the Plainfield Union.

Mr. Editor:

Last week when I recommended the "short sermon from a little text" to the attention of your readers I neglected to caution them against one of the sentiments advanced by the preacher. From Luke VII 34 it is not proper to infer that wine was our saviours habitual drink. The only fair inference is that he did occasionally drink it.

A SUBSCRIBER.

The following is from Smollett's Travels thro' France and Italy, published in London, in 1776. A writer in the Newark Daily thinks that this testimony in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, from so eminent a man and physician as Tobias Smollett, ought to be generally known:

"It must be owned that all the peasants [i. e. of France,] who have wine for their ordinary drink are of a diminutive size in comparison to those who use milk, beer, or even water; and it is a constant observation that when there is a scarcity of wine, the common wine, the common people are always more healthy than in those seasons when it abounds. The longer I live, the more I am convinced, that wine and all fermented liquors are pernicious to the human constitution; and that for the preservation of health and establishment of the spirits there is no beverage comparable to simple water.

The New York and Providence line of steamboats have resumed their daily trips.

The Lincoln District.—The Bath (Me.) Telescope states that Governor Kent had ordered a new election for a member of Congress, from the Lincoln district, to supply the place of Mr. Cilley, on the first Monday of April next.

The Commerce of the Lakes is constantly increasing. 14 new steamboats will enter into business this spring, in addition to the fleets already built.

Little Bills.—The little bills are doing wonders. The Leather Manufactures Bank, which we mentioned as having received specie for near $200 of its little bills has up to this time issued near $5000 of them, and only $8 has been returned for specie.

Literary Industry and Rapid Writing.—The following passage occurs in one of Sir Walter Scott's letters, which we find in Lockhart's Memoirs—

You will be surprised when I tell you that I have written a volume in exactly fifteen days. To be sure I persisted in interruptions. But then I took exercise, and for ten days of the fifteen attended the Court of Sessions from two to four hours every day. This is nothing, however to writing Ivanhoe, when I had the actual cramp in my stomach; but I have no idea of them things preventing a man from doing what he has a mind.

Schooley & Reeder's smoke house, attached to their large pork house, in this place, and the house of Hartsborn & Child adjoining were burnt on the 7th. The loss in pork, lard, bacon, &c. is estimated at nearly $100,000, besides the building and other property.

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT THE
AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY
At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its Auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to be known by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles, intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservation of our free institutions, as strongly as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

☞ No paper will be sent after the time is expired

All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THADEUS DAVID'S
WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying quickly, retaining its brilliancy in all weathers; having no tendency to become rusty or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, its great or durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common Inks; rendering it peculiarly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, unless a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of Colleges, and for a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who can not find accommodations in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

English Studies, Common branches, per qr.	$2 to $4.00
Higher [illegible]	5.00
Each a portion of the [illegible] Course,	5.00

Tuition bills of all pupils from abroad to be paid in advance.

No deduction for absence, except at the option of the Principals.

Scholars can board with the teachers for $2.25 per week, inclu ding washing, ordinary fuel and lights.—Boarders must furnish their own beds and bedding.

N. M. DEXTER, } Associate
HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass., Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y., and Mrs. Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and inclination to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The village is well known, healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an Institution of the kind. It is, also, within 45 miles of New York city—to which as well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is had many times each day, by railroad and stage.

Cooking Stoves.
J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being stuck through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the above business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Phil d. patent for wood,
C. Postley's for wood; and the
Old, tried and 2 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Keisterbach cooking stoves, from Philadelphia, for coal only. These stove are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pease's make from Philadelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome 1200 mount manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal as a heating room, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

GREEN BROOK
Family School.

THE design of the School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, and the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mutual effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality; but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are read daily as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $300 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Elizabethtown, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber adduces a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE
Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used in this and this country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very effectual.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all the cases yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency lies in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for some 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any one. Their effects when taken according to the directions, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalise arterial action—and to all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 7tf

Catharine McInnes, or the Wrong Letter Box.

Amusing incidents often occur by persons mistaking the letter box of stores and offices in this vicinity, for that of the post office. We sometimes find three or four letters in our own letter box, intended for the mails. These we of course put on their way.

Standing once at our front window, we observed a young woman, whose face was not visible to us, drop one into our box, and on taking it out we found that she had mistaken our establishment for that of the Post Office. It was directed to Thomas ——, in Ireland, and the inland postage accompanied it. The letter we sent with others, to the Post Office.

Buried a few months after in examining the contents of our exchange papers, we were startled with a sweetly modulated voice, inquiring "is there a letter for me?

We at once raised our eyes, and saw a female, 18 or 20 years of age. There was an oval face, with nature's own blush, and a slight projection of the mouth that told of Ireland. Neatness was all that her dress could claim.

Letters are frequently asked for in a newspaper office, in reply to advertisements—so we inquired the name.

"Kitty McInnes; but perhaps it will be Catharine on the letter, as that is my name."

We looked on the letter rack in the front office, but saw none for Catharine.

Returning, we inquired to what advertisement the letter was to be an answer.

"Advertisement! to no advertisement—it would be in answer to my letter."

"And, from whom did you expect a letter."

The young woman looked confused—but apparently supposing the question pertinent, she said "from Thomas."

We saw at once that she had, as hundreds before had done, mistaken our office for the Post Office, and the name given was that upon the letter which we had some months before sent to the Post Office.

"He has not written, then?" said Catharine, in a low voice not intended for our ear.

"But—he may have written."

"Then where's the letter?" said she looking up.

"At the Post Office, perhaps."

We must have used less than our usual discretion in directing Catharine to the Post Office, as quite half an hour after when visiting the place, we saw her at the window, receiving the change and a letter from one of the clerks, and then impatience, shall we say of woman or of love, induced her to break the seal at the door. A glow of pleasure was on the cheek of the happy girl. We would not have given a penny to be informed that Thomas was well, and was coming in the next packet.

It was but a short time afterwards that we saw the name of Thomas in the papers. He was one of the passengers in the ship cast away below N. York, of whom nearly every soul perished, and Thomas among the rest.

We did not ever see Thomas, but had somehow cherished such an interest in his fate, that we felt a severe shock in the announciation—and what must have been the feelings of Catharine, with her ardent, sanguine, Irish temperament.

We passed a few weeks afterwards, to mark the young grass shooting, green and thick, in Ronaldson's grave yard, when a funeral numerously attended, wound slowly round the corner, and entered the enclosure. It was the funeral of an Irish person—we knew by the numbers that attended—and as the sexton lowered the coffin down into the narrow house, the place appointed for all living, we saw engraved upon a simple plate,

CATHARINE MC'ANNES.

The story was told. The small sum of money which Catharine had deposited in the saving's fund to give a little consequence to her marriage festival, had been withdrawn to give her "decent burial."

From the Free Trade Advocate.

Quaker Economy.—A judge being on a journey, fell in company with a Quaker, 'Sir,' said the judge, 'how is it, that you Quakers always have fat horses, and money in your pockets?'

'By and by I will then.'

Shortly after they arrived at a tavern. The judge called for a glass of bitters, and urged the Quaker to drink; but he refused, saying, 'I have no need.' The judge then called for two quarts of oats for his horse, and the Quaker for four quarts for his.

Quaker.—Now I will tell thee; we drink no spirits at the taverns. How much didst thou pay for the bitters?

Judge—Sixpence.

Q.—How much for the oats?

J.—Sixpence.

Q.—My oats cost me ninepence; and what good did the bitters do thee?

J.—They procured me an appetite.

Q.—A bitsmence gives me an appetite. Thus you see that we spend no more than thou, and our horses are fat. But I have not done with thee yet. I see silver buckles on thy shoes; how much did they cost?

J.—Nine dollars.

Q.—How long hast thou had them?

Q.—Eight years.

Q.—Do they answer any better service than my strings?

J.—No.

Q.—With the nine dollars we should have bought five stock; and at the expiration of five years we should have had fifteen head of cattle. Here thou sees we can have money in our pockets. Instead of wearing silver on our shoes we have leather strings.

A wedding ride.—Horses were scarce at the first settlement of the country. It is not recorded that they were introduced into the Plymouth Colony until about twenty years after the landing of the pilgrims; but the 'young folks' would have their rides notwithstanding. When John Alden was married—and John Alden was a great man in his day, a worshipful magistrate and a Councellor, and a comely man withal, and a great favourite with the ladies, inasmuch that he made nothing at all of 'cutting out' the renowned Captain Standish, who cut down the Indians like stubble. When John Alden was married, there was great 'carrying on' about Cape Cod, where he wooed and won the Captain's intended, Miss Priscilla Mullens, the great belle of the Cape and Colony. He was determined to do the thing up in style, as became a gentleman; so he put a ring in his bull's nose, covered his back with a piece of broad-cloth, mounted and rode to his wedding. Miss Priscilla might well be proud of such a husband, and to prove herself worthy of him, she resolutely mounted the bull, at the moving home and ambled along without fear, while her gallant spouse led him by the nose and walked proudly by the side of his valuables—his bull and his wife. The gentleman who led, and the lady who rode, the bull, were the ancestors of some of the first families in the country, including members of Congress, heads of colleges, and two Presidents of the United States.—Exeter News Letter.

News from the Gulf of Mexico.—New Orleans papers of the 5th inst. bring information that two French brigs of war arrived off Vera Cruz on the 20th ult., and the remainder of a squadron, 14 in all, were expected, to enforce the French claims, a part of which had been admitted. Fortifications had been commenced to protect the town in case of bombardment, which was expected.

No American vessels were in port. The U. S. sloop of war Vandalia was spoken on the 20th ult. bound in.

A "pleasure excursion" to Europe is to sail from Baltimore on the 1st of May next, to occupy about nine months' time in its completion. Passage $500. The vessel will touch at the principal and most remarkable parts in Europe, and likewise, many desireable points on the Mediterranean, in Asia and Africa.

Laborers Wanted. A Mr. Wm. Wall, of Lancaster, Ohio, advertises for 2000 men to work on the Hocking Canal, and offers liberal wages.

Resolutions against the admission of Texas were adopted on Friday, by the Pennsylvania senate, 22 to 6.

New Printing Machine.—Mr. Thomas Trench of Ithica, New York, is constructing his Patent Printing Press at the Speedwell Works near Morristown. The Jersey man mentions that it is to be attached to one of the paper Mills in the place and describes it as follows—

The Press takes the paper immediately from the Paper machine, prints it on both sides, and passes it through drying cylinders which presses it smooth; thus in one operation, and within the space of three minutes, the pulp is taken from the mill and a book of 250 pages is ready for the binder. The paper is printed on one continuous sheet, thus a whole edition can readily be printed rolled-up, and sent any distance. Mr. Trench had on his press "Cobb's Juvenile Reader," of 216 pages, of which he presented us a sheet of about 70 feet, neatly printed, and which can be examined at our office.

This new Printing machine will cause a complete revolution in the art of printing, and greatly diminish the price of standard works and school books. Hereafter we suspect, orders will be given for Bibles, spelling books, &c., &c., by the mile, instead of the volume as in former time; but be that as it may, a sheet of five miles in length, can be made with nearly the same ease as one of fifty or a hundred feet.

The town of Hull holds nine voters. Sometimes it gives ten. In the March meeting it chose sixteen town officers—highest vote 9. There is no law in the town against one man holding two offices. Four men have three each, and two others two each.—Boston Advocate.

Sleigh Party.—A correspondent describes the excursion of a party of pleasure from Bolton thro' Lancaster and Leominster to Fitchburgh, on one day last week consisting of one hundred and twenty-five gentlemen and ladies, drawn by twenty-four beautiful horses. It seems the vehicle was built in the form of a pavilion, and was surmounted with flags and decorations. The party dined at Fitchburgh, and after a day of agreeable festivity, returned without accident to their own homes.—Boston D. Adv.

☞ The Journal of Commerce this morning states that at the present time just half the stock of the United States Bank is held in Europe; and as the present price of the shares in London pays a good profit on the price here, and the last accounts from there warranted the expectation of a further advance, it is probable that a good portion of what still remains will be moving off.

Early youth and old age.—There are in existence two periods when we shrink from any great vicissitude—early youth and old age. In the middle of life, we are indifferent to change; for we have discovered that nothing is, in the end, so good or so bad as it at first appeared. We know, moreover, how to accommodate ourselves to circumstances; and enough of exertion is still left in us to cope with the event. But age is heartwearied and tempest-torn; it is the crumbling cenotaph of fear and hope! Wherefore should it give the turmoil for the few, and evening hours, when all they covet is repose? They see their shadow fall upon the grave—and need not to be at rest beneath it. Youth is not less averse from change; but that is from exagération of its consequences—for all seems to the young so important, and so fatal. They are timid, because they know not what they fear; hopeful because they know not what they expect. Despite their gaiety of confidence, they yet dread the first plunge into life's unfathomed deep.

The future.—Who rests content with the present? None. We have all deep within us a craving for the future. In the whole circle of presents it is subject to no imaginary miseries; it goes on increasing; it is a joy for ever. It exercises both bodily and mental faculties in its acquisition it is satisfaction to the past, and encouragement to the future." "For mercy's sake, stop!—if you go on much farther with this elogium, you will send me away a confirmed miser." No such good luck: the miser, like the poet, must be born. It is not to be acquired without an original vocation.

Extract of a letter from Major Pilcher.

It appears that the effects of the small pox among most of the Indian tribes of the Upper Missouri, surpass all former scourges, and that the country through which it has passed is literally depopulated and converted into one great grave yard. The Mandans, consisting of 1600 souls, had been reduced, by the 1st of October last, to 31 persons. The Minetarees, a tribe about 1000 strong, took the disease a month later than their neighbors, the Mandans. One half had perished and the disease was still raging; they no doubt shared the fate of the Mandans. The Ricaras, who had recently joined the last named tribes, and numbered about 3000, were most of them out on a hunting excursion when the disease broke out among the Mandans, and consequently received it somewhat later. One half of them had fallen and the disease was raging with unabated fury—not more than one out of fifty recovering from it. Most of them that survived subsequently committed suicide, despairing I suppose, at the loss of friends, and the changes brought by the disease in their appearance, some by shooting, others by stabbing, and some by throwing themselves from the high precipices along the Missouri. The great band of Assinneboins, say 10,000 strong, and the Crees, numbering about 3000 have been almost annihilated; and notwithstanding all the precaution used by the gentlemen engaged in the trade of that remote region to prevent it, the disease has reached the Rocky Mountains, a band of 1000 lodges had been swept off, and the disease was rapidly spreading among the different bands of that great tribe, numbering, I think, about 60,000 souls. I have no doubt but the precautions contained in my letter of the 27th ultimo will be fully realized, and all the Indians on the Columbia river, as far as the Pacific Ocean will share the fate of those before alluded to.

[Measures have been adopted by government to afford alleviation to the deplorable suffering among those red men, and to prevent further infection, as far as practicable, by vaccination—for which purpose proper agents have been employed.]

WASHINGTON, March 13, 1838.

A bill was reported in the House this morning for the suppression of gambling in the District.—Such a measure has been anxiously desired for many years, but owing to our legislators themselves being the offenders, it could not be expected that they would be in a hurry to provide a razor their own backs. To this system may be attributed the alarming degree of immorality for which the district is notorious. Possessing the new sources of amusement enjoyed in large cities the gambling houses are an irresistible lure to many of our members of Congress, whose habits render them unfit for more rational recreation. Hence members date their ruin from such associations, and many a fond wife, or affectionate daughter, is led to mourn the day which crowned a father or a husband with political honor. It is well known that scores frequently lose more than their salaries for the whole session, and several instances could be named where northern gentlemen had to send home for money to bear them expenses thither on the adjournment of Congress.

Thursday last, being the anniversary of the birth of Andrew Jackson, a salute of 100 guns was fired from Bunker's Hill!

Moral and Religious.

From the Exeter News Letter.

An Interesting Incident.

Free-thinkers and infidels often ridicule religion, and those who embrace it; but there is that within them which tells them that religion is a reality, and that those who are actuated by its principles, are entitled to confidence and respect.

Two men were travelling to the far West one was a sceptic and the other was a Christian. The former was, on every occasion, ready to denounce religion as an imposture, and professors as hypocrites. According to his own account of the matter, he always suspected those who made pretensions to piety—felt particularly exposed in the company of Christians, and took particular care of his horse and pockets, when the saints were around him.

They had travelled late one evening and were in the wilderness: they at last drew near to a solitary hut, and rejoiced at the prospect of a shelter, however humble. They asked admission and obtained it. But it was found as dreary and comfortless within as without; and there was nothing prepossessing in the appearance of the inhabitants—The two were an elderly man, his wife and two children—sunburnt, hardy and rough. They were apparently hospitable, and welcomed the travellers to such homely fare as the forest afforded, but the air of kindness might be assumed to deceive them, and the travellers became seriously apprehensive that evil was intended. It was a lonely place, suited to deeds of robbery and blood. No help was at hand. The two friends communicated to each other their apprehensions: and resolved that on retiring to their part of the hut—for there were two apartments in it—they would secure it as well as they could against the entrance of their host—would have their weapons of defence at hand, and would take turn through the night in watching, so that one of them should be constantly on guard while his companion slept. Having hastily made their arrangements, they joined the family—partook of their homely fare, and talked of retiring to rest: the old man said it had been his practice in former times, and he continued still, before his family retired to rest at night, to commend them to God, and if the strangers had no objection he would do so now. The Christian rejoiced to find a brother in the wilderness, and even the sceptic could not conceal his satisfaction at the proposition. The old man took down a well worn Bible on which no dust was gathered, though age had marked it, and read a portion of the sacred scriptures. He then supplicated the divine protection, acknowledged the divine goodness, and prayed for pardon guidance, grace and salvation. He prayed too, for the strangers; that they might be prospered on their journey, they might have a home in Heaven. He was evidently a man of prayer, and that humble cottage was a place where prayer was wont to be made.

The travellers retired to their apartments. According to their previous arrangement the sceptic was to have the first watch of the night, but instead of priming his pistols and bracing his nerves for an attack, he was for wrapping himself in his great coat and covering himself in a blanket, as quietly as if he had never thought of danger. His friend remarked him of their arrangements and asked how he had lost his apprehensions of danger? The sceptic felt the force of the question and all it implied—and had the frankness to acknowledge that he could not but feel himself as safe as at a New England fire-side in any house or in any for at which the bible was read as the old man read it, and a prayer was offered as the old man prayed.

Be assured that order frugality and economy are the necessary supports of every person's and private virtue. How humble soever these qualities may appear to some, they are nevertheless, the basis on which liberty, independence and true honor must rise. He who has the steadiness to arrange his affairs with method and regularity, and to conduct his train of life agreeably to his circumstances, will be much less exposed to every situation into which he may be thrown. He is under no necessity to flatter or to lie, to stoop to what is mean, or to commit what is criminal. But he who wants the firmness of mind which the observance of order requires, is held in bondage to the world; he can neither act a part with courage as a man, nor with fidelity as a Christian. From the moment you have allowed yourself to pass the line of economy, and live beyond your fortune, you have entered on the path of danger. Precipices surround you on all sides. Every step which you take may lead to mischiefs that as yet lie hidden, and to crimes that may end in your everlasting perdition.—Blair.

Life is short; The poor pittance of seventy years is not worth being a villain for. What matters it if your neighbor lies interred in a splendid tomb? sleep you with innocence. Look before and you through the tracts of time, a vast desert of unnumbered ages lies open in the retrospect; through this desert have your fathers journeyed on until wearied with years and sorrows, they sunk from the walks of men. You must leave them where they fell and you are to go a little further, where you will find eternal rest. Whatever you may have to encounter between the cradle and the grave, be not dismayed. The universe is an endless motion, every moment big with innumerable events which come out in slow succession, but bursting forcibly from a revolving and unknown cause, fly over this orb with dispersed influence.—Blair.

For the Plainfield Union.

To the first Bird of Spring.

Thrice welcome Blue-bird, herald of the Spring!
Thy joyous carol stirs the hidden fount
Of sweet remembrances within the heart,
So long congealed by winter's chilling power;
Bright sunny skies, green fields, and blushing flowers!
Rise as familiar scenes of other days;
And Hope all use forth again, the morning star,
Whose beams proclaim that winter's night is over,
Thy mellow notes, sweet songster! on mine ear
Seem as the greetings of a well known voice,
To me from exile in his native home!
And what knows a one, (but seen a stranger bird!)
What springs of joy, the humblest voice can wake,
Whose tones come fresh from a far distant home!
And yet when once the wanderer hath returned
To that again the soil that gave him birth,
And for the strains and welcomes of the throng,
That unto meek voice, that once possessed a charm
Sweet as the music of the first spring bird!
Falls on the ear a disregarded sound.
And thou, sweet warbler will thy voice seem tame,
When spring remains as the feathered choir,
Whose mingled notes shall overpower thine own?
But, while thy solitary lay is poured,
We hail it as a messenger of Him
To come—a voice that breaks the sleep of death,
Which nature sleeps—that bids her rise to life,
And put her robe "of many colors" on.
Yet, in here education due, sweet bird!
To rise, beyond the praise of words alone;
That touch of all spring's charmers, should receive
The tuneful homage—for thou art the first.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

The death of Hon. T. J. Carter, member of the house from Maine, suspended the usual business of Congress on Tuesday. It was properly announced in the Senate, by Mr. Ruggles, and in the house by Mr. Evans.

Monday, March 19.

Several memorials for the abolition of slavery were presented from New York, Ohio, and Vermont.

Mr. Wall presented a memorial from Hunterdon county, N. J. upon the subject of the currency, proposing a United States bank, and opposing the subtreasury system. Ordered to be printed and laid on the table.

At 4 P. M. Mr. Benton, concluded his speech, in favor of the subtreasury bill, commenced on Wednesday last.

In the house, resolutions were the order of the day. A great number were presented on great variety of subjects. Many on the late duel, and abolition. Much business was done during the day.

Tuesday, March 20.

Mr. Southard spoke at length in opposition to the subtreasury bill. Mr. McKean presented the proceedings of a large meeting at Pittsburgh, against the bill.

In the house, the general appropriation bill was under discussion nearly all day.

Wednesday, March 21.

In Senate, Mr. Southard concluded his speech against the subtreasury bill. The vote on Mr. Clive's substitute was then taken with the following result: yeas 22, nays 30. Rejected by a majority of eight.

In the house, the debate on the appropriation bill still continued, during which there was a skirmish between Mr. Halsted, of N. J. and Mr. Bynum, of N. C.

According to the New Orleans True American some heavy transactions in cotton were made in that city during the week ending the 12th inst.—The highest price paid was 11 cts. and the lowest 9 cts.

The same paper mentions that the Mint commenced operations, having bullion to the amount of $60,000. The bill for the relief of the Nashville Railroad passed the Louisiana House of representatives unanimously. The Governor's veto on the bank bill sent in by the House, and it is supposed that the legislature will rise without passing any law on the subject.

The destruction of property by the late fire at the emperor's palace at St. Petersburg, is estimated at four millions and a half of dollars.

There is active competition between the lines on the route from Philadelphia to Baltimore.—The fare has been reduced to $2.

It is stated that Mr. Webster's great speech is to be published forthwith, and that more than one hundred thousand copies are called for already at Washington.

Branding Privilege.—The Ohio Eagle states that one hundred and thirty packages of wheat passed through the Post Office at that place a few days since under the frank of a member of Congress. The packages were duly marked "Pub. Doc."

A letter from England says—

"The people of England are [illegible] of which will [illegible] the U. S. Bank, [illegible] connection. The [illegible] the agency of [illegible] Board of Directors on stock of the U. S. Bank [illegible] and exchange. The capital will be £2,000,000, to be [illegible] shares similar to the joint stock banking associations [illegible] in operation in England."

Punishment for renting to a Gamester.—We learn from the N. Y. Gazette, that the Bailmore City Court a few days ago, fined an individual named Gorman, one thousand dollars, and sentenced him to the city prison, thirty days, for having rented a part of the house that he occupied to be used for the purpose of gaming, and which was so used, with his knowledge.

The War in Florida.—We mentioned a few days since that Gen Jesup had suggested to the War department the expediency of the subduing of the Seminoles, and to secure their removal, without further delay. Gen. Jesup, we believe, is now in command, and has requested the proposed of making a yearly force would allow them to remain in the Southern end of the peninsula, which is a worthless territory, to us. Mr. Poinsett's reply declares the suggestion to be contrary to the settled policy of the government, which is to remove all the Indians West of the Mississippi, and further that the Seminoles ought to be captured or destroyed."

Permission is given, under the necessity arising, with of withdrawing the forces, regulars and militia, from the swamps, to grant a cessation of hostilities upon the agreement of the Indians until after the ensuing sickly season shall have passed.—Newark Daily.

Late from the Army.—Information has been received at the War Department, from Fort Jupiter Florida, as late as the 7th March, which states that up to that time, more than three hundred and fifty Seminole negroes had come in. From information derived from them, it was believed that Sam Jones and his party were by no means idle on the islands of the Everglades.—A Captain and his party on the west of the Okee-cho-kee and Okee-cho-chee, with his band, in the swamps of the Locie. It was also reported there, that many of the Mickasukees were making their way in small parties of two, three, and four, back to the Wathoo and Withlacoothee. It is evident that they will not fight again, if they can avoid it, their sole object being to get out of the way of the whites, and preserve the means of subsistence. It is believed that nearly all their cattle have been destroyed, and most of their horses captured. A brilliant say that there are not more than seventeen negroes left in the nation.

In order to search the Everglades, and if possible to find and dislodge the Indians from their lair, six companies of artillery under Colonel Blanchard have been sent from Indian river to Key Biscayne, where they are to take boats and proceed by New river into the Everglades. Major Lauderdale, with 230 Tennesseans, and a comp ny of the 3d artillery under Lieut. Anderson, are also going out New river having marched from Fort Jupiter on the 2d inst. Lieut. Powell of the navy is to cooperate in this movement with Col. Blanchard in a moving force of nearly 600 men.—Globe.

The funeral of the late Hon. T. J. Carter, Representative in Congress from the State of Maine, took place from the Capitol on Saturday last. The day was inclement and dreary, and a number of members having taken advantage of the vacation from Thursday to Monday to make short trips out of the city, the attendance was rather thin. Every thing was, however, conducted with great order, (under the direction of the committee of which Mr. Evans was chairman,) and with becoming solemnity.

The funeral service was performed by the Rev Mr. Hawley, and an appropriate address was delivered on the occasion by the Rev. Mr. Reese, one of the chaplains to Congress.

The funeral was attended by the President of the U. S. and several of the Heads of Departments as well as by the principal officers and other officers of members of both Houses of Congress.—Nat. Int

A "whole Hog."—There is now exhibiting on board a flat boat, opposite the Custom House, the largest specimen of pork that we have ever seen. He is a Berkshire hog, is seven and 9 feet 10 inches round the snout; 4 feet 7 inches high; and weighs one thousand & six pounds! He shows a pecular kind and is covered with a thin coat, "each particular hair" of which is as stiff as the quills upon the fretful porcupine." He is very lazy and loves to lie upon his own dust bed; but when roused to his feet, he "roars like a lion from the dwellings of Gordon." If converted into bacon, he would fill an entire smoke house. Go and see him, for he is a hog to it. "take him all in all, we never shall look upon his like again. —N. O. Picayune.

Acorns.—An ancient and wide spreading oak stands by the side of the highway, a little north of the buildings of Mr. Oren Kingsley, in Westhampton. The last autumn, Mr. K's. children gathered the greater part of the acorns that fell from that tree, and he measured them and found 23 bushels. He gave them in the winter to his hogs, sheep, and cattle, and all ate them greedily. Mr. Kingsley thinks that they are worth about half as much as corn, and is confident that they are more valuable than oats. If his comparison is correct, the oak is a very valuable tree.—North. Mass. Gaz.

Extraordinary Longevity.—The Springfield Mass. Gazette says there is now residing in Somerwick, a man who was born in Feb. 1738, and who of course, is now over 100 years old. He enjoys the society of his friends, and participates in their conversation.

Joseph Gouge died in Guinnett county, Ga. on the 24th ult. aged 109 years. He was a native of Virginia, and served through the revolution as a soldier.

Rare Instance of Official Longevity.—Mr. Hopkins Esq. a son of the distinguished divine, whose name is distinguished with the polar system of Calvinistic theology died at Great Barrington, Mass. on the 9th inst. aged 90. He had been the Register of Deeds for the County since the year 1778, and Postmaster of the rural village, where if we rightly remember his father was the settled pastor, since 1797.

A Drunken Father.—A little girl in Bayard st. N. Y. was yesterday crushed or smothered to death by her drunken father, who had thrown himself upon her on the bed, and thus unconsciously committed murder upon his own child from the state of insensibility to which he was reduced by his beastly passion for liquor.

The New York Post office now receives the small notes of the City Banks, [illegible]

Important to Farmers.—

A few weeks since we published a communication from a correspondent, giving the results of an experiment in planting corn by Hart Massey. Some of this will [illegible] Mr. Massey called upon us on Saturday last to correct an important error in said communication, and invited us personally to examine the said field which we accordingly did and now give the results of our observation.

Mr. Massey took of the seed corn with which he planted the field a small quantity, and soaked it in a solution of salt petre, commonly called salt in the, and put it into rows with the seeds thus prepared. The remainder of the field we believe was planted by the same individual. Now for the result. The five rows planted with the corn prepared with salt petre, will yield more than 25 rows planted without any preparation. The five rows were untouched by the worms, while the remainder of the field suffered severely. Not only will it exempt the seed corn from the ravages of the grub worm, but it will also increase the product of the field.

Here is a simple fact, which if ascertainably and generally known would have saved many thousands of dollars to the farmers of this county alone, in the article of corn. It is a fact, which should be universally known, and is, in all probability, one of the greatest discoveries of modern times in the much neglected science of agriculture. At all events, the experiment should be extensively tried as the results are deemed certain, while the expense is comparatively nothing.

Mr. M., also stated as to the result of another experiment tried upon one of his apple trees last spring. It is a fine thrifty healthy tree, about 25 or 30 years old, but has never in any one year, produced over about two bushels of apples. While in blossom last spring, he sawed off the tree and sprinkled plaster freely on the blossoms, and the result is, that it will this season yield twenty bushels of apples. Now if the plaster will prevent the blast, it is a discovery of great importance. Mr. M. was led to make the experiment by reading an account of the producing of trees in a meadow where plaster had been sown at a time when there was a light breeze in the direction of the orchard, the trees contiguous to the meadow bearing well, while the others produced no fruit.—Watertow (N. Y.) Standard.

Death of Judge Irving.—It becomes our duty to announce the death of John T. Irving, for a long period Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in this city.—He died on Tuesday evening about 11 o'clock. On the announcement of his death on Friday morning all the Courts immediately adjourned. At a subsequent hour the members of the Bar held a meeting, at which Judge Sprong presided. Robert Morris Esq. offered a series of resolutions expressive of the respect of the Bar for the deceased, which were unanimously adopted.—Journal of Com.

Death of the Hon. Timothy J. Carter.—A letter from Washington to a relative of Mr. Carter announces the decease of Mr. Carter on Wednesday evening. He represented the Oxford district, in the state of Maine. This is less than a month, has death deprived that State of two out of eight of her Representatives in Congress.—Ib.

Three Days Later from England.—Liverpool papers to the 23d Feb. was received last evening by the Rosalie. There was no political news. The Canada excitement had subsided, the people being satisfied with the conduct of our government.

There had been many disasters among the shipping. The French frigate Terpsichore, from Martinique, with the Gov. of that island on board, was wrecked off Ireland, near Cork, on the 19th Feb. Crew saved.

There had been no important change in the markets. It is stated that the bank of the United States is making very large remittances to England in various shapes; in addition to Bills of Exchange for one hundred or one hundred and fifty thousand pounds, and large amounts in specie by the late packets, the house of Baring Bro. & Co., of Liverpool, has just effected insurance on cotton valued at 380,000 pounds coming to their address.

It appears that the freedom of the city of London has been conferred upon our minister Mr. Stevenson.

YANKEE WIT.—Speaking of Cannon, said a sub ject caused countryman the other day, to one of Sir John Colbourne's lieutenants the side of the line, "reminds me of what I saw this morning." Indeed, indeed, replied the officer, staring his eyes and beginning to write, 'what did you see?' 'Why, I saw,' said the countryman 'five cannons start for Canada.' 'Will you please to make an affidavit sir?' (writing) 'deponent said and sait that he saw five cannons on their way to Canada, and that they will pass the line within twenty four hours.' In less time than we have been writing this paragraph, an affidavit was executed and despatched to head quarters with the alarming intelligence, whereupon the royal navy began to make more inquiries. 'What size were they?' 'Large and three small ones.' 'Were they loaded?' 'I only one of them.' 'Were they mounted?' 'All in one sleigh, sir.' 'Old or new?' 'The two had been sawed—the small ones as bright as new pins.' 'But are you positive they were cannon?' 'Unless the parish register lies—George and Sally Cannon, with their three little responsibilities.'—Burlington (Vt.) Free Press.

Good Times.—The Warren Pa.) Bulletin says, "We have glorious times here in Warren—nothing to sell and no money to buy it with.

Fast Days.—Governor Edwards has appointed Friday, the 8th day of April as a day of fasting and Prayer in Connecticut.

In Massachusetts Thursday, the 5th, and in New Hampshire Thursday the 12th are appointed for the same purpose.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, March 28.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man.
THOMAS JEFFERSON.

RAIL ROAD MEETING.

The proceedings of the Railroad Meeting, called in our last, have been furnished us by the secretary, as given below. The meeting was large, influential and respectable.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Plainfield and its vicinity was held at Jacob Thorn's tavern, pursuant to notice, on Thursday evening, March 22d, 1838, to consider the propriety and expediency of aiding in the completion of the Somerville and Elizabethtown Railroad, (as far at least as this place,) the present season.

John Wilson was called to the chair, and Cornelius Boice chosen secretary.

The object of the meeting was fully stated by the Chairman, who urged upon the assembly the propriety of immediate action in support of a measure of such great importance to the community.

Zachariah Webster also addressed the meeting and insisted upon the exertion and co operation of the inhabitants, to aid and assist in the completion of the work.

Mr. Harrison, one of the directors of the company presented to the audience a statement of the costs and expenditures of the road, and the probable amount required to finish it to Plainfield, and the advantages of said road in forming a connecting link with the coal regions and the interior of the west.

Mr. Moore, engineer of the company presented a map showing the location of the rail road its probable connection with the roads in Pennsylvania, forming a continuous route to the coal regions, to Pittsburgh, to the Ohio river, and connecting with the Great Erie Road, clearly showing the route to be the shortest and most expeditious from the west to the city of New York.—After which,

Wm. T. Compton and T. A. Hartwell, Esqrs addressed the meeting at considerable length upon the importance of the road being built, and the plan upon which it was proposed to complete it.

Whereupon it was unanimously resolved on motion of Zachariah Webster,

That in the opinion of this meeting it is highly important that the road should be completed as speedily as possible, and that the company be solicited and encouraged to progress immediately with the work, and that we will render all the aid in our power.

It was further resolved on motion of James C. Ayres, That a committee be appointed to confer with gentlemen present, concerned with the road and also with the directors and officers of the company in relation to the objects in view, and also in regard to a change in the location through this place.

Which committee consists of the following gentlemen, Ezra Fairchild, Zachariah Webster, Isaac Leonard, John Wilson, Esq. Wm. P. Shotwell, Esq. Rudolph Dunham, Jacob Manning, Laing Webster, Martin Runyon, Samuel L. Pound, Dr. John W. Craig, James C. Ayres and Cornelius Boice.

Resolved That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and be published in the two papers printed in Somerville, and in the paper at Plainfield, and in the Elizabethtown Journal.

Adjourned to meet again on the call of the Chairman.
JOHN WILSON,
Chairman.
CORNELIUS BOICE, Secretary.

P. S. The committee of thirteen forthwith organized by choosing John Wilson, Chairman, and Cornelius Boice, Secretary,—to either of whom communications on the subject of the road may be addressed.

For the Plainfield Union.

March 21, 1838.

Shall we retire, said an affectionate daughter to her mother, who sat till late by a small fire, her feelings being of a nature to keep her from feeling sleepy, or from noticing the clock. She had been deserted by the one who should have protected and provided for her, and neglected by her wealthy connections, of which she had many, and after laboring till her strength and spirits failed, she thought to relieve her burthened heart by weeping alone, and could not reply for tears and sobs; but following her poor child to her sleepless couch spent much of the night in trying to think how she should live till some returns for their labor could be had.

Pause, reader! and recollect the word of God's eye, "whoso hath of this world's goods, and seeth his brother need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion, how dwelleth the love of God in him."

The above communication was handed to us on Saturday evening, and is not fiction, but the simple truth. Extremely limited as our acquaintance is in this place we know one other instance of extreme destitution and want—in which poor persons, with a family of small children have in many cases had nothing at all to eat. In a community like this these things ought not so to be. Owing to the great scarcity of money, and of employment, and that for a long continuance, there must be much suffering from the want of the necessaries of life; and probably there are a hundred such instances as we have referred to above, in the place. Several benevolent individuals endeavored to awaken the attention of the people to this subject last fall, but we have not heard that any thing was done about it; and though the severity of winter is now passed, and pleasant spring is now opening upon us, we ought to consider that spring will not bestow the necessaries of life upon those who have nothing, and not only to consider this, but render them all the assistance in our power.

The Establishment of the New Brunswick Times is offered for sale. It is the only democratic paper published in Middlesex county, and it is a fair share of advertising patronage. To a young man of energy, a practical printer, and one capable of conducting the paper, a good opportunity is afforded of entering at once into business. New Brunswick, from its location must soon become a large manufacturing town, and a place of much business. Letters addressed to the publishers, McCready & Stelle, (post paid,) will receive attention.

The discussion of the Sub-treasury bill in the Senate has called out the choice spirits of the country, and brought forward in bold relief the talents of the most eminent statesmen and speakers of both parties. For the bill, Calhoun, Benton and Wright are the most distinguished, and opposed to them are Webster, Clay and Tallmadge, all great in talent and debate. From day to day, during the past month, crowded audiences have attested the great interest in the powerful debates of these champions. As the debate is now drawing near its close, the interest is daily increasing, and all at Washington are served up with rich treats of eloquence. It is a question which must stand or fall by fair argument, and it is now generally supposed that the opponents of the bill will gain the day, not from superiority of talent, but from the goodness of their cause.

Governor McNutt of the state of Mississippi has issued writs for an election for members of Congress, to fill the seats vacant in the house, to take place on the 23d and 24th of April. Claiborne and Gholson are the Van Buren candidates—Prentiss and Word the candidates of the whigs.

The election in Maine, to supply the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Calley, takes place on the first Monday in April. As there has since been another vacancy in the Maine delegation, occasioned by the death of Mr. Carter, very probably that will be filled at the same time.

Full returns of the election in New Hampshire have been received. Mr. Hill, the Van Buren candidate for Governor is elected by a majority rather over 300; which is much less than usual. The senate will stand 8 Van Buren men, and 4 Whigs—House, 134 Van Buren men, and 110 whigs.

As respects the New York town elections we can get nothing satisfactory. It appears that great gains have taken place in several of the towns, but sometimes in favor of one party and sometimes in favor of the other.

Maine is entitled to send eight members to the House of Representatives in Congress. Two of the seats are now vacant.

Public Meeting

On the Sub-Treasury Bill.

ALL the Legal voters of the Township of Westfield are invited to attend a public meeting to be held at the Long room of T. J. Barr, at Scotch Plains on Tuesday, the 3d of April next, at 4 o'clock, P. M. to confer together, and express their opinion to Congress, on the Sub-Treasury Bill, now pending in that body. It being of great importance that Congress be fully informed of the sentiments of the people on all great vital measures, it is hoped the meeting will be full, and the attendance punctual.

MANY CITIZENS.

Westfield Township, March 23d.

The above c ll, it will be seen is to ALL—both parties are invited to attend, and that there may be a fair expression of the sentiment of the town in regard to this important measure there should be a full attendance. It is not a meeting of those in favor of the bill, or of those opposed, but of all those willing or wishing to express their opinion in regard to it.

We have not room to say how much we are pleased with the proceedings of the Rail road meeting on Thursday evening last, a full account of which will be found in another column. Now let every man use his property, and his influence in promoting and encouraging a work of so much importance to Plainfield,—to the whole region through which it p sses,—and to New York.

The New York Mirror of Saturday last contains much very interesting matter. Among the articles we notice,—The Adventures of Robert Rusful, an old dyspeptic, by T. S. Fay.—The country in winter, and Reminiscences of the olden time, by Laurie Todd, and many others of considerable talent. In the number are forty-four articles—all good, besides a superior piece of music.

☞ Many thanks to "O. H. C. 1078." for his communication. It came too late for insertion in the present number, but will appear next week.

We have just received a catalogue of the students in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J. It now contains 117 students.

We have also received a catalogue of the students of Lenox (Mass.) Academy—an institution of long standing and much reputation. It has now the same principal that it had twelve years ago, when we attended it.

☞ The way they treat duellists in France.—from a French paper.

"In a duel which took place some time ago between M. Prestat and M. Haus, both students at the Polytechnic school, the latter was killed. The Civil Tribunal, upon an action for damages by the mother of the deceased, sentenced the survivor to pay to Mme. Haus an annuity for her life of 900 fr. Against this judgement, M. Prestat lodged an appeal to the Royal Court, which was heard yesterday. The Court maintained the principle of the responsibility of the survivor, but reduced the annuity to 300 fr., with a fine of 6000 fr. in case of delay in its payment."

A centenarian!—We had, on Saturday, the pleasure to meet, in one of the Bowery omnibuses—with Mr. Thom a Brander, an old gentleman now within one month of the ripe age of 110 ye rs. We had the curiosity to enter into conversation with him and learnt that he had just arrived in this city from Vermont, on a visit to his great grand children, the eldest of whom is about 35 years of age. This old gentleman retains remarkably the possession of his faculties, his sight and hearing being now as good as that of the generality of mankind, at half his years. Such an interview may not again occur in our life time, to find converse with one who has seen the people progress from a few feeble colonies until they have become one of the most powerful governments of the family of nations. Truly such a person excites in the liveliest feeling of veneration!—N Y. Mer. Adv.

The Burlington city election on Tuesday last terminated in the election of the whole Whig ticket, after a close vote, by an average majority of 10. Last year the Van Buren ticket succeeded by a small majority. It appears by the Gazette of that place, that the township meeting voted until 12 o'clock (after which the meeting could not be legally organized,) without being able to elect a moderator and Clerk, the vote being a tie, and the officers of last year therefore continued to act.

Mulberry Trees.—It appears by letters from France, that the great and increasing demand for the morus mult-caulis, from the U. S. has produced a scarcity in France—the supply having been chiefly drawn hitherto from that kingdom. The cultivation of the mulberry and the raising of the silk worm seem to be extending in the U. States to a degree which promises to make silk one of the most important products of the country.

Atlantic Steam Navigation.—The British steam packet ship Sirius, of 700 tons, is advertised to leave London for New York on the 28th inst and York on the 2d April, in anticipation of the large steamer Royal Victoria. She is chartered by the British and American Steam Navigation Co. for this one voyage, and is commanded by Lt. Roberts of the British Navy. She is expected to leave New York on her return the 1st May

It is stated, that the whole line of the Pennsylvania Canal is in excellent repair, and that the water will be let in in the course of a few days.

Correspondence of the Newark Daily Advertiser.

JAMES CITY, March 23d, 1838.

I have the pleasure to say to you that on the 20th inst., the day named by the Legislature for the people to approve or reject the Charter, there were but nine negative votes. Will you have the goodness to state the fact, as it may gratify many honorable members of both houses, who took a lively interest in our welfare, notwithstanding the efforts of our own Representatives to get the bill dismissed from the files of the House. We are much indebted in this matter to the kind interference of a member from Essex, A. C. M. Pennington, Esq.

Honesty and discretion.—A singular act of honesty occurred in the city on Friday last. A merchant in Broadway having a note of several hundred dollars to discharge at one of our Banks, prepared the amount and placed it with the Bank notice, and giving it to one of his clerks directed him to proceed to the Bank and take up the note. The clerk, while on his way, accidentally lost the parcel from his pocket, which if ot he did not discover until he had arrived at the Bank. Meanwhile a gentleman passing down Broadway, discovered the parcel lying on the pavement in the vicinity of St. Paul's Church and unrolling it and having read the notice, proceeded immediately to the Bank, paying the note, and causing it to be stamped by the teller. The gentleman afterwards called upon the merchant, and made him acquainted with the circumstances, who was much pleased to find that he had escaped the loss, and no less gratified at the singular discretion of the finder in paying the note, as it being past two o'clock, a little delay would have caused it to be protested, there not being sufficient time to send other funds to the Bank for its payment.

Philadelphia charities.—The rich men of Philadelphia have taken a good lead in bequeathing large sums of money to public charities. The executors of Dr. Jonas Preston, of that city have just paid over the residue of his est te, amounting to $350, 981 55, according to his b q uest, in the following words: "to found and endow a Lying in Hospital, in the city of Philadelphia, for the reception and comfortable confinement at obstetrical aid of indigent married women of good character resident in the city and county of Philadelphia, or county of Delaware, producing satisfactory testimonials of character."

Melancholy Catastrophe.—The Jersey Blue of Saturday states that the house occupied by Mr. Alexander Trembly, at Bergen, the lower part as a dwelling, and the garret for manufacturing fire-works, in which the family was employed, was suddenly fired about 1 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon last, by the explosion of some powder, and in a moment exhibited a scene of conflagration. All the inmates had just time to escape with their lives only, except a little boy about five years of age: the father upon this discovery immediately returned to rescue his child, they both perished in the flames! Mr. Trembly was eleven years from France, and left a wife and four small children in a land of strangers, to lament their irretrievable loss.

Cooking Stoves.
J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being slack through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as to our opinion the best for cooking:

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,

Church & Stanley's Phil d. patent for wood,

C. Pooley's for wood; and the

Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Koisterboch cooking stoves, from Philadelphia, for coal only. These stove are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of Hess's and Pleiss's make from Philidelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome assortment manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded if equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at city prices. We will also procure any patterns we may not have, for any who may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low, and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stoves and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts; embellished with many indicate and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this purpose—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—sketches of the stage drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translation from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals of England will serve to give variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings!—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

To Let.

FOUR Rooms from the 1st of April next, for one year, in the house now occupied by J. R. Dunn.

Also, one room in the basement of the same building, suitable for an office or shop.

Likewise, a small barn attached to the Premises,—all which will be rented on reasonable terms, on applying to the subscribers, on the Premises.

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY

At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the principles which exhibit the views, and transmit the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is proof fully no institution whose operations are more important to be known to every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles, intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservatism of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired till we shall receive the orders. Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomor Classes of College, and to give a thorough course of instruction, in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the useful branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

English Studies, Common branches, per qr.	$2 to $4.00
Higher branches,	6.00
Studies preparatory to a Collegiate Course,	7.00
Collegiate Studies,	10.00
Modern Languages an extra charge.

Tuition bills of all pupils from abroad to be paid in advance.

No deduction for absence, except at the option of the Principal.

Scholars can board with the teachers for $2 25 per week, including washing, ordinary fuel and lights—Boarders must furnish their own beds and bedding.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an Institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—to which as well as to New York, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than four years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstruction in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any case. Their effects will be taken according to the directions, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a due regularity of all the natural functions. Neither can they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize and regulate the circulation—to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this

GREEN BROOK

Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizen of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory references will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

THE GREAT WEST.

The following extract presents a brilliant vision but which is no mere figment of the imagination.—We take it from a long, exciting report in the New York Legislature by Mr. S. B. Ruggles, Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, on the finances and public Works of the —now more clearly than ever—Empire State Nothing ingonuable can retard the progress of the American people to the utmost heights of human grandeur and power but, themselves. The God of Nature and providence has provided the amplest possible means for the fullest development of the human virtues. On us and our children rests the responsibility—

The western termination of the Erie Canal looks out upon lake Erie, the most southerly and central of that great chain of navigable lakes which stretches far into the interior from our western boundary. Around these inland seas, a cluster of five great states is rapidly rising. The territory which they comprise, and which is to become tributary to the canal, embraces that great area extending from the lakes on the north to the Ohio on the south, and from the western confines of this state to the upper Mississippi, and containing 250,000 square miles. This measure is exceeded by well known objects, it is 18 times as large as the state of N. Y., west of the county of Oneida—nearly twice as large as the kingdom of France, and about 6 times as extensive as the whole of England. It contains 180 millions of arable land, a large proportion of which is of surpassing fertility.

The productive power of this region, and its capability of supplying tonnage for export, are strengthened by the facilities which it enjoys for cheap and easy transportation. In this respect, no country on the face of the globe, enjoys greater natural advantages, for it is nearly encircled by navigable waters, and its broad area is intersected, in numerous directions, by streams furnishing ample means of conveyance—while unusual facilities for the construction of canals and other artificial channels of communication are offered by the level and uniform character of its surface.

These being its geographical advantages, it needs only the requisite population, to experience the full development of its agricultural resources. Its progress in this respect has been truly surprising. In 1816. Ohio was the only organized State government within its limits. In that year, Indiana, having obtained the requisite number of 60,000 inhabitants, entered the Union and took its place by the side of Ohio. Illinois and Michigan followed them in rapid and feeble series, with a few settlers thinly scattered over their surface,—while Wisconsin, unknown even by name, was an undistinguished portion of the great North Western Territory. In the brief period of twenty one years, such has been the influx of population into this great district, that Ohio, the eldest member in this brotherhood of nations now numbers 1,400,000 inhabitants Indiana upwards of 600,000, Illinois and Michigan, (both of whom have organized their governments and come into the Union) 700,000 souls, and Wisconsin, not only as Wisconsin rapidly rising, but even beyond the Upper Mississippi, 30,000 citizens have already laid the foundations, of yet another state. Such is the onward march of this population, and the amount of its annual increase alone, exceeds in number, the whole inhabitants of ten of the States in the Union. The population already embraced within the district in question, in little short of three millions and if the same rate of progress shall be maintained for the twelve next to come, by the year 1856, it will probably exceed six millions.

The peculiar activity and energy of these people, and their power most rapidly to develope the resources of the broad domain which they thus inhabit, are also worthy of consideration in estimating the even ful extent of their trade. They probably possess a greater aggregate power of productive labor than any other portion equally numerous of the human race. Their population is made up almost exclusively of the young, the resolute, the vigorous, and the intelligent, who have gone from the more crowded communities in the eastern and middle portions of the Union, they seat themselves around this cream of waters, and there build up an empire. They have taken with them the laws, the habits, the language, and institutions civil and religious of their parent states,—but above all, they have carried into that great field, an honest love of labor, and in the very act of organizing their government, they testified their willingness to exert and rely upon their own energies, by abolishing slavery forever throughout all their limits.

This group of inland States has two outlets for its trade to the ocean; one by the Mississippi, to the Gulf of Mexico, the other through Lake Erie to the Atlantic. Whether it be attributed to singularity of origin, or laws, or habits, or to ties of sanguinity, or superior salubrity of climate, the people evidently prefer the market on the Atlantic; and they are making prodigious efforts to reach it. Three great canals, one of them ungreater than the Erie Canal, and embracing in their aggregate length about 1000 miles, are to connect the Ohio with Lake Erie, while another deep and capacious channel excavated for nearly thirty miles through solid rock, unites Lake Michigan with the navigable waters of the Illinois. In addition to these broad avenues of trade, they are also constructing lines of rail road, not less than 1500 miles in extent, in order to reach with more ease and speed the lakes, through which they seek a conveyance to the sea-board. The undaunted resolution of this energetic race of men is strikingly evinced by the fact, that the cost of the great works which they have thus undertaken, (and most of which are in actual progress) will exceed forty-eight millions of dollars, a sum far exceeding all that New York, with twice the number of inhabitants and two hundred years of accumulated wealth, has ever attempted. The circumstances moreover, is particularly important, that the public works of each of these great communities, are arranged on a harmonious plan, each having a main line supported and enriched by lateral and tributary branches, thereby bringing the industry of their whole people into prompt and profitable action, while the systems themselves are again united on a grander scale in a series of systems comprising an aggregate length of more than 2500 miles, with Lake Erie as its common centre.

The various portions of this vast work are now in a train of rapid construction. Indiana alone has 6000 men in her employ, and Ohio, Illinois and Michigan are making correspondent efforts: seven years from this time, the whole inland trade of that broad region around the lakes will crowd the entrance of the Erie Canal, on its way to the Atlantic.

Important to Farmers.

The following communication was read to the Phil.delphia Agricultural Society, Febuary 21, 1838, and directed to be published in the Farmer's Cabinet, from which we copy it.

Of all the kinds of grain raised in the United States, Indian Corn is the most valuable, taking into view the quantity and the price per bushel, and it has been a subject of much solicitude for some years past, that the early frosts have done such extensive injury to it; diminishing the crops and otherwise rendering it of much less value for feeding stock. In the South, the seasons are sufficiently long and warm to mature it, but in the middle and northern states this is not the case and consequently our farmers have been directing their attention to other varieties than those heretofore cultivated, that will ripen earlier and bear planting at a later period. Of the kinds experimented upon with this view, none has succeeded so well as the variety called the "Dutton Corn." This answers the purpose completely, as it may be planted the latter part of May, and even as late as the first of June, and out off the first week in September fully ripe. It is a hard corn, deep yellow grains, set very close, generally 12 rows sometimes more and never eight. It is remarkably heavy and believed to be more sweet and nutritious than the ordinary kinds of corn usually raised in our country. The stalk is small and it makes the ground less than other kinds, and of course admits of being planted much nearer together. A specimen of the ears has been deposited at the office of the Farmers' Cabinet, so that those who desire to see it, may have an opportunity of inspecting it, and thereby prevent their being deceived: as much of the small eight rowed yellow northern corn, which all also ripens early but not so soon as the Dutton, has been sold for it. In some instances has produced much disappointment and loss, but perhaps the vendees of it, have themselves been deceived and so fraud intended.

Isaac Roberts, near Springmill, in Montgomery County, raised an acre and a half of it last year, which produced about 75 bushels without a doubt. It was cut off the first week in September and the ground ploughed and sowed with winter grain.

The ears and mixes which are admitted to be good judges of the qualities of grain, have displayed a very decided preference for the Dutton Corn where that and the common kind have been equally accessible to them. A. B.

The Nashville Union of the 24th ult. says: "We heard from the Hermitage yesterday—the general's health is still improving, and he is rapidly regaining his usual strength and spirits.

Mr. Rathbone, a notary public of Oswego, and late private secretary to Field Marshal Van Rensselaer, has been arrested by the U. States Marshal, and imprisoned with the general at Auburn.

The Banks in Maryland have at present in specie, 623,000 dollars more than when they suspended payment.

Moral and Religious.

The Bible.—Love and study the Scriptures. He that avoids reading a portion of them every day, forsakes his own mercy, and is as far regardless of his safety, welfare and true comfort.—Precious Bible! like thy blessed Author, our Sun and our Shield; thou giver of grace and glory, thou guide through all the gloomy vale to our everlasting home, how many advantages have we derived from thee! Thou hast often solved our doubts and wiped away our tears. Thou hast been sweeter to our taste than honey and the honey comb. Thou hast been better to us than thousands of gold and silver. O less thou hadst been our delight, we should have perished in our affliction. No wonder Job esteemed thee more than his necessary food." No wonder David "chose thee as his heritage forever." No wonder the noble army of martyrs parted with their estates and with their blood, rather than with thee. May we value thee as our richest jewel, may we love thee as our dearest good, may we consult thee as our sweet counsellor, may we follow thee as our safest guide.

Contentment with Little.—See the Providence of God determining the bounds of your habitation —the age in which you were to live—the station you were to fill—the comforts you were to enjoy —and the trials you were to endure. And if you have not much of the world, ask, whence is it? Is it because my heavenly father is unable to give me more? No. "The silver and the gold are his." Is it because he has no inclination to indulge me? No. "He takes pleasure in the prosperity of his servants." It is therefore to be resolved into the wisdom and kindness of his administration. His wisdom tells him how much I can bear; and his kindness will not suffer him to give me more. He aims in my welfare. The same disposition which leads him to give, induces him to deny. He corrects and he governs with the same love.

Novel Reading on the Decline.—We find it stated in "The Great Metropolis," that the falling off in demand for works of fiction has been very great for the last few years,—and that very few even of those written by novelists of the first reputation, afford to their publishers a remunerating sale.

Always regard your present condition as a state of pilgrimage; never view it as any thing more. This will regulate your desires, and moderate your wishes for temporal things. This will keep you from being elated too much, when you meet with prosperous scenes. Not that you will disparage the bounties of Providence—you will be thankful for them as conveniences by the way—but you will consider them only as accommodations, and not mistake them for the glories and advantages of home. You will not, therefore sit down, but still press forward. This will enable you to endure, with fortitude and resignation, the hardships you may encounter. You will say, "as a traveller I expect such things: they are only the inconveniences of a journey; it will soon be over"—and "I reckon the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which will be revealed in us."

Total Abstinence—Ecclesiastical Action.

Resolutions adopted by the General Convention of Western Baptists, held at Cincinnati, Nov. 2, 1836.

Resolved, That religious principle is the only sure basis of the Temperance cause.

Resolved, That notwithstanding the full and liberal development of the principles of Temperance, and notwithstanding the important revolution that within a few years past has been effected in public sentiment on this subject, the use of intoxicating drinks is still a most appalling evil in our country, wasting the intellect, deadening the moral sensibilities, and destroying the present and eternal hopes of our fellow citizens, and that vigorous effort in this cause should be kept up in the community, until the evil shall be entirely removed.

Resolved, That this convention recommend to the churches to discountenance the use of all intoxicating beverages, under whatever name they be designated or known.

Resolution of the General Association of Baptists of Indiana, held at Madison, Oct. 1837.

Resolved, That we recommend to churches and brethren to discountenance the use of all intoxicating drinks as a beverage, under whatever name they may be known or designated.

Resolution of the Grand River Baptist Association, Ohio, September 15, 1837.

Resolved, That the cause of Temperance is identified with the cause of Christ, and that this Association regards the practice of manufacturing, vending, or drinking intoxicating liquors, (except when prescribed as a medicine,) to be a moral evil, placing in jeopardy the temporal and eternal interests of man, and as such, should be discountenanced by the churches.

The second anniversary of the American Temperance Union, will be held in Philadelphia, on Tuesday, the 22nd of May. Secretaries of state societies will confer a favor by forwarding their last annual reports.

Try to spend your life usefully, both to yourself and others.

For the Plainfield Union.

To C. D.

How sweet when the day star in evening reposes,
And his red beams at the close of the day,
Is the scene in which nature each beauty discloses—
And the humble thatch'd cot with its mantle of grey.

How sweet when the red clouds with crimson are glowing,
And the bright tints of glory with splendor display—
With the murmuring brook in its rich wildness flowing,
Is the humble thatch'd cot with its mantle of grey.

How sweet to contemplate the soft shadows stealing
O'er the vale where bright waters in luxury play;
And dear to my heart and to each softer feeling
Is the humble thatch'd cot with its mantle of grey.

How sweet while the pale moon is fitfully gleaming,
With wavering brilliancy o'er my lone way.
When my soul full of hope is of love fondly dreaming,
Is the sight of you cot with its mantle of grey.

How sweet when the rainin swift torrents descending,
Excludes from my view the dim star's feeble ray—
Is the soft stream of light which its low window lending
Points the path to you cot with its mantle of grey.

Yet sweeter the smile o'er that mildly playing,
And that voice which such tender emotions betray—
And thy dearly loved self through my passion delaying,
Adds a charm to the cot with its mantle of gray.

Hints to Young People.—No. 1.

Respected Friends.—Almost every person who has reached the middle or latter stage of life, is ready to give advice to the young. It is not always a failing. The Holy Bible, the oldest and wisest book in the world, is full of council for young persons: and some of its most solemn and eloquent passages are addressed directly to them. From the time the Bible was written down to the present day, the most serious attention of all reflecting people, has been given to the young.

The most important subject that claims the attention of the people of every generation in middle life, is the subject of education. And that respects the young. The majority of the people become parents, in early manhood, and commence rearing and providing for the young; and their children, as soon as they are old enough to go out from the paternal roof, are brought under public arrangements made for their education. It seems, therefore, as though almost all that any one generation lives for, is to provide for and train up for life the generation that comes after.

One thing that makes people in advanced life, love to give advice to the young, is, that young people, in general love to hear advice. Every well disposed young person is pleased with all good counsel that is meant for him, and addressed to him. It is natural to him to relish it, from his feeling of dependence. When I see a youth who turns away with contempt from good counsel, I conceive that he has violated a law of his nature, and is liable to some bad end. Little hope can any one entertain of such a person. All virtuous youth are fond of reading books and papers which are prepared especially for them. It seems like a compliment to their importance. And it truly is so.—The authors wish their books to be so understood and received. They are not backward to express their great regard for youth, as a most important class of every community.

Young friends if I had ability equal to my desires, I would write you a most interesting series of letters. At all events I promise, Providence permitting, to give you a few thoughts each week for a month or two at least, and longer if you give me your attention. I shall take up subjects as they rise, without any special pains to reduce them to regular system, and my addresses will be short and plain. I propose to address young people, without particular reference to sex. Some of my remarks may be more properly applied to one sex, some to the other; but all will, I hope, be found profitable to both.

Let me invite my young friends to give me, each week, a few moments candid and serious attention. It would give me pleasure to know that the young people generally, where this paper circulates, have the opportunity of reading my hints and especially that some should think it worth while to lay them up by them for their improvement at a future day.—And let me say to my young friends, that they will find it a good method of improving their minds, to be the habitual readers of some well conducted weekly newspaper; one that does not degrade itself with low political strife, nor fill up its columns with empty fiction, but presents a variety of substantial knowledge on political, moral and religious subjects. The amount of valuable knowledge to be gained in a single year from a good newspaper is very great. A sensible and judicious editor, whose chief end is to make his paper useful to the best interests of the community, has the power to distribute useful information on all subjects in a manner peculiarly adapted to the circumstances of the people. Young people may profit in a peculiar degree, by his labors.

CRAYON.

Curious Discovery.—Extract of a letter from a practical chemist, in London, to his brother, in Philadelphia, dated 6th January, 1838: "An apparently most extraordinary discovery has been made by a Mr. Joyce, a gardener. It consists of a heating apparatus adapted for all purposes, without the production of any smoke or any smell—positively no production of heat alone, that is, as I have just seen it, contained in an urn, the sides of which are so hot that it cannot be touched. It is moveable; may be taken into a carriage or in a room like a lamp, or in any other way. I have closely examined it, and can discover no source of heat. The fuel, they say, will not cost three pence for twelve hours to heat a large room: and this heat may be raised to such a degree as to melt the vessel which contains it. The discoverer will not give any information, as he intends taking out a patent for it in the countries in Europe, where he can be protected, and disposing of them all simultaneously. If it is a humbug, it is a clever one. The heat will last for thirty hours without any renewal of fuel. My conjecture I can form about it is, first, that there is no fire whatever in the vessel, and no fuel consumed: secondly, that it is some chemical process; and thirdly, that it is produced by the action of carbonic acid gas, which is subjected to immense pressure, and thereby liquefied: is formed into solid carbonic acid, by which action an immense quantity of latent heat would be converted into sensible heat. All this is a mere surmise of mine. I can think of no other method but the condensation of some gas for the production of heat alone. The degree of cold produced by Thilorier, in making the converse experiment with solid carbonic acid, was 140 degrees below zero."

A bill to abolish imprisonment for debt has passed the Ohio House of Representatives by a vote of 50 to 6. The progress of opinion, against this miserable system will soon abolish it every where Its operation is now we believe altogether confined to petty debts, the whole amount of which in many individual cases would scarcely pay the expenses of protracted imprisonment of the person of the benefit of the suit." It constitutes no protection against or punishment for frauds, while in cases without number it adds oppression to poverty. Credit, properly understood, needs no such safeguard as this.

We have great pleasure in announcing to the honor of the central Bay state, that a bill passed the house of Delegates of the state of Maryland, on Wednesday, by 55 votes to 14, for the abolishment of imprisonment for debt.

Going Ahead.—Louisville in 1800 contained a population of 600 souls in 1820 5,012—1830 10,336—1838, 30,000 and it is thought that the various commercial and trading transactions amount to forty millions of dollars annually.

New York Canals it is announced officially in the Argus, that the state canals will be open for navigation on the 13th of April.

Concealed Weapons.—A bill to prevent the carrying of concealed weapons has passed the Virginia House of Delegates, by a vote of 85 to 17.

Radishes, salad, and greens were in the Cincinnati market on the 16th inst.

A tornado at the town of Manchester, Miss. destroyed property to the amount of $10,000.

Stephen Henderson, Esq. of New Orleans, well known to all the visitors of late years, at the White Sulphur Springs, and who died recently, left an estate of two millions of dollars, most of which he distributed to various charitable associations. Amongst his bequests was one of $2000 per annum to be distributed among the poor of his native town in Scotland.

Miss Martineau in the Senate.—The Harpers have just re-published Miss Martineau's last work concerning her visit in this country, entitled "Retrospect of Western Travel." in 2 vols. The following is from a notice of a visit to the United States Senate—

The American Senate is a most imposing assemblage. When I first entered it I thought I never saw a finer set of heads than the forty-six before my eyes; two only being absent, and the Union then consisting of twenty four states. Mr. Calhoun's countenance first fixed my attention; the splendid, the straight forehead, surmounted by a load of stiff, upright, dark hair; the stern brow; the inflexible mouth; it is one of the most remarkable heads in the country.—Next him sat his colleague Mr. Preston, in singular contrast; stout in person, with a round, ruddy, good humored face, large blue eyes, and a wig, orange to day, brown yesterday and golden to-morrow. Near them sat Col. Benton, a temperary people's man, remarkable chiefly for his pomposity. He sat swelling amid his piles of papers and books, looking like a being designed by nature to be a good humored barber or inn keeper, but forced by fate to make himself into a mock-heroic senator. Opposite sat the transcendant Webster, with his square forehead and cavernous eyes; and behind him the homely Clay, with the face and figure of a farmer, but something of the air of a divine, from his hair being combed straight back from his temples. Near them sat Southard and Poinsett; the former astute and rapid in countenance and gesture; the latter strangely mingling a boyish fun and lightness of manner and glance, with the sobriety suitable to the judge and the senator. His keen eye takes in every thing that passes: his extraordinary mouth with its overhanging upper lip, has not to unfold into a smile to win laughter from the sourest official or demagogue. Then there was the bright bonhomie of Ewing of Ohio, the most primitive looking of senators; and the benign, religious gravity of Frechinghuysen; the genuine air of Buckanan; the shrewdness of Poindexter; the amusing melancholy simplicity of Silsbee; all these and many others were striking, and for nothing more than for their total unlikeness to each other. No English person who has not travelled over half the world can form an idea of such differences among men forming one assembly for the same purposes, and speaking the same language. Some were descended from Dutch farmers, some from French Huguenots, some from Scotch Puritans, some from English cavaliers, some from Irish chieftains. They were brought together out of law courts, sugar fields, merchant's stores, mountain farms, forests, and prairies. The stamp of originality was impressed upon every one, and inspired a deep involuntary respect. I have seen no assembly of chosen men and no company of the high-born, invested with the antique dignities of an antique realm, half so imposing to the imagination as this collection of plain souled, self grown original men, brought together on the ground of their supposed sufficiency to work out the will of their diverse constituencies.

The last Bank Convention at N. Y. adjourned to meet no more in that city on the second Monday in August. We understand the banks of this city have appointed the same delegates who attended the former convention, with instructions, we believe, which authorise them to agree to a resumption of specie payments on the part of the banks of this city, at as early a period as the convention may deem it expedient. We have no doubt that the banks of the city will be fully prepared to resume at the earliest date which can be named by the convention. We incline to the opinion that a majority of the cities which were represented at the late convention, will be prepared for fixing at an early date for a simultaneous resumption, and that nearly all the Atlantic states will heartily concur in such a determination.—Post. Daily Adv.

Natchez Steam Packet Company.—We observe by the Natchez Courier, of the 7th, that a Steam Packet Company has been formed in Natchez, for the purpose of running a line of Steam Packets between that city and New York. The Natchez paper says:—

"The charter of the company is unsurpassed by any other in the State, and all that is required to have the noble vessel now erecting by the 1st of May, $25,000. Her entire cost will be about $100,000. She will be fully adequate for the purposes for which she was intended, for freight and passage. Her construction is such that she will carry 1000 bales of cotton, or 300 tons freight, independent of a full supply of fuel for the voyage between Natchez and New York. It is purposed to establish a coal station at Key West, which by lessening one half the quantity of fuel to be taken on board at starting will give still more additional room for freight.

"For passengers, her accommodations and the celerity with which she will perform her trips will give her superior advantages to any other mode of conveyance, both to the man of business and those who are in pursuit of health or pleasure. Gentlemen who have examined her are of the opinion that she cannot be excelled in point of model or construction. Her cabin arrangements are in splendid and sumptuous style. She has fifty open births, and as many state rooms. Her trip from New York to Natchez will be made in the short space often days."

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Thursday, March 22.

The Senate chamber was the scene of another brilliant display—between Calhoun and Webster. They held a large audience wrapt in admiring attention for hours.

In the house, the appropriation bill passed the committee of the whole, and was reported to the house. About 70 petitions in relation to the late duel were received, and all were referred to the committee of investigation.

Friday, March 23d.

After sundry memorials against the Treasury bill, concerning the Duel &c., Mr. Wall took the floor of the Senate on Friday, and spoke five hours in favor of the Treasury bill, and especially in vindication, of his course in opposition to the resolutions lately sent to Congress by the Legislature of New Jersey.

Mr. Wright, (rising at the same time with Mr. Southard,) said he should ask and urge that the question on the bill should be decided to-morrow, and on his motion the Senate then adjourned.

In the House, the appropriation bill occupied all day. The bill finally passed.

Saturday, March 24

In Senate.—Judge White spoke against the sub-treasury bill; after which it was so amended on motion of Mr. King of Alabama, as to make the operation of the bill commence one year later than is now contemplated—on the 31st of December, 1839, by a vote of 42 to 9.

The question was then put on the motion of Mr. Cuthbert to strike out the 23d section, and carried, 31 to 21.

Mr. Webster then moved to fill up the vacancy by inserting a section providing that no distinction shall hereafter be made between the different branches of the revenue, as to the funds or medium of payment in which the debts accruing to the government shall be paid or discharged.

Mr. Webster's amendment was adopted, 37 to 14.

Mr. Cuthbert's amendment, which was adopted to-day, we believe, reads as follows:

"And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, required and directed to adopt such measures, as he may deem necessary, to cause as soon as may be, all duties, taxes, debts, or sums of money accruing, or becoming payable to the United States, upon the sales of public lands or otherwise, to be collected and paid in the legal currency of the United States, or in Treasury notes, as by law provided and declared, or in notes of banks which are payable and paid on demand in the said legal currency of the United States; and no such duties, taxes, or sums of money accruing or becoming payable to the United States, as aforesaid, ought to be collected or received otherwise than in the legal currency of the United States, or in Treasury notes, or in notes of Banks which are payable and paid on demand in the said legal currency of the United States."

These two important amendments, Mr. Webster's and Mr. Cuthbert's, very materially alters the original scope and intention of the bill.

The yeas and nays were then called upon the third reading of the bill, and stood,—ayes 27, noes 25. The Senate then adjourned.

In the house nothing of importance was done.

Monday, March 25th.

A very active and interesting day in the Senate. The Sub-Treasury Bill came up at 1 o'clock, and was read as amended, by the Secretary, occupying near an hour. Mr. McKean then under his sense of duty, renewed the motion of postponement to the next session, which was negatived, yeas 23, nays 29.

The question on the final passage was then taken and decided as follows, after which it was sent to the house, and placed on the speaker's table—

AYES—Messrs. Allen, Benton, Brown, Clay, of Alabama, Cuthbert, Fulton, Hubbard, King, Linn, Lumpkin, Lyon, Morris, Mouton, Niles, Norvell, Pierce, Roane, Robinson, Sevier, Smith, of Connecticut, Strange, Trotter, Walker, Wall Williams, Wright, Young—27.

NOES—Messrs. Bayard, Buchanan, Calhoun, Clay, of Kentucky, Clayton, Crittendon, Davis, Grundy, Knight, McKean, Merrick, Nicholas, Prentiss, Preston, Rives, Robbins, Ruggles, Smith of Indiana, Southard, Spence, Swift, Tallmadge, Tipton, Webster, and White—25.

Mr. Southard presented the Cherokee protest, signed by 15,665 of the tribe, objecting to be removed west of the Mississippi, and moved its reference to the Indian committee.

Messrs. Lumpkin, Grundy, and White opposed, and after a debate of several hours, it was laid on the table, 37 to 10.

Proceedings concerning the late duel, at Troy, New York, Lancaster, Pa. and Wilmington, Del. were presented.

The House passed the appropriation bill about 5 o'clock, when it was sent to the Senate. A great quantity of petitions were presented, as usual during the morning, several being presented by Messrs. Halsted, Randolph, Stratton and Yorke, of N. J. Many were handed in by twenty or thirty members on the subject of the late duel. The Ruggles affair is proceeding.

Tuesday, March 27.

The Senate was engaged with the bill appropriating a million to continue the Cumberland road through Indiana and Illinois, which Mr. Calhoun and others warmly opposed, he remarking that he would never vote to borrow a dollar or issue a treasury note if money was to be so expended. After a long debate it was laid on the table.

In the house after some miscellaneous business the speaker reported the Treasury bill from the Senate, when Mr. Cambreling moved its reference to the committee of ways and means. Mr. Pickens, of S. C. asked if that committee intended, by bring up the bill from the Senate, or its own for discussion.

Mr. Cambreling replied that the committee infinitely preferred its own bill. The committee had thoroughly examined that from the Senate, and were opposed to it.

Mr. Patton moved to lay the bill on the table.

Mr. Glascock of Georgia, asked if the motion was not made to take advantage of the absence of some 30 or 40 members. He said there was clearly a majority in both houses in favor of the divorce.

The motion to lay on the table was carried by a vote of 106 to 98.

Wednesday, March 28

The Senate was chiefly occupied with private business. Several papers on the late duel, and on slavery were presented.

In the house, Mr. Bell from the Indian committee said he had been discharged from the Cherokee protest. Mr. Everett opposed, and said the Indians had been grossly abused. The Georgia members declared that their citizens would drive them off by force, when the time arrived in May, let Congress do what it might. The motion prevailed, 103 to 76.

The remainder of the session was taken up with the army appropriation bill. Mr. Yell, of Arkansas, said that a western Indian war was certain to happen within two years.

Better than Bank Stock.—The Norwich Courier says that a Mr. Waldo Tucker, of the west parish of that town, raised this year upon one half acre of ground, two hundred bushels of apples, one hundred bushels of potatoes, seven bushel of corn, ten thousand silk worms, one pig 8 months old, weighing two hundred and seventy five pounds, and garden sauce sufficient for two families. Mr. Tucker is a mechanic, and has, besides taking care of his little peice of ground, devoted two hundred days to his mechanical pursuits during the last eight months. Mr. Tucker threw his note into the right Bank for discount.

☞ Liberal encouragement is afforded to the cultivators of Silk in this state. By a law passed by the Legislature on the 21st ult. a bounty of 18 cts a lb. is offered "for every ten pounds or larger quantity of cocoons of silk, the produce of worms raised in this state," within five years. Extensive arrangements have been made in Monmouth county, to pursue the business, and more or less attention is given to the subject in several other parts of the State. Several cultivators in this vicinity are raising the Mulberry with a view to a trial.

Three fresh shad were taken near Staten Island on Saturday morning, 24th ult. by Mr. Simonson and E. Butler. They were sold at $2,50 each.

The Rev. Mark Hopkins, D. D. President of William's College, has been chosen to preach the next election sermon in Massachusetts.

The Philadelphia Gazette states that thirty thousand wild pigeons were recently taken near that city at a single haul.

The Rahway Herald states that they are so thick in that place, nobody can catch them.

Fresh butter in the roll is now selling in Ohio at 12 cents per pound—firkin, at 10 cents. The price of provision is evidently on the decline, almost every where.

At Cincinnati, on the 16th March, there arrived no less than 33 steamboats, the aggregate tonnage of which was 5,185 tons.

Raspberries.—We are informed by John T. Whitelwright, that he furnished the last season from one garden, 1,300 boxes of Antwerp raspberries for the Boston market.

The Rahway Herald says the Shoe Store of Joel Wilson in Main Street was entered on Wednesday night last and robbed of about one hundred pair of shoes and a few pair of boots. The burglars gained an entrance by taking off the weatherboards and removing the filling, composed of brick and mortar.

The Pennsylvania canals are open.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, April 4.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of Man. Thomas Jefferson.

We devote considerable space this week to Congressional proceedings, because they are of much interest. The far-famed Sub-Treasury Bill has passed the Senate, at length, after an almost interminous debate characterised by much talent and power—but has passed in such a shape as in some measure to satisfy both parties, judging from the party papers. Both sides boast largely of having won the victory. The Van Buren papers rejoice that the bill has passed, even though amendments are attached to it which they do not approve of—the Whig papers boast that though the bill has passed, it has been so amended as to be deprived of its most obnoxious features, the reception of specie alone for public dues. As the bill now stands, the Treasury is separated from the banking interest, and we have receivers general, and safes, and vaults distinct from banks, in which the Treasury department keeps the public money, making the treasury independent of banks, and preventing the banks from using the public money for their own profit; —all this is as originally proposed by the bill; but the collectors of the public money are obliged to receive the notes of specie paying banks, (and all banks pay specie till they stop,) as well as specie and treasury notes, which was not originally intended by the bill.

It will be seen that Mr. Calhoun's vote is recorded against the bill; this was in consequence of his regarding the amendments as objectionable, —he was in favor of the bill as it originally stood.

At all the decisions on this important question, the whole number of Senators, fifty-two, were present—we hardly recollect such an instance before.

We think it probable that the bill as amended, or something like it, will pass the house during this month. The vote in the house on Tuesday, can by no means be considered a test vote, as thirty two members were absent, (not including Gen. Ripley, who is sick at home,) besides the two vacancies from Mississippi, and the two from Maine. Of these thirty two, twenty two are for the bill, and ten opposed to it. Also, two, and perhaps more, who voted against the bill being laid on the table, are opposed to the bill itself. On the whole, therefore, we conclude that there is a majority in the house in its favor, but when it comes up in a fuller house, as it soon will, we can tell better.

The Executive, it is said, is well pleased with the bill as it has passed, notwithstanding the opposition of Mr. Calhoun in the Senate, and Mr. Cambreling in the house; and, perhaps it is better that the bill should pass, and become the law of the land, than that there should be no law at all on the subject. Indeed, we consider that almost any law would be better than to have the matter left undecided, and the whole country in a state of suspense and uncertainty.

☞ We hope our readers will not forget that the total abstinence temperance society of Plainfield meets in the first day Baptist church, on Monday evening next. The proceedings are expected to be of much interest. All so disposed are respectfully invited to attend.

The Van Buren candidate for the office of Mayor of the city of New York, is Isaac L. Varian, Esq. at present alderman of the sixteenth ward, and lately president of the board of aldermen.

A great Temperance Festival was held in Arch street theatre, Philadelphia, on the evening of the 22d of February last, on the occasion of the Hon. Mr. Buckingham going through the city. The tickets were $1. each, and the whole number, 1500, were disposed of, and 1000 more were demanded. About 2000 persons were present. The refreshments were ice creams, fruits, and articles of the like kind, but nothing that intoxicates. Mr. Buckingham addressed the assembly in a very interesting and eloquent manner, as did also several others; letters were read from several distinguished individuals who were unable to be present. The meeting was opened with prayer, at half past six. The reason that the theatre was selected was, that it was the only place sufficiently large, that could be obtained.

The state committee on education have addressed the people of the state on the subject of common schools, in an eloquent and stirring appeal—and have issued a circular to the committee of correspondence of the several towns.

The Somerset Whig says that the New Brunswick Times is conducted with as much ability as any paper of the class in the state, the Emporium not excepted.

Mr. Josiah Holbrook, the ingenious inventor of the Lyceum system, so extensively introduced, and with so much success in various parts of our country, has lately invented an entire new plan for the instruction of children, and to facilitate the acquisition of knowledge, and one that appears to us calculated to be useful. He proposed to connect drawing with writing, and says that common sense and experience prove that both are learned in connection, sooner and better than writing is or can be separately. He has accordingly prepared "First Lessons in Drawing," on a large sheet, and the same figures in a box of Drawing Cards. Mr. Holbrook observes —"By permitting children, both at school and at home, to make drawings and written descriptions of these and numerous other objects in nature and art, their feelings are interested; their hands, eyes, and intellects improved, and their minds constantly stored with new ideas. They are thus protected from ignorance and vice, and prepared for respectability and usefulness."

These cards, and the large sheet of First Lessons can be seen at this office, and information given in respect to the above.

The New York Weekly Whig is the title of a new paper, published by James G. Wilson. It claims to be the largest and cheapest paper in the world. Terms,—Three dollars a year in advance, or five dollars for two copies. Full Advertisement in our next.

We are happy to see that several state legislatures are moving on the subject of Temperance, and endeavoring to abolish the license system altogether. Maine and Massachusetts most probably will pass a law to this effect, and prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in any quantity less than twenty-eight gallons, except by apothecaries, for medicinal purposes. But the legislature of Tennessee have outstripped the older states in this great reform, as they have already passed a law similar to the above.

We both hope and expect that in a few years, the wicked license system will be entirely abrogated in every state in the Union.

The Windsor Bank in Vermont has failed.

The Kilby Bank is from 45 to 50 per cent discount.

We have been appointed agent to obtain subscribers for the "Comprehensive Commentary on the Holy Bible, by Mr. Jenks, D. D." The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS.—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octave.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work.

From W. C. Brownlee:—"Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott, and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose this work by Dr. Jenks. The grand and precious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited. It is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private reading,—and is particularly applicable to the wants of S. School teachers and Bible classes.

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, maps and well executed cuts, all designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We earnestly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a 'goodly pearl,' which every devout man should seek to posses in his family.

Subscriptions also received at this office, for the "Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge," a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—It is well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

It is said that it requires to build a ship of the line the timber which would be furnished by three thousand oaks of ordinary size. These oaks require one hundred acres for their growth and would be one hundred years in coming to their maturity.

The New York state assembly have passed a law appropriating $200 annually for 5 years, to enable Levi S. Backus, a deaf mute to send his paper, entitled the Radii and published at Canajoharie, to every deaf and dumb person in the state. It is the first paper ever edited by a mute. Mr. B. is also a mute and they have a child blessed with all its faculties.

Mount Holly, Burlington County,
Sunday, March, 25th

This peaceful community have been shocked to day by a cold-blooded MURDER of one of the oldest of its citizens. Just at the break of day this morning the murderer broke into the house of Mr. Horza Moore, frightened the family all out of doors, and entered Mr. Moore's chamber, who was sleeping alone, and beat his head with a hammer until he was dead. He appears to have been perfectly cool, and alleges that he acted under good advice, and therefore made no attempt to escape.—Some say he is deranged, but I fear it is such a derangement as will do him no credit. He is now in prison.

An inquest has been held over the body of Mr. Moore by Squire Striker.

N. B. Intemperance was the cause.

Fire at Jersey City.—The joiners' office adjoining the Rail Road depots at the Jersey City Ferry took fire yesterday morning about 5 o'clock, and the two story building, on the corner, and the two other houses under the same roof, were burnt. The depot buildings contained three cars loaded with cotton bales for Patterson which were all consumed. Capt. Day, of the ferry boat Sussex, one of the firemen of the Essex, and Mr. Seamen club boat builder, occupied the dwellings and lost all their furniture. The buildings belonging to the New Jersey Rail Road Co. and the cars to the Patterson road; and both were fully insured.

The N. Y. Fire Department afforded prompt and efficient aid, which was the more timely as the Jersey engine was disabled early.

Treasures of the sea.—There arrived at New Bedford on Saturday and Sunday, nine vessels employed in the whale fisheries with an aggregate of near 20,000 bbls of sperm and whale oil, worth at present, prices $260,000. The New Bedford Mercury says, a considerable portion of these cargoes have already been disposed of.

Virginia Southwestern Rail road.—In the Virginia House of delegates, on Monday last, a bill was passed by a vote of 60 to 55, authorizing the construction, on State account, of a Rail road from the Tennessee line to New River. From New River the Rail road may be conducted by way of Lynchburg to Richmond, or by way of Danville to Norfolk. From the Tennessee line to Knoxville is a distance of about one hundred and forty miles, and this link, there is no doubt, will be provided for as soon as the Virginia work is under construction. Knoxville, our readers will recollect, is destined to be a great central point to which several important Rail-roads will converge, viz; the Charleston and Cincinnati Railroad which will pass through it; the Georgia State Road, which is intended to form a continuous line of Rail Roads from Savannah, through Macon, to the Tennessee River near Rossville; the central Rail road of Tennessee, traversing that State from Memphis in the South-west to the Virginia line in the north east; and lastly, the New Orleans and Nashville road.

The Book Trade.—The Philadelphia Inquirer states that the late Spring trade sale in that city was numerously attended. The purchasers were 130 in number, embracing the heads of many of the leading houses, from Maine to Louisiana.—There were 113 sellers. Some idea may be formed of the extent of the sale from the fact that the total number of volumes sold, amounted to 215,336. Among these were 12,102 bibles; 8,067 testaments; 6,357 dictionaries; 21,419 spelling books: 1,960 reams of paper; 5,957 hymn books: 3,160 prayer books; and 7,200 geographies. Carey, Lea & Co. disposed of 26,277 volumes; Andrew & Co. 20,850; Thomas & Co. 12,982; all others 254,719. The prices generally were excellent.

Jeremiah Mason.—This veteran barrister, says the Boston Times, has not probably a superior in point of legal acumen, in the United States He is not far from 80 years of age, and yet he possesses not only his intellectual but the physical vigor of youth. His shoulders, it is true, are bent by his peculiar habits of study; but one would hardly suppose, to look him in the face that his age could exceed 55. We do not believe there is a person of his age living, who possesses so great a share of what may be termed manly beauty.—The features of his face were cast in the most symetrical mould, and the glow of health, casts over them a resplendency which, we should think, would be dangeerous to the peace of those of the gentle sex who are at all tinctured with romance. The secret of this unusual health and longevity, is at'ist temperance in eating and drinking.

The Cumanches.—It is a singular fact in history that the tribe of Indians called Cumanches, who live a wandering life in the Mexican Territory in and about Texas, have maintained their independence against the powers of Spain and the Mexican States since the days of Cortez and Pizarro. They are more numerous, warlike and independent than any other tribe in America, and have been for a century past the terror of the frontier provinces of Mexico. They are the Tartars of the American continent. Their warriors are all splendidly mounted, and as horsemen they are unsurpassed by any people in the world More than a hundred years ago, a party of them went to the sea shore, and were attacked by the Spaniards and all killed, and since that the tribe has never been known to venture near the coast. —Louisville Journal.

Longevity.—There is a young couple at Nyack who have lived together as man and wife 72 years. Cornelius or Jacob Acker the husband is 96 years of age Mrs. Acker, 92.

SCHOOL.

WILL be opened on the 9th inst. at the house of Samuel L. Pound, a school for girls by Susan Robinson and Margaret Laing, in which will be taught the usual branches of an English education. Terms from two to five dollars per quarter.

4th mo. 2nd. 1838.

Take Notice.

AS I have taken wholly upon myself the Lower Mills in Plainfield, which is now owned by George Wells, and has been formerly occupied by Wm Wells in my operation to attend to Customer work particularly. Those favoring me with their custom will be thankfully received and punctually attended to. It is my expectation to keep constantly on hand, Feed, Flour of good quality, and of all kinds. Flour for sale.

As the public well know, or I am well aware myself of the difficulty attending keeping Books or trusting, and as promises are so fashionable with some of paying to-morrow, and as to-morrow never comes with them, I am determined to sell for cash or in exchange for grain.

It is my expectation to be found at or near the Mill at all good seasonable weeks. Sawdell's Day excepted, as I consider that day to be the Sabbath, and intend to observe it as such. PHINEAS RANDOLPH.

Remember the poor.

Another Boundary Difficulty.—The inhabitants of Fayette and Miller counties in Arkansas, declare themselves within the Territory of Texas, and refuse to pay taxes to the U. States, but have sent representatives to the Texan Congress. The Gov. of Arkansas purposes to abolish the laws of Miller County which is most disaffected, and to attach her territory to some other district. The U. States have exercised sovereignty over it, says the Governor, since the treaty of Louisiana

Ploughs.

AS the season is drawing nigh, when ploughs are wanting, I will take this method to inform the farmer that it is thought by the best judges that I have made some valuable improvements on the self-sharpening plough in the following particulars:—The long and pare feet shaped mould board will break the sod less than any plough now in use, and of course will run lighter,—the steel bar that forms the point is a great saving, to which is also attached, forming a substitute for the heel coulter so much valued in turf.

The above described ploughs will be left for sale at the store of Berry & Dunham, Plainfield.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N.J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located, and in every respect well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentleman's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should attend with the Principal of that department, as they will thereby secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and efficiency.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an Institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—one which as well as Newark, is desirable town. New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

Cooking Stoves.

J. Thompson & Co.

NOW inform the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity that they have on hand, and ready for examination,

The most complete assortment of Stoves they ever offered to the Public.

Work being short through the summer, we have devoted our attention more than usual to this branch of our business. After considerable experience in the stove business, we are willing to recommend the following as in our opinion the best Cooking

Stanley's Rotary for wood or coal,
Church & Stanley's Phil. d. patent for wood,
C. Pooley's for wood; and the
Old fashioned 9 plate, with hole on the top.

We have several other kinds of Cooking Stoves on hand, and invite all wishing to buy, to call and decide for themselves.

ALSO,

The celebrated Kesterbock cooking stoves, from Philadelphia, for coal only. These stove are highly approved of by many.

Cast Iron, Parlour, and Church STOVES,

Of these's and Pease's make from Philadelphia of all sizes.

RUSSIA Sheet Iron STOVES.

We have a very handsome two sheet manufactured by ourselves, and for neatness and good workmanship we think they are not exceeded or equalled by any other. They are somewhat different from those of last year, being tastefully ornamented with castings. For burning coal and heating rooms, we consider these stoves much superior to grates, and preferable to any other stove (except Olmsted's) of which we expect to have an assortment for those who prefer them.

Russia and common iron stoves of all size. Pipe, Elbows, Pans, Boilers, and stove fixtures in general.

GRATES

We have now on hand, a small assortment of Grates which we will sell at cost price. We will also procure any p ttems we may not have, for any wno may desire it. We intend to offer our stoves low and wish to sell them for cash.

N. B. Second hand stove and Pipe exchanged for new, and cash as usual for old iron, brass copper, and lead.

Situated in the village of Plainfield, on the Main street, in about the centre of the vill ge, being in Westfield township, Essex county

There is in the Tan-Yard, a good currying shop 2 stories high, 32 by 16 feet, 2 mahogany & sailing stakes, 1 stone scouring 1 bin, and one good staff do in the drying loft, and a good set of leach in a good barn, 22 feet square, a good shed house, 50 by 21 feet, Gale's patent bark mill attached, beam house, stone 1 oo house, &c. &c. Mill race running through it with water plenty and handy. Said Tan Yard is in good repairs, buildings good and some of them new, and is one of the best stands in the state for bark, hides and skins, and in a good neighborhood for retailing leather. Any person wishing to settle himself in a healthy and pleasant place will do well to call soon.

ALSO,

A House and Lot,

Nearly opposite said Tanyard, 2 stories high, 18 by 36, with a shop attached, well calculated for a mechanic's shop, or grocery. There is on said lot a good barn and carriage house. Wood house, a never failing well of water with pump in it, a variety of fruit,—every thing snug and in good repair. ALSO, A Four Acre LOT, about half a mile out of the village, in good state of cultivation, and very handy for pasture or tillage. Any person wishing to buy or rent will please call on the subscriber, living on the premises.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and on instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially these peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own research es, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and will not produce any other than a salutary effect in any—These effects when taken according to the direction, will be to purify and maintain a natural circulation in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—use more action in the liver and produce the secretion of healthy bile, and to equalize circulation—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at the Office where the Pills are sale. 1tf

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY

At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THIS Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and maintain the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to be known by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose; the Anti-Slavery society will doubtless have a mighty influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true preservation of our Liberty and Union. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise too speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to ask a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired. All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

GREEN BROOK
Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the conduct and management of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offence. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provision are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bedclothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 16, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory references will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

PROSPECTUS OF THE New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 3d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly entertained Weekly Journal of literature and the fine arts; containing original and selected tales, novelettes and sketches; poetry, wit and humor; the drama, music, fashions, and the gossip of the day; with numerous splendid engravings from the works of world-known and distinguished artists; and occasional selections from the best new publications, both foreign and American. Also, original and selected articles from the most popular periodicals, both quarterly and monthly, of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for the purpose—together with the various productions of the literary contributors employed for the weekly and occasional publications of the proprietors and their associates, and the usual miscellany of news, anecdote, &c. &c. &c. The whole forming a complete and unique family paper, for the parlor, the boudoir, the study, the counting-house, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will excel the present in every department of literary embellishment, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will continue to be employed on the work, and every exertion will be made to render it, in every respect, the best paper for the general reader to be published in the country. Of the most valuable of the literary matter which will be given in the course of the next volume: Sketches, chiefly original, and from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Tales, Novelettes and Romances, original and translated, will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most popular entertaining and exquisite repositories of elegant literature that ever issued from the press.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the estimation in which the preceding volumes of the New-York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and contemplated for the future, will, the first number of which will be issued on the 3d of July next, surpass what it has been called on the public to expect, and we are not in the habit of making promises which we do not fulfil. In the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully sustaining its pre-eminence as the popular organ of the literature of the day, and offering a successful rivalry with the most renowned popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the steel engravings, illustrative of literary embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every month with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The production of woolen fabrics, by a new process, in which spinning and weaving are dispensed with, is thus noticed in the Harrisburg Chronicle:

Valuable Improvement.—We were shown, a day or two since, several beautiful samples of cloth and carpeting manufactured at New Brighton, in this State, from the raw wool, without either spinning or weaving. The cloth was not pressed or finished in a manner of any kind, but was perfectly smooth, and, in this particular, we unhesitatingly pronounce it superior to any thing we have ever before seen. The carpet is beautiful—the figures are very rich; but we should not like to encounter their durability as they are merely manufactured now. It can be manufactured and sold for about half the price that foreign and domestic carpets now rate at—qualities in all respects alike. The new mode of manufacturing woollen cloth is upon the same principle that bodies of lasts are made—the wool is carded, then felted and pressed by machinery. It is believed that this will enable us to compete with England in woollen goods, and that it will finally supercede spinning and weaving.

Making Roads by Steam.—The pile driving machine on the Syracuse end of the Syracuse and Utica Rail road, of New York, propelled by a rotary steam engine, during the past week drove 625 piles, 25 feet deep, and cut them to the plane of the road—averaging more than 100 piles, or more than 500 feet of road daily.

Great number of pigeons were taken last week in Hunterdon Co. in this State.

Consolation.—Why are the disciples of Gall and Spurzheim, necessarily in favor of a liberal education? Because they are free-from-lodge-ists.

When men arrive at a certain station of greatness, their regards are dissipated on too great a number of objects to feel parental affection; the ties of nature are only strong with those who have but few friends or few dependants.

Great preparations are making to supply the country with pills the coming season. It is expected they will be more pleasy than pease.

Support your Mechanics.—There is scarcely any thing, says the Knickerbocker, which tends more to the improvement of a town, than a fair and liberal support offered to mechanics of every description. Population is necessary to the prosperity of any country; and the population being of an honest and industrious character, renders prosperity more certain, uniform and unvarying. Scarcely any place has risen to much importance even if favored of the best commercial advantages, without due regard to the encouragement of the mechanical arts. For though the importation of merchandize forms the leading feature of such a place, the various arts of mechanics are put invariably into requisition, and are indispensable to render the progress of commercial operations safe.—To an inland town mechanics are equally important as elsewhere. They constitute a large and highly respectable portion of society in counties, but in towns and villages they are almost a leading constituent part of their growth and population.

To afford ample support to this class of citizens, so highly useful and necessary, is certainly the duty of those engaged in other pursuits. Some branches of mechanism have to sustain no competition from abroad, the nature of their business preventing such inroads or interference; others are however subject to be incroached upon by the importation of similar articles of foreign produce, made at rates, inducing a preference over our own productions. Although trade and commerce in all their various branches should be free and unshackled, a regard for the prosperity of our residence should induce us to afford a reasonable support to our mechanics. We should at least give them a preference when we are not losers by it. A little experience will have convinced many that it is in most cases for their interest to do so, independent of many other considerations.

Extraordinary sagacity of Rats.—We have read and heard of numerous instance of the sagacity of rats; but we do not remember of any more extraordinary than the following, which has been communicated to us by a gentleman connected with the Peak Forest Canal Company. The workmen at the Grist Quarry, at Bugsworth, which belongs to the canal company, have a horn in which they keep oil for the axels of their waggons, &c., which they have been in the habit of placing on the ground in an upright position. To their very great surprise they have several times recently, found the horn filled to the brim with very small stones, and nearly the whole of the oil gone. This circumstance puzzled them exceedingly; and, in order to discover the way in which the oil had been abstracted, they placed the horn, containing a quantity of oil in its old position, and covered the ground about it with very soft clay. The next morning they found, as before, that the horn had been filled with stones; the oil was gone, and the clay was covered with impressions evidently from the feet of rats.—Manchester paper.

The two Brothers [a tale from the edge of 1800-ograte Building.

A Story founded on Fact.

I once became the guest of a man in the East, who, though not distinguished for great wealth or learning, yet had a tolerable share of both. He had already passed the usual terminus of human existence, but still appeared healthy, robust and active; giving clear evidence of having a sound mind in a sound body.

In the course of the evening he introduced me to his nephew, a young man probably of five and twenty. After the nephew had retired, the old gentleman said to me, with an air of no ill complacency, "I suppose I have been really the making of that young man; and now he is one the finest fellows in town."

As the old gentleman seemed to invite to more particular enquiries, I gave way to my curiosity, and drew from him the following little item of domestic history.

"After my sons had left me to carry on business for themselves, in the city, this Perry then a lad of ten years, came to me one day, and says he, 'Uncle, don't you want a boy to run about and do errands for you and aunt Nabby?' I bore away I am young and spry, and can save you a great many steps.' Saying this, he turned up his little twinkling eyes to catch my looks. I wanted to take the little fellow in my arms, but thought that would appear too childish; so I just kept my feelings down, and asked him, if his mother was willing he should come over every day, and help me for nothing?

"He hesitated—looked down, and began to scratch the dirt with his naked toes. I did not think it right to keep the little fellow in agony long, for he was the youngest child of the only brother I ever had.

"Well then,' said I, 'would you like to come over and be my boy—stay here all the time—and let me send you to school to learn, like William, and George, and Rufus?'

"The little beggar's eyes brightened as he caught my hand which I held out for him."

The old gentleman proceeded with his story, telling how he managed with his adopted son, and how the lad grew in knowledge much faster than in stature, and loved his uncle much better than his own father, &c.

"What was the matter with his father?" inquired I.

"O, as to that, I can hardly tell; I have thought sometimes there must have been some strange fatality about it. We started in life together, he being not quite two years younger than myself. The old homestead, which was under a mortgage for near half its worth, was divided between us, and I always thought he had the better share. But he is now a poor, a very poor man; while I have got enough to make myself and wife here quite easy and comfortable in our old age."

"And," said I, you have educated your family while your brothers children have grown up in ignorance?"

"Yes," said he; "brother would have been glad to have done well by his boys, but it was not possible for him to raise the means. Some way or other, he never could get along in this world, and I have often wondered at it; for he was a smart, enterprising, industrious fellow—had no severe losses—suffered less in his family from sickness than I did—in fact, there seemed to be nothing on earth in the way of his doing well."

"Perhaps there was extravagance and waste in the female department."

No! no!" he replied eagerly, "Jane was never the woman that would suffer any thing to run to waste about the house. She was always saving, industrious and economical. She was my wife's youngest sister, and had the same portion with her. No, no; such a wife would have helped any man to wealth, if the thing had been possible."

"What could have been the difficulty then? was he not intemperate?"

"By no means!" was a brother's indignant reply. "There is not the man living, that can say he ever saw John disguised with liquor in the least. He drank something, to be sure, every day, and I furnish him a little myself now, because I think it really necessary for him. I do believe he never would have grown old so fast, if he had left it off when I did."

"Now, sir, don't you think that same drinking is the real cause of his poverty?"

"No! no! no!!!" cried the old gentleman, with increasing earnestness. "The mere cost of liquor never could have made an industrious man poor. But I tell you what it is, my young friend that does the mischief with these topers. The poor fellows get so hot-headed with the stuff, that they make bad bargains, and every thing goes to waste that way. Now, brother John never lost any thing by bad bargains, to my knowledge. He might have bought a few trifles foolishly, but that is hardly worth mentioning.

I asked the old gentleman, what he supposed his brother's drink had cost a day on an average?

He could not tell, having never thought much about it. He did not hesitate to say it might be ten cents a day, when he was laboring.

As I had before gone into some calculations, as to what this tea costs a day, would amount to in fifty years, I determined to show my aged friend that his brother's poverty was of his own making.

"You say this brother is about seventy years of age. Now if he had begun at twenty, and instead of spending his money for that which had evidently done him no good, had put it up, and at the end of every year, put in it only ten cents, with interest at six per cent., adding the interest to the principle every year, his sum would now have amounted to more than $10,000—ten thousand, six hundred dollars!"

The old man shook his head incredulously.

"Now," said I, "I am almost a stranger to you; it is not to be expected, therefore that you will take my word for this statement. Take the pencil yourself, some time when at leisure; or, set your nephew Perry at work upon the problem; you say he is a mathematician, and I have no doubt he will solve it readily.

"And further, if your brother could in any way have made these little savings so productive as to yield ten per cent. it would have amounted to more than $42,000.

I believe the old gentleman thought I was playing a hoax upon him; he, however, promised to take measures for finding out that business.

The old gentleman sat musing awhile, as if determined to go through the whole calculation, mentally, but at length broke silence.

"Well, then, according to your account, there was but a four pence ha'penny between me and the most abject poverty."

"How?" I asked.

"Why, when we began the world, I took a miff against the village shop keeper, because he cheated me out of a four pence, and I never would trade with him afterwards, though there was no other place in town, at that time, where they kept any thing fit to drink. So I gave up the article altogether, until finally I did not care a fig about it, and did not seem to need it at all."

One brother was cheated out of a fip. Another was cheated out of character and respectability, together with the very necessaries of life for his family, while he was hurried on to second childhood more than ten years before his elder brother!

Christian Liberality.—You will say, here is a marvelous doctrine, which commandeth nothing but give, give: if I should follow this doctrine, I should give so much, that I should at length have nothing left for myself! These be the words of infidelity; he that speaketh such words is a faithless man. And I pray you tell me, have you heard of any man that came to poverty because he gave unto the poor? have you heard tell of such a one? No, I am sure you have not. And I dare lay my head to pledge for it that no man living hath come or shall hereafter come to poverty, because he hath been liberal to the poor. For God is a true God, and no liar; he promiseth us in his word that we shall have the more by giving to the needy. Therefore the way to get more is to scatter that you have. Give, and you shall gain. If you ask me how I shall get riches, I make thee this answer—Scatter that thou hast; for giving is gaining. But you must take heed and scatter it according to God's will and pleasure; that is, to relieve the poor withal, to scatter amongst the flock of Christ; whosoever giveth so shall surely gain, for Christ says, Give and it shall be given unto you. This is a sweet word, we can well away with that, but how shall we come by it? Give.—Bishop Latimer.

From the New York Evangelist.

Revival in Alton.—March 7th, 1838.—No intelligence, I am sure, can come to you from this "scene of bloody strife," of more gratified and encouraging import than is contained in this communication. God has once more remembered his praying believing people, and caused his salvation to flow through our guilty and polluted city. Many have been the songs of "new born souls" which have gone up in sweet unison in once before the throne of God. How changed since the memorable 7th of November! How cheering to the christian heart, to witness the triumphs of redeeming mercy on the very spot where the grim deceiver had so late celebrated his maddest carnival! And what a lesson of patience, and forbearance, and meekness, and forgiveness, to the doubting and faint hearted believer! How different the judgement of the infinite jehovah, from the narrow and contracted views of unrenewed and fallible man! Who would have supposed that amid so much strife, and contention, and hate, and malice, and murder, the heavenly comforter would so soon have descended to calm and assuage the tumult of angry passion and take up his abode with such a wicked and ungrateful people! Yet during the very week in which the rioters, and associated murderers of the martyred Lovejoy, were tried before our criminal court, and at the face of the most positive demonstration of their guilt, were acquitted, stones were inquiring what they should do to be saved, and young converts were singing the song of Moses and the Lamb."

Conclusion.—In view of this subject, what Christian is not ready to exclaim, What hath God wrought? Surely no people are called upon to express higher thanks to the great head of the church than we. Look back upon the scenes of terror, and darkness, and danger, and conflict of the last few months. When I call to mind the mercy of the Lord in sparing my unprofitable life and I think of the threats of assassination and violence upon my own person, and the nights of fear and foreboding experienced by the companion of my bosom, when I reverse to the misery and forbidding spiritual condition of my own church; when I remember the unswerving resolve of opposition that came upon us like a flood; and the beloved city of my adoption disgraced, ruined, and apparently beyond the reach of reand their contentment. But what are all these crosses, compared with the mercies we have experienced? During all the time of outward gloom, our church has been, to a remarkable extent, united and harmonious, and beyond any former period has augmented in numbers and grace. Since the first of October last, eighty-five have added to our communion, fifty of whom on examination of their faith in Christ. Well may we, then, raise our joyful Ebenezer and exclaim, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

But we look for still greater results, and hope are long to see our beloved city redeemed from her iniquity, and her citizens regenerated, "clothed and sitting in their right minds." There has been too much prayer put up for Alton, to give her up, without a long and contested struggle. We believe there are at least "ten righteous souls within her limits, for whose sake the lord will spare the devoted city. We say, then to you—to the Christians of New York—to the thousands who read your valuable paper—pray for Alton.

Yours, Respectfully,
FREDERICK W. GRAVES.

Voyager on life's troubled sea,
Sailing to eternity!
Turn from earthly things away—
Vain they are and brief their stay!
Chaining down to earth the heart,
Nothing lasting they impart—
Voyager! what are they to thee?
Leave them all and "follow me."

Traveller on the road of life!
Seeking pleasure—finding strife—
Know, the world can never give
Aught on which the soul can live;
Grasp not riches—seek not fame—
Shining dust and sounding name!
Traveller, what are they to thee?
Leave them all and "follow me."

Pilgrim through this "vale of tears!"
Banish all thy doubts and fears;
Lift thine eyes—a Heaven's above!
Think—there dwells a God of Love!
Wouldst thou favor with him find,
Keep his counsels in thy mind:
Pilgrim! much he's done for thee!
Will thou then, not "follow me?"

Wanderer from the Father's throne,
Hasten back—thy erring own!
Turn—thy path leads not to Heaven!
Turn—thy faults will be forgiven;
Turn—and let thy songs of praise
Mingle with angelic lays!
Wanderer! heavenly charms for thee!
I know they have—then "follow me."

Hints to Young People.—No. 2.

RESPECTED FRIENDS.—In the last paper, I saw, at the foot of the same column in which my last communication appeared, the following short, but very valuable admonition; "Try to spend your time profitably, both to yourself and others." I commend that short saying to every young person, as a motto to be laid up in the memory and made a rule of life. I thank the editor for it myself, as it has given me a hint at a good subject for this letter, and perhaps for several more.

When we say "time is precious," we state a truth, which to every reflecting person, is self evident. It is almost like saying "life is precious." Who does not know that? Time, in a certain sense, is life. What would life be, but this world, without time? He who "wastes time wastes life. If a man wastes all his time, he wastes all his life. He may be a living creature, but he is a dead man. He might as well never have lived at all, as to have lived only to waste his life.

Bear it ever in mind, then, that to spend time unprofitably is to throw away life. To lose time is to lose life. All that a man hath will he give for his life. A dying man once said to his physician, "Sir, if you will prolong my life one day I will give you my whole estate." This man perceived the value of time, and was ready to give all he had for a single day. All time is as precious as the last hour of a man's life; but how few esteem it so.

Do not let your life pass away, before you consider the value of it. Anticipate its value, and improve every hour in preparing to improve the next. The only proper way to live, is to be ever learning to live well.

The first part of our life, then is the most important part. It is the foundation on which the whole superstructure of the future life is to be built. It should be made of solid and durable materials, and laid with care. The best opportunity of the whole life, for acquiring firm principles of virtue, is afforded in youth. Now, if you would try to spend your time usefully to yourself consider, its value, and especially the value of a few of the first years of your life. It may be, too, that these will be your last.

If we divide life into four periods, we shall find it very convenient on some accounts, to contemplate each period by itself. Each of the portions is, in some respects, different from the others. Childhood has pleasures and privations, which belong only to itself. Youth has those which do not belong to childhood. Manhood keeps to itself its labors and responsibilities; and old age, its solitary comforts and woes.

In one sense, the whole of human life depends on childhood. That is the beginning of our being, through which all men pass to the following stages of life. The elements of good character, therefore, ought to be combined in childhood. But should this season pass unimproved, the losses of childhood may, sometimes, be almost entirely recovered in youth.

Many young persons feel the loss of parental instruction and discipline. Many were left orphans while very young: and their education may have been committed to unfaithful or unskilful hands. Or, perhaps, their parents neglected them, and now, in their first years of reflection, they find themselves without knowledge, without good principles, on the contrary, with very bad habits. But let no such youth despair. He can give to his knowledge of youth, what he could not acquire in childhood; and it may even be that he will be better prepared for the duties of life, if he has been compelled to acquire the knowledge required for it by dint of his voluntary exertions. He may acquire a good character in youth, which the misdeeds of an ill spent childhood will not tarnish. He may form good habits, and make himself, in all respects, as good, and honorable, and useful, as though his childhood had enjoyed the best advantages. But it depends on himself, and if he has his youth, he cannot get it back in manhood. Yours cordially,

CHARLES CRAYON.

New Mail Arrangement.—Mail cars constructed under the directions of the Post Office department are now running on the railroads between Washington and Philadelphia. They contain two apartments; one appropriated to the accommodation of the great mails, and the other to the way mails, and a Post Office Agent. The latter compartments is fitted up with boxes, labelled with the names of all the small Offices on or near the the rail road lines. It has also a letter-box in front, into which letters may be put up to the moment of starting the cars, and say where on the road.

The agent of the Post office department attends the mail from the Post Offices at the ends of the route, and sees it safely deposited in his car. As soon as the cars start, he opens the letter box and takes out all the letters, marking them so as to designate the place where they are put in. He then opens the way mail bag, and distributes its contents into the several boxes. As the cars approach a post Office, the Agent takes out the contents of the proper box and puts them into a pouch. The engineer slackens the speed of the train, and the Agent hands the pouch to the Post master, or carrier, who stands beside the track to take it, receiving from him, at the same time, another pouch, with the matter to be sent from that office. This the agent immediately opens and distributes its contents into the proper boxes. Having supplied thus all the way Offices, the Agent, when arrived at the end of the route, sees the mail safely delivered into the Post office.

The mail leaves Washington at 6 o'clock, A. M. All letter-writers should, if possible, put their letters into the Post office the preceding evening. The letter box at the cars will not be open until after 5 o'clock in the morning. It is not a Post office; and letters will not be received at it while the post office is open. Its object is to allow all persons, until the last moment before departure, to send letters by mail, even although the mail has been closed at the post office and even placed in the cars.

The letter box will be open after the mail closes in the post office at Baltimore, and all the intermediate points. Philadelphia cannot at present enjoy its advantages fully, because the cars do not run into the city.

In this arrangement the Post Office Department has sought to give the greatest security to the mails, and to afford the community the best possible accompodation. Well executed, the plan must be almost the perfection of mail arrangement. It is intended when it can be conveniently done, to extend a similar arrangement through to New York.

Burning of Breckenridge's Magazine in Petersburg Virginia!—Our "southern brethren" have made a most ridiculous exhibition of their sensitiveness, lately at Petersburg, in the "Old Dominion." Some recent numbers of the Religious and Literary Magazine, published at Baltimore, and edited by Robert J. Breckenridge; contained an article entitled 'A Presbyterian on Bible Slavery,"—which maintained the slavery, as it exists in the United States, has no sanction from the Holy Scriptures. On the reception of the work in Petersburg, the vigilant eye of the Postmaster detected amidst abuse of abolitionists, and eulogies upon Colonization—the obnoxious sentiments set forth with addressed a letter to the Chairman of the Petersburg Committee of Vigilance, pointing out the incendiary document—and enquiring whether the numbers of the Magazine containing it, ought not to be burned publicly, in conformity with the law of the State, in such cases made and provided. After describing the character of the article, he very justly, in our opinion, remarks;

"If the doctrine of the writer be true, who will venture to condemn the conduct of the Abolitionists? If attempts to draw arguments from the Bible to show that slavery is a crying and damning sin?"

Gen. Pegram, Chairman of the Lynch Committee, cites the Act of Assembly, of March 22d, 1836, for the burning of incendiary publications; and decides that inasmuch as the writer in the Magazine "has assailed the property of Masters in slaves, in the most imposing of all modes, by undertaking to prove that it is contrary to the law of God," his article is incendiary, and within the cognizance of the act aforesaid.

Accordingly we learn by the Petersburg Intelligencer, of the 9th inst., that the Magazines, containing the "incendiary" article, "were burned in the streets, by order of the Recorder, and in the presence of some of the most respectable citizens." Comment is unnecessary.

The Steam Frigate &c.—From a letter in the Baltimore Patriot, with the New York date of 20th of March, we make this extract.

The courtesy of Capt. Perry, U. S. N. brother to the immortal hero of the same name, enabled me by a short cruise in the frigate Fulton, on Thursday, to appreciate the value of a steam battery.

One thousand tons burthen, propelled by engines capable of exerting one hundred horse power, moving at the rate of 13 knots an hour, presenting a small surface above water to hostile cannon, armed with 66 pounders, and enabled by the distance at which she can hull an enemy, without exposure to a return fire, she is invulnerable in harbor defence, and if the system is carried out, will render useless further expenditures on fortifications.

From the tremendous propelling force, and a child with his Pebble arm arrested enemy, which is an instant arrested the progress of the enemy's fleet, and brought her to repeated parley.

The Macedonian Frigate got under way with us, and we towed her round the shoals with the ease of a canoe, and described a circle within our own length.

The science displayed by her young engineers was most gratifying. Midshipmen just entering the service of their country are enabled by discipline and experience, imparted by her accomplished commander, to regulate and control this mighty mass, and in no position can our gallant naval officers of all grades be better employed than in this service.

A few months impart knowledge and experience, and when twenty additional steam batteries of increased size, say 1500 tons each, are constructed, our sea coast would be invulnerable.

The beautiful ship Levant lay in the stream. She is one of the largest class of our sloops of war constructed under the supervision of our gallant countryman, Commodore Ridgely, with all the modern improvements, and as a perfect model of Naval architecture, of which the nation may be proud.

From Lyford's Baltimore price Current.

The first Steam Vessel that ever crossed the Atlantic Ocean! is now in port! She is called the "City of Kingston"—is schooner rigged, spreads very large square sail from her foreyard; is in every respect well found and apparently fitted for sea navigation. She is a handsome vessel.

This vessel was built in London about eleven months since; is 225 tons British measurement and her construction long and buoyant, not unlike some of our best steamers on the Atlantic waters. Her wheels and arms are constructed of wrought iron, and her buckets of oak plank, the appearance of the whole being light and neat. She has two low pressure engines, each 50 horse power, and her machinery is fitted of course below. Her cylinders are each 40 inches in diameter, with 4 feet 4 inches stroke—has two boilers, and consumes half a ton of good Liverpool coal every hour—can carry 65 tons of coal at a time with out inconvenience.

The City of Kingston was intended as a mail packet between Jamaica and Carthagena, and with that object in view, left London, via Madeira. Her run from Plymouth to Madeira was made in seven days, five and a half of which she made under steam, and performed well. Failing in her object after arriving at Jamaica, she left for New York, and put into Norfolk as mentioned in our last. She again left Norfolk for New York but encountering at sea the gale on Saturday and Sunday, and failing in all efforts to succeed with wood or anthracite coal, and the gale continuing, it was deemed advisable to put back and into this port, where she now remains waiting advice, from her consignees in New York.

PROSPECTUS.

In announcing the organization of "The American Common School Society" to the public, it is deemed proper to mention some of the incentives which have led to the first step of the Association, and to explain briefly, the proposed plan for the accomplishment of its purposes.

The paramount importance of popular education in this country, is so very obvious, that no one can be found, to question it; and the least consideration of the strong and various claims which it has upon the philanthropist, the christian and the patriot, must stimulate all to enquire, how can the system of common schools be extended and rendered more beneficial.

It is believed that nineteen-twentieths of the American people obtain at common schools all the large portion of the children of our widely extended Republic, are destitute of the knowledge even of primary schools; and yet these children are to enjoy the same political privileges that we do, and to exert the same influence for good or for evil, upon the institutions of our country. What but education, then, can protect these from the sinful impositions of the demagogue?

The Society proposes to devote its energies to the improvement and extension of Primary school throughout the United States; and in thus adopting for its exertion, a field commensurate with our whole country, it will keep itself aloof from all sectional and minor influences that would circumscribe its usefulness.

A cheap monthly newspaper will be published, which will contain the laws of the several states, providing for the support and regulation of schools —Reports of successful schools and systems of instruction in the United States, and also in foreign countries—drawings of model school houses communications of literary men on kindred subjects, and earnest appeals to parents, teachers, pupils and school inspectors, to co-operate in elevating the standard of common school education.

To offer premium for good School books which may be printed and sold by the agents of the society.

To communicate with auxiliary societies and correspondents, for the collection of facts and for the distribut on of information; and to arouse attention by public lectures on the subject.

To open an office in the city of New York, where all books and information relative to schools, in this as well as in foreign countries, may be collected, and be accessible to inquirers —and where all the publications of the society and other approved books on education may be purchased.

Mr. Senator Tallmadge writes to Mr. R. Riker, of N. Y. concerning the Sub Treasury bill as follows.

Mr. Wright, in his speech at the extra session said "For himself, he agreed with the view of this matter which he understood to be honorable cotemporaries to take, that in case the deposites were confined to the safe keeping of the officers of the government, it was a question of much less interest to the banks than seems to be generally supposed. If the banks were not made the depositories, it could not be supposed their rates, if made receivable would be retained for any length of time in safe keeping. It would be a necessary result of this mode of keeping the public funds, that all bank notes received me at be presented at short intervals for payment; and he could not see that it would be very valuable favor to the banks, as a permanent system, to receive their notes merely for the purpose of immediate presentment and payment." At the present session Mr. Wright said, that the banks must continue to be received in payment of the public dues, and the depositories are directed, in as that case they undoubtedly would be, to call frequently and at short intervals for the balances against the banks and to demand specie for those balances, this must operate as a powerful check upon all the banks in the vicinity of those depositories where the collections are large."

From the above quotations, and from the manner in which they come, I trust there can be no longer any doubt upon the public mind, as to the manner in which the Sub-Treasury bill, if it shall become a law in its present shape, will be carried into effect—and I leave it to the judgment of every rational man to say, whether the receipt of the notes of specie paying banks under such regulations, and under the discretionary power claimed by the Executive, is not far worse than the positive and absolute receipt of gold and silver only? In the latter case, the banks would only have the amount of their notes to be brought upon from them, and deposited in these Sub-Treasury vaults, by which they would be disabled to extend those accommodations to which the mercantile community is entitled. In the former, it would subject them to the same inconvenience by the presentment of their notes for specie, and put it in the power of the Executive to pull down or build up any bank he pleased, from the manner in which he could accumulate its bills if in contact to do business, and suddenly present them for specie at the same remark is also applicable to Mr. Calhoun's proposition, whilst bank notes are received, by which one sixth was to be received in specie the first year, and so on till the whole receipts of the public revenue should be in gold and silver. Who can fail to see that, under such a system, every bank throughout the country may be destroyed, and all those evils, which have been so fully depicted, during the discussion of the question, inflicted on the community. It is in fact establishing a gold and silver currency, for officers and contractors of government, and leaving the people at the mercy of the Executive or the secretary of the Treasury. The banks cannot resume or continue specie payments, if they continue to do business under such a system. Nay, they cannot live but by executive clemency.

The great evil consists in the adoption of the sub-treasury system in any form. That done, all others follow. There is no way in which the objections to its adoption can be overcome. I hope the country will not be deceived by the pretended boon to the banks. It was right to strike out the specie clause, if we could, because that was giving a blow which destroyed that latitudinarity it had, and left it in a shape in which it was hoped none would seriously think of passing it.

It contains powers which lead directly to an unmitigated despotism of opinion. You have not failed to see, in reference to the progress of the measure, the dangerous extent of executive influence. You can scarcely imagine the means which may follow the exercise of the additional powers now sought to be conferred by this bill on that department of the government. Away then with the whole system—away with these vaults and safes, these bars and bolts. Let the Government deposite its funds in sound institutions, and let there be received the notes of such banks as the deposite banks will agree to credit to the government as cash. Let the government then make its drafts on those depositories, and let the holders draw such currency as they desire.

I am utterly astonished at the manner in which this measure is attempted to be forced upon con-

---

We have received from the collector of the revenue in gold and silver be so essential for the general government, why is it not equally so for every state government? The same argument would apply in the one case as in the other.—What would be said to such a proposition in the state of New York? I believe it was entertained at Tammany Hall. But what would the people of the state say to it. It is scarcely necessary to voice or a vote with the one or the other. Who is there who would require our canal tolls, auction and salt duties, and our taxes to be collected in specie? Such a law, if it were passed could not be enforced. The same remark is applicable to every state in the Union. And I say what is good enough for the states, and the people of the states, is good enough for the general government. I hope then, the community will not be deceived as to the character of this bill.—It does not contain a single mitigating feature. I trust it will be resisted, or any thing like it, in all the stages of its progress, until the people of the will be compelled to abandon his scheming, and return to a system based on sound principles, and sanctioned by experience.

There is no occasion to despond. The spirit here is good. We are in earnest, and our resolution is fixed and firm. Let but the people have an opportunity to see this matter in its true light, and an end will be put ere long to those pernicious and dangerous projects.

Very respectfully yours,
N. P. TALLMADGE.

The Life Preserver.—This is the title of No. XVII of Sargent's Pamperance Tales. The story is short being an alluring description, by an old tar, of the shipwreck of a steam ship in consequence of the incapacity and intoxication of the commander, and unseaworthiness of the vessel. In a word it is a brief sketch of the loss of the Home, steam packet, between New York and Charleston.

The Louisville Herald says that the steamer Ben Franklin arrived at that place on the 19th, in 7 hours, 55 minutes from Cincinnati.—Distance, 150 miles.

The letter of Dr. Channing to Henry Clay on the annexation of Texas, has been republished in a pamphlet in Mexico. The Diario, the Government paper, calls it a precious document, and extols it in most enthusiastic language.

Infant Philosophy.—"Mother," said an urchin, "may I go to the theatre?" "No." "Well, didn't you go when you were little?" "Yes, but now I see the folly of it." "Well, mother, I want to see the folly of it too."

Irish Notions.—The British ship Dolphin, arrived in New York last week, with twenty puncheons of whiskey, 409 barrels of oat meal, and 2100 casks of potatoes.

The London packets lately arrived, have brought out the following amounts of gold, in sovereigns:

Ship Toronto,	$96,000
Ship Ontario,	96,000
Ship Westminster,	146,000
	$338,000

Outrage on the American Flag.—The Mexican blockading squadron had arrived off the Brazos, (Texas,) on the 24 ult. The steam packets Columbia, Capt. Wright, was chased by a brig and a ship of war, on her way from Velasco to New Orleans, though the American flag was flying. The publisher statement of the passengers states that when about 10 miles from Velasco, the brig sent across her starboard bow, hoisted the Mexican flag, and at a little more than musket shot distance, fired a gun loaded with grape and ball, which passed within a short distance; shortly after another gun with grape and canister, which passed close under her bow; the ship at the same time hoisted her colors, and fired a ball which fell on the starboard side: the brig again fired with grape and canister, evidently aiming at the colors, as one of the shrouds connecting them with the mast were cut through, and the flag at the same time perforated by the ball. Although lying perfectly still, the engineering stopped, and within 40 or 50 yards of the brig, these acts of hostility were manifested. Capt. Wright demanded what they wanted of him. They replied, We want your papers. Capt. W. rejoined come and get them and if you fire another shot at me I'll blow you to hell. Immediately three muskets with buck and slug were fired at him as he stood alone by the wheel house on the forward deck. At that instant, the engineer let the steam partially escape, which from its strange and extraordinary noise to those brave Mexicans, caused one and all, with a solitary exception, to fall upon their faces apprehending, (as supposed,) that upon them he had uttered previously.

Thus ended this encounter, and Capt. Wright proceeded on his way.

Much excitement exists at Norfolk in consequence of the discovery of a runaway negro on board the English brig Charity, just as she was about to sail for Barbadoes. One of the pilots revealed the fact and a posse found the negro secreted among staves, and rescued him. The Capt. (Hisbert,) is now in custody, and the brig is in the hands of the sheriff. It is a serious offence against the laws.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, April 11.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Congressional.—The proceedings of Congress for the past week have been singularly uninteresting. Nothing of moment has occurred in either house. The late duel occupied the attention of the Senate on Thursday and Friday, and on Saturday it did not sit. The House was engaged on Thursday with the Navy appropriation bills and on Friday and Saturday, with private business.

The death of Mr. McKim, a member of the House from Maryland, which occurred at his lodgings, at Washington, on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, was announced to both houses on Monday. The funeral services were performed in the Hall of the House, at 11 A. M. on Tuesday, after which the procession moved to the rail road depot, and thence to Baltimore.

The House resolved on Wednesday, to meet hereafter at 11. Mr. Wise failed to obtain leave to present a resolution against the Exploring expedition.

On Thursday, April 5th, a bill establishing a Criminal court in the District of Columbia, passed the Senate; the Anti-Duelling Bill was then taken up.

In the House, Jos. Folansbee was elected door keeper, in the place of Mr. Carr, deceased, on the 6th ballot. The house then concurred in the bill from the Senate, for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government

During the week, many memorials against the parties in the late duel, from several parts of the country, and several of them requiring that all concerned should be expelled, were presented. In the Senate debate on the Anti-Dueling Bill, the abhorrence of the dueling system seems universal, and the debate is continued to devise the best means of preventing it in future.

Connecticut Election.

Full returns have been received of this important election, which is now a complete revolution in the state politics, in favor of the Whig party.—The total Whig majority in the state is over 4000—the whig gain since last year, the Newark Daily says, is 6,813 votes. 4,700 more votes were polled than last year.

The Senate now stands, 18 whigs and 3 Van Buren men—the Assembly, 154 Whigs, 50 Van Buren men, and 10 Conservatives. Last year, the Senate stood 7 Whigs and 14 Van Buren,—the Assembly, 85 whigs to 121 V. B. A complete turn-over.

A letter from Senator Tallmadge to Mr. Riker of New York, on the passage of the Sub treasury Bill, will be found in our columns. It is a little too much on one side, altogether to please us, but was inserted by the request of a friend whom we are always happy to oblige.

Mr. Ed. Robinson, a whig, has been elected member of Congress, from Mr. Culley's district in Maine, by a majority of 166. Robinson received 4,113 votes, M'Crate, (Van Buren,) 3,430; scattering, 497. It has long been a closely contested district.

Resumption of Specie Payments.—It appears that the Philadelphia, Boston and Providence Banks have all concluded it inexpedient to resume specie payments with the New York banks —New-York, must therefore resume alone. In that case, it is considered certain that the State government will fully sustain them, by a loan of eight or ten millions of the New York Internal Improvement State Stocks: this we are very glad to see. When the banks of the country generally, will resume, it is difficult to foresee—but we fear it will not be this year, or the next.

France has acknowledged the independence of the Republic of Hayti, in the West Indies, and a treaty has just been concluded between them, by which the latter has agreed to pay France, 60,000,000 francs, as Indemnity money, at the rate of 1,500,000 francs per year.

Monday before last, 2d inst. was the day appointed for the steam packet Sirius to leave Cork on the southern coast of Ireland, for New York. Her owners anticipate that she will arrive on Tuesday or Wednesday next. If she arrives, as expected, it will be the commencement of a new era in navigation.

The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, and the Gazette, the two oldest papers in the city, have been united into one. The Gazette has been in existence 50 years.

The Baltimore Gazette and the Baltimore Patriot have also been united, and the paper is hereafter to be called "Baltimore Patriot, and Commercial Gazette."

Public Meeting

ON THE SUB TREASURY BILL.

At a meeting of the citizens of the township of Westfield, called pursuant to notice, to all the legal voters of the township, and held at Barr's Hotel, Scotch Plains, on the 3d day of April inst. Recompense Stansbury, was appointed Chairman and Zachariah Webster, Secretary.

The object of the meeting being to express the opinion of the township upon the Sub-Treasury bill now pending in Congress, it was resolved that a committee of 3 be appointed to draft resolutions to that effect; whereupon John Wilson, John Randolph, and Abraham Runyon were chosen.

The committee, after conferring together, reported the following resolutions, which were separately considered, and adopted without a dissenting voice.

Resolved, as the sense of this meeting:—

1st. That a well regulated Banking system is of great advantage to all classes of the community, but more especially to enterprising industrious men of small capital; and that any measure of the Government tending to cripple or break down the banks in the several States with the chimerical pretence of giving the country hard money currency, will be sure to entail distress and ruin on the great mass of our citizens, and will favor none but office holders, and those already independently rich.

2. That the present distress in every branch of business, and the multiplied disorders of the currency, we believe to be the unavoidable and legitimate fruits of the fiscal experiments of the late Executive; and which were long ago predicted by the opponents to his daring acts in seizing upon the treasures of the Nation.

3. That the sub treasury bill now pending in Congress, should it become a law, will tend to prostrate the State banks or place them so much under the control of the administration as to unite in its own hands the sword and the purse of the Nation;—which new "Experiment" if it should succeed will make it the master instead of the servant of the people; and will increase to an alarming extent the power and patronage of the President, and put into his hands greater means and incentives to corruption than has ever been possessed by any President of the U. States.

4. That all our experience since we were a nation goes to prove that the only sure way to secure a uniform currency, and fair rates of exchange is by a well regulated National Bank: and that therefore the National Government will best promote the general welfare by establishing such an institution without delay.

5. That Garret D. Wall, one of our Senators in supporting the Sub-Treasury Bill contrary to the known will of the Legislature and the people of New Jersey, has proved himself unfaithful to the trust reposed in him, and that he is not a faithful servant of the people, and therefore unworthy of the confidence they have given.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Samuel L. Southard, our Senator in Congress, and to John B. Ayerigg, one of our Representatives in the lower House, with the request that they present them to their respective houses.

It was also resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Plainfield Union, and Newark Daily Advertiser.

RECOMPENSE STANSBURY, Ch'n.
ZACHARIAH WEBSTER, Sec'y

The bill to authorize private banking passed the Committee of the Whole, and was ordered to a 3d reading in the N. Y. Assembly on Tuesday. A motion to require every private banking Association to keep on hand an amount of Specie equal to 10 pr. ct. on the amount of its issues, was lost 47 to 45—No specie is required to be kept on hand. The security for the redemption of bills may be built mortgages.—the rest must be Stocks of this State or the United States. The minimum of capital is fixed at $100,000. No maximum is named.

It is expected to become a law.

The business on the Morris and Essex Railroad has increased to such an extent that the Directors, at a meeting last week, resolved to put on another locomotive and train of cars to start from Newark at the same hours they do from this Town. Farmers for miles distant find it more to their advantage to put their produce on the cars and take to Newark rather than to proceed with their teams; and the return cars are heavily laden with merchandise, not only for our own Town, but merchants at a distance. A few days since we saw on a car 11 barrels of eggs and 163 dozen pigeons bound for New York, and the residue of the load made up with "sundries for a market."—Jerseyman.

Disturbance among the Osage Indians.—The St. Louis, (Missouri,) Republican of the 24th of March states that a band of Sioux and Osage Indians in a state almost of starvation, came into the settlements in Bates county, 16 miles above Harmony mission, and applied to a Mr. Dodge for the purchase of corn. Dodge warned them off, and in the night the Indians killed a number of hogs. On the following day 16 of the settlers went armed to the Osage Camp and a regular battle ensued, which lasted all night, when the whites returned home, with their wounded, two in number.

In the House of Representatives, Mr. Randolph of this state, has made a report from the Agricultural Committee, recommending the appropriation of 5000 dollars a year for national collections of Seeds and plants, and the establishment of an agricultural depository in the patent office, at Washington, under the charge of the Commissioner of Patents—the Commissioner to distribute the seeds and plants gratuitously. The report enforces the propriety of more attention to the agricultural interest of the nation forming, as it does the basis of all our prosperity.

The U. S. and Mexico are in unfortunate relations. Each vehemently complains of the other determined upon injustice. If Mexico was prepared for a war with us, we should certainly have it; and we do not see how a rupture is to be avoided at any rate. The Mexican government evinces great jealousy and dislike of us.

If a man cheats me once, shame on him; if he cheats me twice, shame on me.

A Monstrous.—A Pennsylvania paper says that a living infant was found a few days since, upon the track of the Norristown Rail Road, so soon as that the boy should necessarily crush it! It was providentially discovered by the engineer in time to stop the cars. The monster of a parent had not been discovered.

The following are amongst the laws passed at the last session of the Ohio Legislature;

"To repeal an act to prohibit the circulation of small bills. To abolish imprisonment for debt. —To repeal an act prohibiting the establishment within this State of any branch, office, or agency of the Bank of the U. States." &c.

Our Currency.—We are getting into a very good condition in this respect. The Eastern bank notes are much better and fewer than they were, while the little bills of our own banks are getting quite plenty. With the exception of two or three banks in Vermont, the notes of the United States Bank are now at a greater discount than any others which pass.

Newspapers now so common and so cheap, are only, it seems, about 300 years old, England having given birth to one in 1642. They are mighty engines now for good or for evil, and are overturning kingdoms, principalities and powers, and diffusing light, religion, liberty and law.—They are at the same time, perverted to the basest and most destructive purposes.

New potatoes of this year's growth have been served this season at the United States Hotel, at Frederick, Md.

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY, ON THE HOLY BIBLE,

BY MR. JENKS, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the whole will be delivered.

TERMS.—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work.

From W. C. Brownlee:—"Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott, and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose this work by Dr. Jenks. The grand and precious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited. It is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private reading.—and is particularly applicable to the wants of S. S. school teachers and Bible classes."

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, maps and well exec ted cuts, all designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We earnestly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a 'goodly pearl,' which every devout man should seek to posses in his family.

Susscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—his well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

Take Notice.

AS I have taken wholly upon myself the Lower Mills in Plainfield, which is now leased by George Wells, and has been formerly occupied by Wm. Wells, it is my expectation to attend to Customer work particularly. Those favoring me with their custom will be thankfully received and punctually attended to. It is my expectation to keep constantly on hand a full supply of good quality, and of all kinds for sale for cash.

As the public well know, or I am well aware myself of the difficulty attending keeping flocks or trusting, and as promises are as fashionable with some of paying today as to-morrow, and to-morrow never comes with them, I am determined to sell for cash or to exchange for grain.

It is my expectation to be found at or near the Mill at all times and reasonable seasons, Seventh Day excepted, as I consider that day to be the Sabbath, and intend to observe it as such. PHINEAS RANGOLPH.

Ploughs.

AS the season is drawing nigh, when ploughs are wanting, I will take this method to inform the farmer that it is thought by the best judges that I have made some valuable improvements on the self-sharpening plough in the following particulars:—The long and perfect shaped mould board will break the sod less than any plough now in use, and of course will run lighter,—the steel bar that forms the point is a great saving, to which the coulter or mouth valued in part.

The above described ploughs will be left for sale at the store of Berry & Dunham, Plainfield.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 3d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, illistinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

English Studies, Common branches, per qr.	$2 to $4.00
Higher branches,	6.00
Studies preparatory to a Collegiate Course,	7.00
Collegiate Studies,	10.00
Modern Languages as extra charge.

Tuition bills of all pupils from abroad to be paid in advance.

No deduction for absence, except at the option of the Principal.

Scholars can board with the teachers for $2 25 per week, including washing, ordinary fuel and lights.—Boarders must furnish their own beds and bedding.

N. M. DEXTER, } Associate
HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in Maynard, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass., Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs. Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—to which is well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

ALLEN WILSON, Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions; and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic motion in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and pancreas or secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize and aterial action—and to aid all the different organs of digestion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at their Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY

At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to be known by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for Good or Evil. We believe its principles intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservatism of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any useful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired

All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts; embellished with magnificent and costly engravings in steel, copper and wood —and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents employed expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c. and a delightful variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume: Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and selections from periodicals abroad will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Ild Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Re-Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. — No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following beautifully written communication is from the Morristown Jerseyman.

Poor Trait of a Distinguished Character.

Lawrence McFiggin was the lawful appellation of a man who was endowed with a more than ordinary share of assurance; he was in fact fairly saturated and dripping with the oil of impudence.

Larry, (by which favorite diminutive he was most generally known) always bore upon his skull a thrifty crop of bumps, which alike engaged the attention of the physician and the phrenologist; one maintaining that they were the natural effects, while the other as strenuously asserted that they were the principal causes of this his extraordinary stock of audacity.

Larry became early attached to a maxim inculcating rather a questionable moral, namely, "Policy is the best Honesty," and which, without a moment's discussion he appropriated to his own particular use. He did not, however, at all times give this apothegm its most rigid construction; for when he considered it politic to do so, he would bear the precept about in reversed order; but in general he carried it along like a horse blinder upon both ends forward, which was clearly perceptible when in his daily avocations he was in the habit of pursuing a regular "policy of assurance," which was also honestly enough corroborated by his physiognomy, with a hint as broad as its own auricular expansion.

The occupation upon which he depended for his daily bread, was that of a glazier; and altho' his business called him constantly abroad, yet he was a considerable faculty of making himself at home at all times and places; for diffidence was in fact no part of his profession.

You might often see him plodding along the street with a scrutinizing eye directed towards the windows on either side, and an oblong wooden box depending from his hand containing certain ingredients, consisting of window glass of various sizes—a lump of putty—a quantity of small triangular bits of tin, and such implements of his trade as were adequate to the purpose of mixing up said ingredients with a due proportion of manual labor.

About this time the "great pressure," so remarkable for her urbanity, did not forget to call on Larry and leave her card in the shape of a ragged shinplaster. Economy was the order of the day. Window shutters spontaneously closed; and within doors it seemed as if the dark ages were about recommencing. Rowdies were now becoming sober, and the "wilful breaking" of an honest citizen's windows began to be looked upon as an indiscretion. The servant, heretofore so careless, now no longer poked his heedless mop through a 24 by 30 plate of glass; and Larry now no longer listened to the music as the tinkling fragments fell upon the pavement. His purse was empty—trade was dull, and his heart was disconsolate.

After many an anxious reflection he was convinced, to believe that the hardness of the times was contagious, and had communicated its own durable qualities to the staple commodity in which he dealt. Glass seemed to have lost its fragility, and to have assumed the more pliable properties of leather.

Larry watched with heart-felt interest every random stone that was flying within the scope of his observation; and if one happened to rush towards a window frame, it was sure to meet the surface of the pane at an acute angle and glance off, sometimes for the purpose of making a jingling visit to his own brittle wares.

Amid these scenes of desolation, without a penny in his pocket, or the faintest prospect of reviving trade, Larry was tempted to throw himself back upon his own natural resources; and in a soliloquy that betrayed the philosophical wo king of his heart he was distinctly heard to utter sentiments that clearly evinced a determination on his part to adopt that alternative. "I and my wife and boy, when the circulating medium would have hung to a man by its own weight; but now these greasy skin plasters are so slippery, that to grip one you might as well try to hold a live eel in a tallow chandlers apron. If others won't furnish work, I must even be my own provider. I can find no window to mend unless I break it myself."

Having communed with himself in this portentous manner he turned round and beheld a window of extensive area, behind which were sociably seated several victims of the pressure," who were enjoying the comforts of a public house, by gradually imbibing the contents of a pewter flagon, or more rapidly discharging down their throats a modicum of unadulterated "Cheatley."

This window he immediately patronized: and walking deliberately up to it, he coolly applied his hammer to the center of a pane with a momentum sufficient to achieve his object; and at the same time fitting his face into the jagged aperture he saluted the astonished occupants with the emphatic enquiry of "Do your honors want the broken light mended?" "You broke it yourself you infernal scoundrel!" resounded from the inside.—"I've no time to listen to your impertinence and Larry—"no speculative suggestions if you please, for that is travelling out of the record. The purpose, (continued he) of my present inquiry is to ascertain a mere fact. Do you want the window mended or not?" These words were delivered with a coolness that at once inflamed his auditors. A confused Babylonish utterance of a mass of imprecations proceeded from within; and at the same time a flight of missiles, discharged from the hands of the inmates, and intended for the pate of Larry, (luckily for him, converging into a focus rather short of the mark, and thence diverging again,) made a general destruction of the remaining transparencies

Larry contemplated the fragments with honest satisfaction, as he consoled himself with the fact, that this was none of his performance. "Gentlemen, said he, you are laying out more work than I anticipated; but I thank you, however, in a proportion accordingly."

The uproar now brought the master of the house upon the scene of action, who forthwith proceeded to investigations. Larry, being heard in his own defence, animadverted with becoming severity upon the scurrilous manner in which the gentlemen had evaded his honest inquiries, and successfully appealed to the feelings of the Landlord by pointing out to him the near approach of a regular North-East storm; which point of the compass he quietly indicated by reversing his thumb over his left shoulder; and towards which point also the mutilated window was gaping with a brazen indifference that almost eclipsed even the accomplishments of Larry himself.

The landlord happening to be a man of fine taste, could not but appreciate and constantly enjoy, so rich a specimen of unsophisticated impudence. His soul indeed, upon the contemplation of such superlative effrontery, was inflated with the same enthusiastic admiration that expands the heart of the mineralogist when he becomes newly possessed of some rare and beautiful object; which he intends to be the queen of his cabinet. He therefore, after duly considering the proofs and allegations of the parties, rendered a judgment in favor of Larry, who was accommodated with a lucrative job, subject, however, to an express proviso on that he, the said Larry, should never thereafter presume to be or appear in or about the precincts of said Tenement without the distinct invitation of him, the landlord aforesaid.

Q.

It is stated that the publishers of the Pickwick papers, after paying all expenses, have cleared $50,000.

If Nature be defective, repair it by industry. If rich, be not elated: if poor, be not dejected. If the council be good, no matter who gave it.

Incombustible Wash and stucco White Wash.—The basis for both is lime, which must first be slackened with hot water, in a small tub or pigpan, and covered to keep in the steam; it then should be passed in a fluid form, through a fine sieve, to obtain the flour of the lime, it must be put on with a painter's brush—two coats are best for outside work.

Incombustible Roofs.—To make a fluid for the roof, and other parts of wooden houses, to render them incombustible, and coating for brick, tile, stone work and rough cast to render them impervious to the weather and give them a durable and handsome appearance.

The proportions in each receipt is 5 gallons.

Slack your lime as before directed, buy six quarts into which put one quart of clean rock salt for each gallon of water, to be entirely dissolved by boiling and skimming clean; then add to the five gallons one pound of alum, half a pound of copperas, and three fourths of a pound of pearlash—the last to be gradually added; four quarts of fine sand or hard wood ashes must also be added, and coloring matter may be mixed in such quantity as to give it the requisite shade. It will look better than paint and be as lasting as slate. It must be put on hot. Old shingles must be first cleaned with a stiff broom, when the may be applied. It will stop the small leaks, prevent moss from growing, render them incombustible, and last many years.

Second,—to make brilliant stucco white wash for buildings, inside and out. Take clean lumps of well burnt stone lime; slack the same as before; add one quarter pound of whitening or burnt alum pulverised, one pound of loaf or other sugar, three pints of rice flour, made into a very thin and well boiled paste, starch or jelly, and one pound clean glue, dissolved as calsimine's can. This may be applied cold with its coarse, but warm outside. It will be more brilliant than plaster of paris, and retains its brilliancy for many years, say from 15 to 100. It is superior, looking like it. The east end of the President's house, in Washington is washed with it.—Ohio Farmer.

Mr. Van Buren is conceded on all hands to be a gentleman in his manners, and to conduct the courtesies of his station in a manner above reproach. The Baltimore Chronicle, a staunch whig, thus remarks; "Mr. Van Buren does not think it inconsistent with the proprieties of station to entertain at his table, Messrs. Clay, Webster, and others of his most distinguished opponents. Nor do these gentlemen refuse to cultivate with him those social relations which his character and theirs, as gentlemen, render agreeable and appropriate. The effect of such a spirit spreads itself through the society of the federal metropolis." This is as it should be—for there is no more reason that political differences should become personal enemies, than there is that parties should be discarded with the musket. A general prevalence of this spirit would do more than legal enactments can, to check duelling.—N. Y. Com.

Moral and Religious.

From the Canada Baptist Magazine.

The Consistent Christian.

"Or, the Lord will provide."

Mr. Joseph Hoxie hroper is an excellent Baptist Minister of the last century. When he commenced his labors in Sussex shire, he was compelled to labor for his living in connection with preaching, he was exposed to great opposition. The farmers and tradesmen refused to employ him, but great offence at the frequent religious conversations. They were sorely annoyed in such a spirit of humanity as they, these gentlemen, declared, that they would be obliged him to desist. They were therefore resolved to bodily to use means; and in a friendly manner advised him to leave off exhorting himself, and declaring the villages round his abode of small account, indeed, to succeed, they threatened him, that if he did not comply with their wishes they would take all their work from him and hinted that they had procured another workmen to serve them. Having now seven children, and expecting two more, this was trying occasion; yet he bowed with firmness and propriety, "Gentlemen," said he, "are you pleased with my work?" "Yes," they replied, "we find no fault with that." "And," resumed he, "are my wages reasonable?"—"Yes," they replied, "we are satisfied in these respects; our complaints are of a different nature." "These, gentlemen," continued Mr. Dunscombe, "are the duties which I owe to you, what I conceive God and my own conscience, you have no concern with; God forbid that I should obey you rather than him. The reason of his dismissal, the sacred watchmen, deprived me of the means of obtaining a livelihood, I have no doubt but he will support me and I" seeing him thus determined, his employers called for his books; discharged their bill; took away their work, unfinished as it was; and left him without any visible resource.

Mr. D's confidence in the care of Providence was not disappointed. At first, his thoughts of travelling the country in one place. These suggestions recommended itself to him, by the opportunities which it would furnish him of making known the Gospel. But before he could put the design into execution, an unexpected order from a London gentleman, a perfect stranger, prevented it. He executed the order, received payment for it, and a further order. But other work had then come in, and before he could obtain the goods in London, he accidentally observed the name of his employer in a list of bankrupts, this appeared to him another mode of the care of his heavenly father; why had supplied his wants in the time of need, and prevented him from suffering by this unforseen failure.

This excellent man went on in the path of duty and was honored to be the instrument of raising up numerous Congregations. Indeed, he may be regarded as the founder of the General Baptist Churches in Leicestershire. He lived to a good old age, and was struck with death in the pulpit at Loughborough, while giving out—

"The kind of triumph, lies on high,
There are no fields of battle there;
Lord, I would conquer till I die,
And furnish all the glorious war."

Licensed Taverns a Curse.—At a horse-race in New Jersey a few weeks since, there were drank $1500 worth of ardent spirits, and $6.00 worth of wine; and during the days devoted to it, there was an amount of idleness, wickedness, blasphemy and pollution, which might well make the patriot tremble. A tavern keeper who had reaped largely of the spoils, remarked that he did not approve of such things: "but," said he, "it is necessary for us to get up something of this kind for our support. The ordinary business of tavern-keeping will not sustain us." Here then we have the truth. Our legislatures license tavern-keepers to accommodate the public. The public do not demand or support them; and to sustain themselves, they must get up horse racing, cock-fighting, and every species of wickedness; as not licensed houses then, truly a curse to be done away with!—Jour. Am. Temp. Union.

King Alfred's last advice.—"My son, sit thou beside me and I will deliver thee true instructions. I feel that my hour is coming. My countenance is wan—my days are almost done—I shall go to another world; and thou shalt be left alone in all my wealth. I pray thee, strive to be a father and a lord to thy people. Be thou the orphan's father, and the widow's friend. Cherish thou the poor, and shelter the weak; and with all thy might, right that which is wrong. And so govern thyself by law; Then shall the Lord love thee, my God above all things, shall be thy reward. Call the upon him to advise in all thy need and so shall he help thee the better to compass that which thou would-t.

The bill repealing the law authorizing the licensing of retailers of ardent spirits has passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives, 220 to 164.

Or, A Page from my Port Folio.

Doubtless we are a great and glorious people,
Free, moral, wise religious, and what not;
Enjoying heartily, with other comforts,
Opinions most respectful of ourselves.

Yes, doubtless, we are great, and every hour
Beneath our feet, like a vast mushroom,
There rose one if by magic, in the forest.
And where of late, a troop of tuneful wolves
Howled their wild wood-notes to the midnight moon,
Caper the hopefullyouth, and fiddles squeak.

Our virtuous and enlightened population
Rolls onward like a deluge, scattering wide,
With such commendable, unsparing zeal,
The tawny, two-legged, and inferior vermin,
To dens obscure, and deserts far remote,
To trapper and to squatter, yet unknown.

Yes, doubtless, we're a wise and moral people.
Ask ye for proof? and can ye not perceive
The sense of whiskey that on every gale?
Others may boast their flood-get milk and honey,
Ours may be called a whiskey steaming land.
As flows life's current through the human frame
So coursethese rills meandering, so does whiskey
Flow through our country; but a countless tide;
Resembling more a torrent, than a rill—
Marking its troubled and tumultuous course,
By poverty and crime, disease and death.
We kill the nations off to get the soil,
The soil produces grain, the grain the whiskey,
The whiskey ruin, both to soul and body;
And thus we travel the delightful round:
And many Seers behold who rule the nation,
Wisely decline to tax the precious fluid,
Lest haply they might check the growth of grain,
And raise a frown upon a voter's brow.

Yes, doubtless, we're a free, a Christian people
Holding this truth to be self-evident,
That all men are by Heaven created equal,
Endowed alike with right to liberty.
Behold ye the fact! and have ye ne'er beheld
Upon our public ways, a group of being,
Aye, human being, with immortal souls,
Driven to the market, like a flock to slaughter,
Chained, sold, tanned, mangled at the fiendish discretion
Of worthies, doubtless, of superior nature,
Because enveloped in a paler skin;
The dearest tie the heart can know disavowed,—
The parent parted from her infant treasure,
The fainting maiden torn her lover torn,
And doomed to toil and slavery for ever.

Yes, doubtless, we're a moral, Christian people.
God hath commanded thou shalt do no murder;
He, at whose bidding all things rose from nothing,
And at whose frown would sink again to nought,
And in! forth crawls the important dwellist;
An ornament worn a ring of dust,
And dares in wrath, and trespass on his law.
The curse of Cain is on him—the right hand,
His soul enrimsoned with a brother's blood,
A friend—a boon companion—one with whom
A few short hours before, he had united,
Perhaps in scenes of folly, and of crime:
What then? he mingles with congenial Christians,
Calls himself one, no doubt, and stands prepared
To enact the self-same christian part again.—
Writ him! Never him! Human laws
Were surely not designed for men of honor;
A starving wretch, in the pursuit of plunder,
Commits a murder, and he shall be hanged:
Not so your man of honor—he may kill
Arrange deliberately his mode of murder,
Become an adept by industrious practice,
And boast of his experiness at the trade;
He shall go free—he is a man of honor—
And laws, and those who ought to guard them, sleep.
O yes, no doubt,—we are a Christian people.

SAMUEL G. SMITH.

For the Plainfield Union.

Oft have I climbed the mountain's steep,
And wandered from the haunts of men,
To watch the playful waters leap,
As they traversed the lonely glen.

I've traced Passaic's wandering stream
Through meadows green and woody dell,
Through mountain pass and dark ravine,
Till thundering o'er the rocks it fell.

On the high bank I oft have stood,
Where Genesee's waters pour,
Gazing enraptured on his flood,
And list'ning to his ceaseless roar.

And great Niagara! art thou in truth
A thing of this frail world of ours?
Whence then is thy unchanging youth?
Who feeds thee with eternal showers?

On the rude rock below thine awful steep
With trembling footsteps I have sometimes gone,
And gazing upward how that fearful deep,
Asked whence my foaming floods of waters came.

Wildly they rush from out the distant sky,
And onward! onward! with a thundering sound,
The water spirits shriek as they draw nigh,
And when they leap,—earth trembles round.

FLORIO.

Plainfield, April, 1838.

* To one standing on the rocks some distance below the falls and looking up the rapids, that river actually seems to pour out of the very sky.

Extraordinary Case of Absence of Mind.—The Boston Courier states on good authority that a friend who failed about a year ago, did on Wednesday, take considerable trouble to find two of his old creditors, and without being prompted, except by his own conscience, actually off red them some money for their demands. The relatives will have to keep watch over him, or he will soon squander away what money he has left in the same way.

Newspapers.—The newspapers published in the United States, are computed at 1200—from which 100,000,000 sheets are annually issued.

It is a difficult task to conduct a neutral newspaper. When we commenced the «Herald,» we had the opinions of many influential citizens of both parties, as to the manner of conducting it, all agreed that its columns should be open alike to a free discussion of the most important topics which divided one political sect from another. For one year, (its period elapsed since the Herald came into being) we had endeavored to adhere to the principles laid down in our prospectus by admitting into our columns the views of all writers, without distinction of party, on various subjects.

Our readers well knew, that to edit a neutral paper, was no easy task for us, and that occasionally, we ought be found bearing to a particular side; even for we have deviated from our intended course, we leave them to judge;—at all events we feel conscious that our aim has ever been to conciliate, rather than inflame, party asperity.

During the fall elections we inserted political communications and notices for public meetings as cheerfully for one party as for another; and by reference to our file, it will be seen, that where the whigs occupied a column of the «Herald,» for political purposes, the Van Buren party occupied three! we repeat, all this was done cheerfully, and on our part for the best of purposes, viz. to "conciliate party asperity!" and to render the Herald a welcome visitor to fireside of all.

We were led to pen the above remarks from the fact that an ungenerous feeling has been evinced towards us, by one or two friends to Mr. Van Buren's administration, in relation to the article contained in the last Herald, signed "AN ELECTOR."

We are at a loss to comprehend, why any complaint should be made against us for giving place to "An Elector," (suspected of being a Whig) who asks his fellow citizens in a quarter of a column, to vote for "good men"—when in the same paper we give a column of attack on a whig measure, from the pen of a known influential Van Buren man!

To say the least of such Proscription, it lacks CONSISTENCY!—Rahway Herald.

The Chinese Lady.—Miss Aong Moy, remarkable for the smallness of her feet, who was exhibited through the country about a year ago, is now living in Monmouth county, in a state of seclusion and poverty. The captain of the vessel which brought her to this country, had promised to take her back to China in a year. But after the exhibition on the 4th had ceased to attract the public attention, and to be a source of profit, he carried her to Monmouth county and placed her in the care of a widow woman of very indigent circumstances, living about three miles from Freehold, who, the Monmouth Inquirer says "from her situation and circumstances in life is wholly unable to administer to the comforts, and every day wants of her guest. She is said to be about twenty years of age, and appears to have been brought up in the higher ranks of life, and is intelligent for one but partially acquainted with our language and customs. Her dresses are of a rich and most costly nature, principally silk, and of most curious construction. She says her father was one of the most wealthy and influential men of his country, and appears to have done all in his power to procure her release. On this dissatisfied with her present situation and mode of living—her personal treatment too, we strongly suspect, is not of the most pleasant kind."

This is indeed brutal treatment. How utterly unfeeling and desperate must be the feelings of this deserted creature this stranger in a strange land."

Fun in Canada.—The people of Kingston have been hanging and burning in effigy several of the leading patriot rebels and the last Kingston Cronicle is garnished with a gallows cut, and the names of Mackenzie, Molesworth, Grote, Hume, Leader, Roebuck, and Papineau dangling in the frame. "The 'great sympathiser,' Uncle Sam is not deemed worthy a place among vagabonds, and is therefore sitting up outside! The placards and labels are capital and the whole conceit is in excellent Tory taste. We have no doubt our neighbors across the line feel quite comfortable since the exhibition, and we assure them brother Jonathan enjoys a hearty laugh at the ridiculous figure they cut in elevating him in the world.—Clearel and Her.

The house of Mrs. Ann Eliza Randolph, at New Market, four miles from this city, together with the barn, waggon house and two barracks of hay, were destroyed by fire on Friday last. Part of the furniture of the dwelling was saved. The disaster was occasioned by some boys carelessly setting fire to loose hay, which communicating to the barn, soon enveloped all the buildings on the premises. Our informant states that there was no insurance upon the property. Loss estimated at about $1000.—N. B. Times.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

Messrs. Editors:—As you in a measure are pledged to admit that "in proper courses," you should sometimes give your readers a display of both sides of the political questions now agitating the community; one of the most prominent of which is that relative to currency and exchange, you will oblige a subscriber by inserting the following editorial extract from the Journal of Commerce of yesterday in regard to the course adopted by Mr. Biddle in the great curre cy question—

Curtailing Bank Loans.—We are sorry to learn that Mr. Biddle has time bonds to be protested for non payment. He refuses either to give specie or drafts on New York.—to give anything in fact but notes of the old Bank of the U. States, for which now nobody is responsible; and which by his own mismanagement he has depreciated 4½ per cent. We do not think this is the man to teach New York either morals or etiquette, and surely he is not the man to borrow more money of our citizens.

A barn belonging to Matthias Brant, of Union, in this county, was burnt last week with a quantity of hay and other property, by a spark from a heap of burning brush.

SHOCKING!—The wife of Mr. Jacob Van Arsdale, a resident of Hillsborough township, in this county, was burned so badly on Wednesday last as to cause her death in about eleven hours after the event. The circumstances as reported us, are as follows:—The old gentleman and his wife, (the former rising 70, and the latter 60 years of age) had been trading at the store of Messrs. Wortman & Beekman, at the Millstone Basin, and upon getting into the waggon seat, he put the pipe into a basket containing some cotton. Before proceeding three hundred yards the cotton in the basket was in a flame, which communicated with the clothing of the woman and before any efforts of herself or her husband could extinguish the fire, she was burned most shockingly from her neck to her feet. She was taken to a house in Millstone, and received every attention, but after ten hours of most excruciating agony she expired. The accident occurred about 1 o' clock P. M. Mr. Van Arsdale, in his efforts to help his wife, had his hands most severely injured, and also one of his legs. We are told that one finger was burned entirely off. He is not thought to be out of danger.—Som. Messenger.

Fires.—The my tery which has prevailed for several weeks with regard to the frequent and unusual occurrence of fires in our town has at length been solved. Robert Van Horn, Wm. Stockton and Amos Day, all men of color, were apprehended on Thursday last, and on examination before Elias W nans Esq., confessed that they had participated in firing Nathan Sayre's Barn; the Mallleable Iron Foundry, which was burned to the ground, a Dwelling house in Race street, which was discovered in time to be extinguished without material damage; Mrs Paterson's Barn's one of which was burnt down with a quantity of hay; Julius F. Shield's Flax Factory; a shop belonging to Wm. Ross, and a barn belonging to Elihu Mitchell. Also, a House belonging to Capt. Williamson. We learn that the pieces of a box which were used in the attempt to fire the last mentioned building, led to the discovery of one of the offenders, and his confession implicated the others. These pieces were collected and united (the fire applied to them having expired without ignition) in the form in which they were before they have been split apart, and when united, the pieces from which they had been broken was found on the premises where one of the offenders lived. This circumstance led to his arrest and confession. We fear that the guilty have not all been brought to justice.—On the evening of the examination, and while the negroes above named were in custody, a Carpenter's shop at the Point was entirely destroyed by fire, with the kitchen attached to Capt. Degroot's house, adjoining the shop. The dwelling was barely saved by the stenuous exertions of our firemen and citizens, who promptly repaired to the scene of conflagration. The torch of the incendiary is supposed to have caused the mischief.—Elizabeth Jour.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, April 6.

Mr. Wright asked leave of the Senate, in behalf of the committee on Finance, to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject of the currency. The request was granted, and the memorials were all laid upon the table.

The Anti-dueling bill was then taken up.

In the house, Mr Fairfield presented a number of petitions in relation to the late' duel.

Saturday, April 7.

The Senate did not sit.

The hon. J. M. Patton, from Virginia, having received a state office, resigned his seat in the house.

Mr. Hamer, of Ohio, presented a resolution in the house, setting forth that some of the banks have expressed a desire to resume specie payments, and declaring that "it will be the duty of the government, in the late of its constitutional authority, to aid such banks in regaining public confidence and to sustain them in their laudable effort to fulfil their obligations. It was ordered to be printed: and the board of claims occupied the remainder of the session.

Monday, April 9.

After the presentation of petitions, the anti-duelling bill was taken up. Mr. Clay spoke in favor of the bill, when the punishment of death was stricken out, and from five to six years imprisonment in the penitentiary as substituted therefor. The bill then passed, 31 to 1, Mr. Sevier.

The bill for graduating the price of the public lands was postponed to Wednesdy next.

A bill making an appropriation for roads in Michigan, was rejected, 23 to 19.

The Navy appropriation bill occupied the day, during which Mr. Hoffman ex-guard advocated the Exploring Expedition, in the house.

Tuesday, April 10.

The Senate adopted a resolution, calling on the Navy Department for information to enable the senate to determine what fortifications might be dispensed with, and whether a system of defence by the aid of steam batteries would not be more economical and efficient than the present system.

In the House, the bill from the senate to suppress dueling was referred to the committee of investigation.

The Navy appropriation bill was taken up, and after considerable debate it was ordered to be engrossed.

Wednesday, April 11.

In Senate, a debate arose respecting our relations with Mex co. Mr. Clay then spoke in opposition to the bill, graduating the price of the public lands.

In the House, the Navy bill, including the provision for the Exploring expedition, passed.

The bill authorizing the banks to to issue post notes payable twelve months shed and extending their issues from the limitations of the suspension act to once and a half their capitals respectively, passed the New York Assembly on Tuesday. It allows the city banks to issue three fourths of their capital in post notes and those in the country one half.—The rate of interest on such notes must not exceed 3 per cent. The time during which they may be issued, is limited to two years.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, April 18.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

The Resumption of Specie Payments.—This appears to be the subject of engrossing interest at present, and many movements have of late occurred by no means calculated to allay it. New York is still firm in the purpose of resuming in May, though it is probable no other states will upon follow her example. Mr. Biddle, President of the Pennsylvania bank of the U. S. who appears to be the leader of the banks of that city, has addressed a long letter to John Q. Adams, which fills five columns in the Nat. Gazette, in which he gives his reasons why he does not now resume himself, and why he thinks it inexpedient for the banks to attempt a resumption at present, though he says he is fully able. He says none of the causes which produced the suspension has yet been removed, and while they continue in full force, the banks should hold their present position.

This letter is of course looked upon in a very different light by the two parties, and especially by the editors of the two cities, as will be seen by the extracts given below. For ourselves, we have read the letter carefully, and were not convinced that it is inexpedient, at this time, to resume. Some of the statements of the letter we think to be false, and some of the arguments without weight. For instance: he says all the causes of the suspension remain in full force—we always supposed the principal cause of the suspension to be our debt of $60,000,000 to Europe, and over importation; the debt is liquidated, and importation has ceased for a year back, exchange is in our favor, and one of the greatest causes of the suspension done away. Again,—Mr. Biddle says it is idle to talk of resuming until the Government ceases its hostility to the banks,—we do not believe there is any hostility of this kind existing, the administration, whatever may be said against them, are not such fools as to be hostile to the resuming banks. He ackowledges that he is able to resume,—we think he should then, inasmuch as it is the duty of all to pay their honest debts as soon as they have the ability.

One reason why the banks should resume is, that specie is now only ½ or 1 per cent. premium and it would seem that those banks can pay specie, which can pay at all.—In looking over the reasons given by Mr Biddle for his not now resuming, we guess he has omitted one very important one, and that is, his hostility to the Government.

As many may think differently from ourselves on this subject, we proceed here to give the opinion of several of the leading journals.

The sentiments of the Newark Daily we have not been able to gain, resigned his seat in the house. We have carefully perused it.

The Frudonian says:

We have on hand an admirable letter from Mr Biddle to John Quincy Adams, explanatory of the reasons why, in his opinion, the Banks cannot now permanently resume specie payments, and why they ought not to attempt it. It is in our mind, conclusive. None of the causes, he says, which made the suspension necessary, have been removed; and many of them have increased in power. The war against the Banks is more active and vindictive than ever; and the clamor about bank notes propagated by the government has been deeply spread throughout the country, until what was at first a passing pantry, has settled into an implacable hostility." He considers the Banks in New York in a false position—acting upon false pride, and false principles—and curtailing the very community which they are bound by the most solemn obligations to sustain But, if New York will sacrifice herself, she has no right to expect that other states will follow her example.

The New York American says:

Returned this morning from Albany, we think it right to say, at once, that the Legislature is resolute, and in our judgement, wisely resolute, not to extend an instant of the time of resuming specie payments by our Banks. They know the condition of the banks to be now good and able, and they will not consent, from any considerations of temporary expediency—if, indeed, it were far more certain than it is, that even temporary expediency would sanction such a course—to hazard present, absolute ability, for the possibility of greater ability hereafter.

As to support from the Legislature, the community will not ask in vain. We say the community because the banks are, at any rate, secure solely, resume and maintain their resumption. But the public confidence would be increased by the certainty of the State's support, and that will not be withheld.

The Gazette:

It had the effect yesterday, to depress the sales of the United States Bank in the market from ¼ to 1 per cent below Saturday's prices; and to increase the discount on United States Bank notes to 4 1-2 per cent below New York paper. The rates of discount on Southern Exchange were also considerably increased, and few buyers at the advanced rates, as the general belief is that they will be still further increased. Stocks generally were higher than on Saturday, the advance averging from 1-2 to 1 per cent.

The Express:

The latter caused quite a sensation, and adds that it is generally admitted by practical uninterested business men that in facts and arguments cannot be controverted, and that a further delay in the resumption would tend very materially to keep down the great differences in domestic exchanges.

The Courier says it is

A very able and satisfactory letter, and anticipates certain, wide spread, and inevitable evil as the result of a present attempt to resume.

The Journal of Commerce thus speaks of the letter, and of resumption:

We find in the National Gazette a letter from N. Biddle, addressed to the Hon. John Quincy Adams, announcing the intention of the Bank of the United States not to resume specie payments in May, or at any time now to be named. The reasons of Mr. Biddle are false and dangerous to the country and himself, and ruinous to both if persisted in. The letter seeks to make politics of the question, and says the banks cannot resume while the government remains hostile. Mr. Biddle seems to have forgotten his declaration at the time of suspension, that he would go on to strengthen himself and be ready to take the lead in resumption. The government may be hostile to the Banks for aught we know, and probably is to the U. S. Bank. But under present circumstances, the hostility of the President is an inoperative and impotent as that of Job Haskell, and we have no doubt that if any party attempts to sustain the Banks or Mr. Biddle in the doctrines of his letter, the people will bury them so deep under the mountains of public indignation that the sun shine will never visit them again. It is idle to sophisticate the subject. The state of New York understands it, and so do the people at large. Specie was deposited in large sums at our banks on Saturday, although the tide has but just turned. It will be brought in millons before sixty days are out and cannot the banks pay coin when nobody wants it and every body brings it to them Mr. Biddle might as well write a letter to show that the ice in the North River broke up too early this year, or that it was a mistake to suppose it had broken up all. Those Banks can pay specie which can pay at all.

If they can pay in the paper of good banks, in stocks, in bills of exchange, or anything else, they can pay coin. If they have bills on England, they can import more specie dollars for those bills than they can get paper dollars by selling them in the market. The only question is, whether they can or cannot pay—at all.—If they can pay then let us see the proof—If they cannot we shall see the proof of course. Now is the time. Never again will there be so favorable a concurrence of circumstances. Let those institutions who refuse to fill their stations and sustain the call of their country, stand aside dishonored. They will have proved recreant to their own honor and their country's best interests, and let them be branded accordingly. If they cannot pay their debts let them stand forth honest bankrupts, confessing the truth.

The town meetings in this state last week, resulted, as far as we can learn, much as the election did last fall. The Whigs still hold Somerset and Morris counties, and other counties where they then obtained possession. They have also obtained possession of the new county, Mercer.

In this town, Westfield, the following officers were chosen, all whigs with the exception of four or five conservatives; there being no opposition to the ticket.

Recompense Stansbury, Moderator.
Dennis Coles, Town Clerk,
Elisha Runyon, } Assessors,
Jonathan Woodruff, }
Henry Baker, and John M. Hand, Collectors.
Gideon Ross and James Leonard,—Chosen Freeholders.
Randolph Dunham, Samuel Badgely, junr. and John Randolph,—Commissioners of Appeal.
Jonathan Osborn, and Frazee Coles,—Surveyors of High ways.
Simeon Lambert, and Ezra Hand,—Overseers of the Poor.
Recompense Stansbury, Judge of elections.
Elisha Runyon, and Henry Baker, Inspectors of election.
Zachariah Webster, John Littel, Daniel Shotwell, David M. Clark, and Martin Runyon,—Town committee.
Zachariah Webster, Dennis Coles and Dr. Corn Osborn,—School committee.

In Warren, the following officers were elected —the two first are Van Buren men, the remainder are whigs.

Madison Terrill,—Moderator,
James S. Drake,—Town clerk,
John Waldron,—Assessor,
Isaiah Coddington,—Collector,
Lewis Mundy, and Noah Drake,—Chosen Freeholders.

The affairs of the Dry Dock bank, which our readers will recollect was the first to suspend, having been examined by the appropriate officers, have turned out better than was expected. Sufficient funds were found in their possession to redeem all their debts, and they have not therefore forfeited their charter.

The Phenix bank has of late been undergoing a severe scrutiny from the bank commissioners, on a charge of shaving, which is almost or quite a proof of the same. The president and one other officer have resigned, and it is thought that this step would save the charter of the institution. It was one of the most influential banks in the city.

Be saving of time and stand to your

New York City Charter Election.—This is the most exciting event that has occurred since our last—the big city was in violent commotion, and the contest was more close, and animated than for a long time past. About 6000 more votes were polled than at the state election last fall. Victory was for a long time doubtful, but it finally declared in favor of the whigs, as follows:

For Mayor.

Aaron Clark, (Whig.)	18,780.
Mr. Varian, (Van Buren,)	18,342.
R. Riker, (Conservative,)	862.

The Whigs have 9 aldermen, and 9 assistant aldermen, the other party eight of each. The 14th Ward, which gave a V. B. majority for mayor, chose a whig alderman and assistant, by a majority of 7, thus giving the whigs a majority of one, in both boards of the common council.

It will be seen that Clark's majority over Varian is 438, and over both of the other candidates, 76. This is doing much better than the year before.

At the Newark charter election last week, the hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen was re-elected mayor without opposition. They could not easily have found a better man.

Our readers may recollect that we mentioned, some two or three weeks since, the fact that even in our own limited acquaintance we knew some instances of extreme want and absolute suffering from the destitution of the necessaries of life, in this place.

The proposal of Dr. Dayton, which we give below, furnishes a fit occasion to recur to the subject. There are doubtless many instances like those mentioned, and we say again in a community like this it should not thus be. Nothing, softer as we know,) has yet been done, except by private charity, and "the town,"—but private charity should not be too heavily burdened, and there is a vast amount of suffering of which the overseers of the poor must of necessity know nothing. Those persons who have much regard for character will frequently suffer to a great extent before they will even make known their wants,—and they must actually be starved out of their self respect and independence before they will solicit as a favor to be taken "on the town," or even submit to such a course. There is such a thing as mental suffering, as well as bodily,—a true benevolence would prevent or remove both. Some means must be adopted by which those whose delicacy shrinks from loud complaining of clamorous begging will be sought out and relieved.

Distress must not be disregarded because it is too retiring to exhibit itself in the highways or proclaim itself upon the "house-tops." There is enough of charitable feeling in Plainfield to dictate, and talent enough to devise some plan which will accomplish the object in view—if the ladies do not choose to be first in this work, we are sure they will not be found "among the missing," when the business has been begun. Have we none who will go forward and lay the first stone? We are as a village falling entirely into the back ground in this particular In our sister town of Rahway, we have certain information, that nearly or quite $300 have been received and employed during the past winter, by their two benevolent societies, for the relief of the poor. Plainfield is not accustomed to be behind her neighbors in public spirit,—and we are confident there is as much benevolence here as elsewhere,—it needs only to be called forth, a channel in which it may run. Let combination and system be used, and used now, and something will be done.

In the very liberal offer of Dr. Dayton, which we now proceed to give, he should receive ample encouragement and support. We expect that every friend of the science, and every friend of the poor, will attend this course. And if you do not feel able to do any thing else for the poor, you can certainly do this.

For the Plainfield Union.

Friend Cushing:

I proposed at the time of my last visit, to deliver a course of Lectures on Phrenology to our citizens the proceeds of which should be placed in the hands of some benevolent society for the benefit of the Poor—I have been necessarily absent from this place much longer than I expected—I have been somewhat disappointed to find that no systematic efforts have been made as yet for the relief of those whom misfortune has made wretched—I trust however that something will yet be done—and I shall consequently pursue my original plan.

I intend to deliver a course of 6 Lectures including the outline and many of the details of the science together with its application to philosophy of mind the moral and intellectual condition of man &c. &c. The proceeds of which shall be placed at the disposal of any benevolent society whose object shall be the relief of our own suffering poor—or in case no such society should be organised, I will appropriate personally to that object—

In doing this I shall have the double satisfaction of doing something for the cause of humanity and of communicating information with reference to a science which I sincerely believe is destined to exert an influence in meliorating the moral and intellectual condition of man which will be surpassed by christianity alone.

A. COOPER DAYTON.

New York Fire Department.—On Tuesday, the committee on the Ruggles case made their report in the Senate, and were discharged. They decided unanimously that the charges against him were unfounded, and he was acquitted. That great fraud raised by Matthew L. Davis, it seems, was all for nothing. He must feel rather cheap, one would suppose.

For the Plainfield Union.

A RACE.

Mr. Editor:

Probably all your readers are not aware that arrangements are making for a race this season on a grand scale, but such is the fact, as the writer is in possession of distinct information. It seems your own beautiful Village and pleasant plains have been selected for the place of meeting and the race ground.

More than one hundred have already entered the lists. Many more have determined to enter and are daily being enrolled; we understand the judges are appointed.

We expect a great assembly,—are sorry the peace of your quiet village should be disturbed But we have our rights—We only add to those enrolled—be in good trim. To all who think of entering,—take a fair start. To all,—run—run lawfully.—Our Motto is—TOTAL ABSTINENCE—your reward, health and prosperity, long life and peace.

AN OBSERVER.

PLAINFIELD, April 16, 1838.

New York Friday April 13th.—The Committee of the Bank Convention reported yesterday afternoon, recommending the first of October as the day of resumption; leaving it open to any State or any bank to resume before that period at its pleasure The object of the report was to name a day certain, by which all the banks should place themselves in a position to resume. On this report the votes in Committee were 13 to 8—the Ayes, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana Illinois, Missouri. Nays—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware Maryland and Mississippi.

At 8 o'clock, after an earnest discussion, the Convention adjourned to this afternoon. The Journal of Commerce says, it is thought that the proposition to fix on the first of October will be adopted.

The bank statements for April, published in the Albany Argus yesterday, show a diminution of loans and discounts for the last month of $553,489; an increase of specie of $755,097; an increase of canal fund deposits of $61,003; of individual deposits $866,283; a diminution of the state treasurer's deposite of $22,725; and of the U. S. deposites $97 7,941.

The New-Yorker, a leading literary paper in New York, has the following notices of recent publications; which are not only of authority in literature, but interesting as a sign of the progress of public sentiment in

"Alton Trials."—By J. F. Trow, 36 Ann-st. has just published in a neat 12mo. volume of 158 pages a full account of the trial of Winthrop S. Gilman and others for aiding to defend Rev. Mr. Lovejoy's press at Alton last summer, and of John Solomon and others for the destruction of the warehouse and the press. We have perused a good portion of its contents with profound interest; and we can read it and not be deeply affected. It ought to have a wide circulation.

—By the way, will our editorial friends in Illinois, inform us if it be really the settled law of that State that a man may be shot in defending his own property in his own store house from a mob bent on its destruction at any cost, and that active participators in that mob may commit burglary, robbery and murder with equal impunity? We do not exactly understand the laws of Illinois referred to in these trials; but if this is their drift, we shall advise our Western going friends who have property or mean to have, to choose some other location.

Good Prospects in Nashville.—The Nashville Banner, of the 6th inst. has a long article on the money market in that city. It says; The exchanges are rather worse, than when we last quoted them. But, if what we hear be true, there is a probability of Eastern exchange coming down very speedily. It is in contemplation, we learn, by the Planters and Union Banks of this place to issue each half a million say, of Post notes, at 12 months payable at the Eshtward. This will afford the Banks abundant time, and give them the benefit of the next crop, to meet the liabilities thus incurred. The New bank may also be expected to furnish some exchange, and the three institutions thus acting in concert, may have it in their power essentially to serve the community.

Enlargement of the Erie Canal.—The bill to provide for the speedy enlargement of the Erie Canal, passed the Assembly in committee of the whole on Saturday last. It authorizes the issue of such additional stocks as the canal commissioners may deem necessary to prosecute the work of enlargement in the most advantageous manner—such additional stock (above one million) not to exceed three millions.

The Boston Atlas, of Saturday, says; "Indictments have been returned into the municipal Court by the grand jury against Parker H. Pierce and Joseph Andrews, late president and cashier of the Commercial Bank. They have both absconded."

The Rahway Herald mentions that a fire broke out in the dwelling house of Capt. John Wainwright in Lewsville on Thursday morning last between 10 and 11 o'clock, which was nearly destroyed.

Gen. Van Rensselaer of the Patriot army, has published a manifesto in the northern papers, containing a history of events, and an announcement of its determination "to make a dash at another quarter of which you will hear in due time."

The Hon. J. W. Ripley, member of Congress from Louisiana, died at his residence in New Orleans, on the 29th ult.

We are making preparations to enlarge our paper; and in a few weeks, shall present it to our readers, the largest in the State. This will of course, greatly increase our yearly expenses. We look to the community and our friends and subscribers for whose gratification we assume the burden, to extend us increased support. This they can easily do by a little exertion.—Trenton Gaz.

Subscriptions received at this Office, for the

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE,

By Mr. JENKS, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS.—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work.

From Mr. C. Brownlee:—"Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott, and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose this work by Dr. Jenks. The great and precious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited. It is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private reading—and is particularly applicable to the wants of S. School teachers and Bible classes."

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, maps and well executed cuts, all designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We expressly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a goodly pearl, which every devout man should seek to possess in his family.

Subscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—his will worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

New Dry Goods, 131 MARKET-ST. NEWARK.

THE Subscriber has been making extensive preparations for the spring trade, and is now ready to sell to Country Dealers, and the public generally, at prices that cannot fail to satisfy all. Amongst his recent purchases are Blue, Black, Dahl, Brown, Green, Adelaide, and Invisible Green Broad Cloths, from $1,25 to $6,00 per yard; Plain and striped Cassimeres of the latest fashions, from 75 to 30 shillings a yard;—an extensive variety of Imported and Domestic Cottonades, very cheap; Bombazines; Plain and figured silks of the richest style and as cheap, perhaps, as ever before offered the public; Merino and Silk fancy shawls, lace and fine muslins; Irish linens; Sheeting and Shirting Muslins, 6 pence a yard and upwards, with all the other articles common to the business. To these we shall be adding through the season all the variety the market will afford.

THO. KENSETT.

Rahway Daily Despatch Line.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the public that the Rahway boats consisting of three good and substantial vessels, are now in operation, running daily to and from New York.

Mechanic,	Capt Wilsey,
LaFayette,	Vanpelt,
New Jersey,	Stansbery.

In opening this business of the season, the subscriber would inform the public that his boats are in good order under competent captains, and will run regular trips to and from the city.

His personal attention will be given to the business and all freight carefully attended to.

The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited. Goods can remain in his storehouse for a reasonable time, free of charge for storage, but in all cases at the risk of the owners.

JOSEPH S. FREEMAN.

N. B. Persons are requested to direct the goods to New York, to "Freeman's," or the "Old Line," as there is no other line established at Brockhawn, some distance down the river.

SCHOOL.

WILL be opened on the 9th inst. at the house of Samuel L. Pound, a school for girls by Susan Robinson and Margaret Laing, in which will be taught the usual branches of an English education. Terms from two to five dollars per quarter.

4th mo. 2nd, 1838.

Take Notice.

AS I have taken wholly upon myself the Lower Mills in Plainfield, which is now owned by George Wells, and has been formerly occupied by Wm. Wells, it is my expectation to attend to Customer work particularly. Those favoring me with their custom will be punctually executed and punctually accepted. It is my expectation to keep constantly on hand, Feed, Flour of good quality, and of all kinds, for sale, for cash.

As the public well know, or I am well aware myself of the difficulty attending to keeping Books or trusting, and as promises are so fashionable with some of paying to-morrow, and as to-morrow scarcely ever comes with them, I am determined to sell for cash or in exchange for grain.

It is my expectation to be found at or near the Mill at all times and reasonable seasons, Seventh Day excepted, as I consider that day to be the Sabbath, ordained to observe it as such.

Orphan's Court, of the Term of March, 1838.

UPON the application of Simeon F. Randolph, and Jonathan D. Randolph, Executors of Barzilla F. Randolph, deceased, to this Court to limit and appoint a certain time within which the creditors of the estate of said deceased shall bring in their debts, demands and claims against the same—and that such creditors, after such time as shall be limited, be for ever barred of his or her action against the said executors. It is ordered by the Court, That the said executors give public notice to the creditors of said deceased, to bring in their debts, demands, and claims against the said estate within twelve months from this time, by setting up such notice in five of the most public places in said county, for the space of two months, and also by advertising the same for the like space in one of the newspapers printed in this state, and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim within the said period of twelve months after public notice given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be for ever barred of his or her action therefor against the said executors. ZABRISKIE, Clerk.

THADEUS DAVID'S
WRITING FLUID,
A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness and consistency, the elegance with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying exquisitely, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, never leaving any sediment; and lastly, its great or Durability and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks—rendering it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log Book, as it cannot be impaired by Sea air.

GREEN BROOK
Family School.

THE design of this School is the Instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. No shelf elm is the prevention rather than the punishment of offence. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bedclothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the south-east bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

N. B.—Satisfactory references will be cheerfully given whenever asked. Parents who intend to educate their sons from home, are in the mean time very respectfully invited to call and examine the establishment for themselves.

Ploughs.

AS the season is drawing nigh, when ploughs are in wanting, I will take the liberty to inform the farmer that it is thought by the best judges that I have made some valuable improvements on the self-sharpening plough in the following particulars:—The long and perfect shaped mould board will scour better and draw plough now in use, and of course will run lighter,—the steel bar that forms the point is a great saving, to which the coulter is attached, forming a substitute for the beck coulter so much valued in turf.

The above described ploughs will be left for sale at the store of Berry & Dunham, Plainfield.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE
Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and in instance has occurred of their knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may be used with perfect safety by persons of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and cannot produce any other than a salutary effect in any.

Their effects when taken according to the directions will be to excite and maintain a healthful peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite in the liver and other glands its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalise arterial action—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at the Office where the Pills are for sale. 1 tf

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT THE
AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY
At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, when in both States and Nations the most atrocious systems of oppression are upheld by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 of them, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries have a right to be considered at war. We believe its principles intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservation of our free institutions. Fair object, well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired

All Authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 24 of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathan M. Dexter, Horace Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass., Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y., and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intentions to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city,—to which as well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage.

The whole arranged expressly and exclusively for this journal—embracing upon the various productions in the line and interest are presented for the reader and appreciation, all the most distinguished and popular writers of the age—poets, artists, authors, and members of the united drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works and other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c. &c. &c.—forming a variety of unsurpassed reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, sketches and improvements in science, art, manners, &c. &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exercise its preference for literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a splendid foreign correspondence will be established. The sum of $6000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and delicious fragments of foreign literature will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts ever published.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed in formal designs and execute the beautiful series of pieces of embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For the Plainfield Union.

TO THE DEPARTED.

Silent in dust thou art sleeping,
Dark is the place of thy rest;
Ivy and myrtle are creeping
O'er the cold sod on thy breast!

Hushed is the voice of the weeper,
Ceased every sorrowful strain;
Now they have turned from thee, sleeper,
Back to earth's pleasures again.

Love, that so tenderly bound thee,
Breathee to another its tone;
Hearts that had gathered around thee,
Sigh not to know thou art gone.

Gone!—and thy sand hath been taken,
Round the loved hearth there is one
Claiming the power to awaken
Feelings once ruled by thine own.

Say, does thy pure spirit yet hover
Weary and anxious o'er earth—
Watching each change to discover,
Grieved at the accents of mirth?

Or, are its pinions forever
Severed from all that is low?
Soaring with those who stood never,
Naught of earth's sorrow to know!

Who can the mystery unravel,
Darkness and doubt to dispel?
Who may the dreary road travel
Mortals the secret to tell?

None, from all the vast number
Swept from these perishon shore,
Ever awaked from their slumber—
Vainly the dead we implore.

Faith has unfolded a story,
Glowing with visions of bliss!
Pointing to mansions of glory,
Where we behold thee, in peace.

Rochester, April, 18.8. A. C. P.

A few weeks ago, a very wealthy old gentleman of New Orleans was married to a blooming young damsel. On the wedding night three or four thousand amateurs, skilled in serenading, assembled at the house with horns, kettles, gongs, cowbells, &c., and commenced a serenade, the like of which never before grated upon the ears of mortal man or woman. The old gentleman appeared at the window and begged piteously for mercy. Thereupon the spokesman of the musical assemblage proclaimed to him that they had taken an oath never to let slumber visit his eyelids or those of his blooming bride until he made a donation of $1000 to the orphan boys' asylum. The old gentleman was obstinate, and the young rascals were inexorable. They kept up the horrible melody through that night, and the next, and were just opening the performance for the third night, when the old gentleman purchased from his tormentors the mercy of their silence by acceding to their demands. And on the day following, the Treasurer of the Orphan boys' Asylum acknowledged the receipt of $1000 given by Mr. Will and Brand, of that city.

"I wonder," says Cæsar, rising and rubbing the mud from his holiday suit, "why de deuce de sun no shine dese dark nights, Cato, and not always keep shining in de day time, when dere's no need of him."

Locusts.—A writer in the Boston Daily Advertiser, says this is the year for the reappearance of the seventeen year locusts, their last visitation in that quarter having been in eighteen hundred and twenty one. These insects have a distinctly marked W formed on their backs. Shortly before their disappearance, many of the small twigs of the young oaks appear to be girdled and partly cut off, and hang suspended from the extremity of the branches. The leaves turn red, as when touched with the frosts of autumn. On examination these twigs appear to be sawed about two thirds off, and girdled so that the circulation of sap being cut off a few days, and probably kills to the ground in the course of the ensuing winter, by the action of the wind, rain, and snow. The general belief is, that by a curious and remarkable instinct, the insect is led to deposite its eggs in some secure mode upon these small twigs, and they thus partially to sever them from the parent stock, so that by their fall the eggs shall be borne gently and safely to the ground, into whose bosom they are in some form to be received and cherished, to reappear in the form of the full grown locusts, after the lapse of seventeen years. The emblem presented by this beautiful and brilliant insect, rising from its dark abode being and its burnial, full of life and activity, making the woods vocal with its shrill and agitated song, is a beautiful one.—Salem Gaz.

Iron Vessels.—On Saturday last, the Rainbow an iron steam-vessel, built for the General Navigation Steam Company, was launched from Mr. J. Laird's yard, Birkenhead. She is, with two or three exceptions, the largest steam-vessel built or building in this country, her dimensions being—length over all, 225 feet; beam, within paddle boxes, 25 feet; extreme width, 43 feet. She is divided into six compartments by five water tight partitions, which entirely remove all danger of sinking in case of collision with other vessels; and if all the other advantages iron vessels possess are left out of view, the simple fact that them these particulars can be rendered most efficient and secure, will we have no doubt, cause their general adoption, both for sea going and river vessels. The Rainbow is now being fitted by Messrs. Forrester & Co., with a pair of 90 horse power engines and her cabins, which are of the most spacious and elegant description, being also in a forward state, we may shortly expect to see her at work, and have no doubt, from superior model and light draft of water, she will be one of the fastest steamers afloat. The Rainbow is the tenth vessel built by Mr. Laird with water tight compartments; and we understand that he has now three other large ones building on the same principle.—Liverpool Adv.

Stop Thief!—The following extraordinary circumstance we copy from the Montreal Transcript of March 31st. The length of the railroad from Laprairie to St. Johns is about 14 miles.

On Saturday last, while the persons in charge at Laprairie were busy in getting out the cars, and putting every thing in order for the opening of the season, the car which happened to stand next the door, and which weighs about 1,200 lbs was run out upon the main track, there to await the arrangement of a train of cars to proceed to St. Johns by horse power.

This car had doubtless been infected with a spirit of revolt, for it resolved not to be conducted by horses, for which it had not been consulted, and pushing by the storm which had previously set in, it determined to travel by wind and that independently. It accordingly started away propelled by the wind, and being missed when another car was run out, a little boy was despatched to stop it.

The car however, continued gradually to mount the hill, at the summit of which the messenger nearly came up with it, but having once passed the summit, it started on the declivity at a rapid rate, and the messenger returned in despair. About 4½ miles from Laprairie it entered on the curved track, and so reduced her speed, that a little boy, observing its sluggish movement, stepped up on the side projection, and climed inside.

The car no sooner emerged from the curved to a straight track, than it resumed a pace at which the boy did not dare attempt escape; and the car with its passenger, arrived at St. Johns in one hour and ten minutes from Laprairie. It was there overtaken by a man who had been despatched on horseback from Laprairie, and who returned with the truly surprising intelligence of its arrival. Query—will an action lie for the boy's passage money?

Friend—One who takes your money and then turns you out of doors.

NOBLE CONDUCT OF AN AMERICAN CAPTAIN.

Her Majesty's Ship Hercules,
Halifax Harbor March 28, 1838.

On our passage from England to this port, when in lat. 42 N. and lon. 42 W. we observed a sail hauling for us, apparently with the desire of speaking this ship. I immediately closed with her, and found it to be the American ship "Commerce" of and from Charleston, bound for Liverpool, commanded by Capt. Perry, and that his object in communicating with us, was, to beg that we would receive on board part of the crew of the Elizabeth Caroline, of St. Stephens, New Brunswick, which vessel he had met, dismasted and water logged, in lat. 39 N. and lon. 45 W. and had taken all the crew off the wreck 6 days previous.

These unfortunate persons had been 22 days on the forecastle of their vessel, lashed to the mainmast, exposed to every sea, with barely sufficient food to sustain life, and all the water that they had remaining was but 2 gallons when the Commerce fell in with her.

My motive in detailing to you these particulars is principally to express my admiration, and that of all those under my command, at the generous and humane conduct of Capt. Perry, as it has been made known to us by the men belonging to the Elizabeth Caroline.

It appears that the Commerce fell in with this wreck by the merest chance, at about half past 9 at night, on the 4th of March; and that on hearing the cries of the crew, the Commerce instantly shortened sail, wore round, and went close alongside of the waterlogged vessel—Capt. Perry hailing them in these cheering words, as the men have themselves represented;—Keep up your hearts boys, there is too much sea to board you now, but I will never leave you till I take you off; and through the night he twice or thrice passed around them, repeating these consoling words, and offering to veer to them water and provisions if they were in immediate want of either.

These generous assurances, this brave sailor rigidly fulfilled, and after preservingly keeping close to the vessel for two nights and a day, blowing very hard all the time, he at length succeeded in getting the people all out of her into the Commerce, where he clothed them, and treated them with kindness, which, as they gratefully say, they never can forget or cease to acknowledge.

If this is the first time known the exemplary conduct of Capt. Perry, it is with sorrow I have to draw a disgraceful contrast on the part of a vessel, bearing a flag of which the very morning of the day that the Commerce fell in with the Elizabeth Caroline, hauled up within three miles of the wreck, and took in her standing sails; yet, though in the other was then fully able to go again to the Eastward without offering the slightest assistance, her object, thus evidently seeming to have been plunder; and that on discovering living persons on board of the Elizabeth Caroline, which would have rendered this design abortive, she at once abandoned them all to their fate.

For the honor of the two nations, it is to be hoped that those who acted thus inhumanly, did not belong either to England or America, lest the crew of the shipwrecked vessel regret to say, believe her to be English; but be whatever country she may belong, I trust a manne, and that of her unfeeling master, will be brought to light in order that the man who could act so heartless a part may be held up to the execration of mankind; and time receive the punishment which he so well deserves.

I have the honor to be sir,
Your very obedient servant,
J. TOUP NICHOLAS,
Capt. H. M. ss. Hercules.

P. S.—I may add, that with the view of observing our own rations, at the noble conduct of Capt. Perry, in saving so long and so preservingly in a gale of wind, by the wreck of the Elizabeth Caroline," the officers of the "Hercules," and myself, together with Major, Estcourt of the 43rd Regiment, and the officers of the detachment of the 15th, 34th, 66th, 83d Regiments, taking a passage in it a step from England, have made a subscription for a piece of plate, which we mean to present to the worthy American Captain, as a lasting memorial of his generous deed which he performed.

J. T. N.

The Cincinnati News mentions a remarkable instance of the sagacity of a large dog, that was seen to enter the school of the Post Office, rise himself upon his hind legs, look into his master's box, and finding it empty, departed with an evident look of disappointment.

A country man was examining at the signs in Albany, when a pert clerk asked him if he wished to buy some grape seed. "No, I don't want none," was the reply. "Am looking at this little town—I talk of buying it."

Moral and Religious.

It is among the strange anomalies of society that so many respectable men should reckon it a disgrace to have borne an unstained, possibly, whilst it is none at all to be living a licentious life. The real conduct of our day regulates that teaching which leads to reckless vanity and conceit. It loves to be told that human nature is all wise, all excellent, and to doubt it is an offence only to be expiated with blood. The duellist, put once, for instance, all-enduring patience, are not among our popular virtues. They are rejected and disregarded, as things dishonorable—accepted and lauded as things of value, but utterly unworthy of any assumed belief in spiritual character and progress.—Newark Daily.

A Remarkable Fact.—By the intelligence communicated in our two last papers, it will be seen that the Christians in the Sandwich islands have established a monthly concert to pray for American lentenes! We rejoice in the fact, but consider it one of the most remarkable events in the seventh age. Let professing christians in America, who hesitate and fear their fellow men, or keep them in heathenish darkness, and all who apologise for, or who refuse to oppose such practices, tremble in view of such an astonishing fact.—Emancipator.

Intemperance and Pauperism.—In April last, the Massachusetts Legislature directed returns to be made from the different towns, embracing statistics of pauperism. From these returns the following table is gleaned. The first column shows the number of paupers in the large towns named, and the second column gives the number made so by intemperance.

Boston,	3279	2030
Salem,	755	500
Danvers,	148	104
Gloucester,	143	86

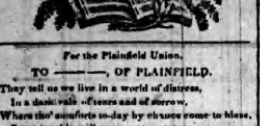
Will any ingenious trafficker in broken constitutions and broken hearts exhibit an offset, in the shape of the big text and imaginable Public Good, against the long bead string of public evil and private woe we cite above.

To the list of town paupers we are compelled to add a good deal of multitude, who are not supported by town, but by the state, the tenants of penitentiaries and prisons, county jails, lunatic asylums, and at the prisons. To these we must add the eatch gang of miserable, tippling drones, the loafers, and idlers, who are permitted to go at large.

President Madison observed that the whole Bible was against negro slavery; but that the clergy do not preach this; and the people do not see this.—Miss Martineau.

POITICAL.



For the Plainfield Union.

TO ——, OF PLAINFIELD.

They tell us we live in a world of distress,
In a dark vale of tears and of sorrow,
Where tho' comforts to-day by chance come to bless,
Some trouble will curse us to-morrow.

I say not 'tis false, but I cannot tell why
The world should be dreary and dark
While bright forms around me I spy,
With spirits as blithe as the lark.

Earth may be a dreary and desolate place,
All shrouded in darkness and gloom,
But to those who can dwell in the smiles of your face,
Its darkness will never be known.

FLORIO.

Plainfield, April 17, 1838.

For the Plainfield Union.

Mr. Editor:

The First part of the following song is an effusion of a Quebec bard, and ridicule the "French whim of equality," and endeavors that "both nature and fortune ordain eternal distinctions among mankind."

The Second part was written by an American, (now resident in Plainfield,) in the year 1813—but has never before been published. It ridicules the "British whim of eternal distinctions," and contends that both nature and reason ordain "liberty among mankind."

Song.—PART I.

Here's a health to sonest John Bull,
When he's gone we mustn't find such another;
And with hearts and with glasses in hand,
Here's a health to Old England his mother.

And with hearts, &c.

She gave him a good education,
Bade him keep to in church and his king
Be loyal unto to his nation,
And then go be merry and sing.

Be joyal, &c.

Now John's a good honored fellow,
In manners, honest and brave;
Not afraid of his beaters who mellow,
Since beaters he knows he must have.

Not afraid, &c.

For there must be fine lords and fine ladies,
There must be some into some great;
Their w ath the supply of our trade is,
Our hands the support of their state.

Their wealth, &c.

Some are born for the court and the city,
And some for the village and cot,
But all 'twere a dolorous pity,
If all became equal in lot.

But not, &c.

If our ships had no pilots to steer,
What would become of poor Jack in the shrouds,
Or our troops no commanders to lead,
They'd soon be trained to fight in crowds.

Our troops, &c.

Then the plough and the loom must stand still,
If they must be gentlemen all;
Or all two-legged sticks may want half
The Parliament, pulpit and hall?

Or all 1-bodyers, &c.

"Rights of man" make a very fine sound,
"Equal riches" a plausible tale:
But whose labor would there till the ground?
All would drink, but who'd hew the last sale?

but whose labor, &c.

When half-naked, half-starved in the street,
We were wandering about sans cash, tea,
Would equality go learn us meat?
Or liberty tighten our coats?

Would equality, &c.

PART II.

Let us drink to the health of our betters,
And stand to the health of the king!
Then we'll merrily twirl our fetters,
As becomes us to whom we sing.

Then we'll merrily, &c.

The people are sons of the nation,
But the king and nobility are;
It is clear that representation
Of the people can never be fair.

It is clear then, &c.

Yet the populace ought to be taxed,
To defray the expense of the crown;
Let the government rents be raised,
And no longer a income tax be known.

And no longer, &c.

What a privilege 'tis to be loyal,
And to join in No Man my tunes!
To the watch his numbers are loyal
May pamper all inventive noses.

To the watch, &c.

How absurd that the rich and the great
Should contribute at all to our wants,
For 'tis obvious the wealth of the state
Ought to grow to a nobleman's possessors.

For 'tis obvious, &c.

And the people fare well if they're able
To get what a king wouldn't eat;
And if they can't keep it a stable,
They can keep it as well in the street.

And if, &c.

Otherwise they might murmur and grumble,
And dare to prosecute they are lords;
When they ought to be loyal and humble
And cheerfully carry the screws.

To their duty, &c.

Our religion lays down nothing flatter.
Than that tythes are the clergymen's due;
Since the former's established, the latter
Might as well be established too.

Since the former, &c.

When half-naked, half-starved in the street,
We are wandering about sans cash tea,
Won't impressment provide us with meat.
And furnish us red woolen cloth?

Won't impressment, &c.

HUSBANDRY.

From the Farmers' Cabinet.

Mischief and injury from the wanton destruction of birds.

The season having now arrived, that the little songsters make their appearance amongst us, to build their nests and rear their young, I appeal to every man, woman and child in the nation, to afford protection and security to them, in return for their most valuable services to us in the destruction of the myriads of insects and worms, that annually devastate our fields and gardens. It is not to have been noticed by the most ignorant, that the various tribes of insects have increased in a geometrical proportion to the decrease of birds, who are their natural enemies; the equilibrium of nature has been destroyed by our cruelty and ignorance in refusing protection and succor to our best friends; and the annual loss sustained by it to the country, it would not be possible to estimate. During the past forty years the various tribes of small birds have been diminishing with a frightful rapidity, and if it should progress in the same proportion for forty years to come, it will be a serious question whether the produce of the country can be kept up, so as to supply the wants of the inhabitants. When a the farmer that followed the plough fifty years ago, that does not remember the flocks of birds that crowded the furrows of the newly turned up earth, devouring every grub or worm that was exposed to the surface? They seemed fearless of man, and appearing in a state to be unacquainted with the fact of the ploughman to destroy his inveterate and insidious enemies. Now what has become of those faithful guardians of our property? The answer to this quest on can be given by every farmer in the country without mistake—As soon as t ey appear amongst us in the spring and begin to build their nests, a set of idle miscreant boys commence annoying them; take their eggs and otherdestroy their nests, and offer every kind of persecution to them which is in their power, and all session of the year; a set of ruthless vag bonds prowl through every neighborhood with their guns, ever ready to shoot down a robin, sparrow, found, or wren, either of which are rendering none service to the community in proportion to their ability, than their murderous perse cutors. The damage sustained to grass and grain, the injury to fruit trees and destruction of fences by this worthless part of our population, is a matter of serious magnitude, but it sinks into comparative insignificance when contrasted with the it ct and g devastation by insects, mainly produced by the persecution and wanton distruction of the class of birds which were double as intended to keep their multiplication within harmless limits. The wheat, Indian corn, fruit trees, vegetables, and even the grass and the trees of our forests annually furnish the most conclusive testimony of the great disturbance in the equilibrium of nature produced by the ignorant, wages who have found and shoot a gun.—Public opinion, the influence of which is so potent in many other matters, ought speedily to be brought to bear on this very momentous subject. Where would exist the difficulty in calling public meetings in townships or neighborhoods to concentrate, and express public opinion on a subject in every m mber of the community has so deep an interest? Let this speedily be done, and try its effect; if it should fail, other means must be found out, for the grievance is of too alarming a character to be tolerated longer in civil ized society. Teachers of religion and school teachers ought to consider whether they might not render some service to their fellow citizens by occasional instruction and admonition, that would illuminate the ignorant and alarm the vicious, in a manner that so deeply concerns the public welfare.

A premium of ten dollars, or a medal of equal value, at the option of the writer, will be paid to the person who will furnish the best essay on the foregoing subject, adapted for publication in the Farmers Cabinet and the newspapers generally. The editor of the Cabinet who will pay the premium, to be the judge. The essay to be produced in time for the June number, and not to exceed four pages.

AGRICOLA.

Raising Potatoes.—A correspondent says:—I will briefly state a fact, or rather the experiment in the agriculture line. I planted in my garden in 1836, one potatoe, from which I raised ninety six potatoes. In 1837 I planted the ninety six, and raised from them eighteen and a half bushels or as large and as dome potatoes as I ever saw. Thus in two years I raised from one potatoe eighteen and a half bushels. The only secret is, I cut out the eyes, and put one eye in the hill. I deem it important for farmers to know this, as there is great saving in seed.

Products and profits of Land in Kent County Delaware.

Having often heard from others, of the great profit made by our neighbor, Jon than Jenkins of Camden, from the cultivation of a few acres of land, which a short time since was of inferior quality; I finally determined to ascertain from him the truth of the statements above alluded to. He informed me that he began to improve the soil of this small tract of land, containing only thirty eight acres. It was very poor—more so than most of the lands in the neighborhood of Camden, and not better than much which is now suffered to be waste in our country.—That from me very beginning he paid him a good profit, not the money expended in the purchase, and all the manure and labor bestowed upon it, although some of it in consequence of its immed ate vicinity to Camden, cost him sixty five dollars per acre. That his crops kept every year increasing in quantity and quality, and value, until he was induced to keep an account of them, and of the

He says that some persons may probably think the estimate of prices too high; but that he has always sold most of the produce for the same prices given, and expects to do some of the remainder at the rates there set down; and at all events, making every allowance for excess in the estimate of the value of this little farm, there 38 acres will worth to him the last year, a sum equivalent to the interest on $20,000!!—Delaware Register.

The Altonian.—We have received the first No. of new paper just commenced at Alton, by the above title; Parker Breath, publisher. The object for Wing principles, for Henry Clay as President and Gov. Edwards a Governor, and for free discussion forever. What a pity the committee of which Mr. Edwards was chairman, did not take the ground on the memorable 3d of November. But we are glad to see such a paper from Alton and hope it may be largely sustained. In commending to the Rev. Mr. Wheeler's theory of mobs, and the duty of putting down those who go so much in advance of the age as to execute mobs, the conductors of the Altonian expose themselves with much force and propriety. His such sentiments found an efficient advocacy in Judge Edwards and those of his class, the stain of blood which now rests on the name of Alton would not have been.—Emancipator.

A new Business.—A person in South street, one day this week, was complaining that want of employment left him almost dev tute of the comforts of life, and imploringly solicited work. He got the job you desire, said a gentleman, I will employ you and give you one dollar and fifty cents for your days work. The offer was seemingly good, and the laborer was directed to take a brick and carry it across the street and then return with it and lay it down, making a mark to indicate the number of times it was transported across the street and back again, and thus continued to carry it from one side of the street to the other, throughout the specified term of labor. The fellow ace ompl shed his day's work, and received his pay, but declares that never the sum would he be induced for him to undert ke the same work again.—N. Y. Adv. & Jour.

A Scene.—Dandy. I say, you sir, will this road i ke me to N w York?

Rustic. Can't tell; you'd better ask it.

Dandy. You impertinent scoundrel! pray who brought you up?

Rustic. Wasn't brought up at all, thank ye; I com'd down on a raft.

The Pittsburg Advocate has the following narration:

A passenger in the Steamboat Post Boy, the other day, had the misfortune, when within a few miles of this city, to lose from his vest pocket a wallet containing bank notes to the amount of five thousand dollars, which fell into the river. This was too considerable a sum to grieve over, without an effort at recovering. So thought the loser—and so long as the hope was took the yawl of the boat, with a man to help him to go in pursuit. But time had elapsed in making these preparations—the steamer going rapidly in one direction and the money another. They pu sued away, however over the broad Ohio—one thousand chances against them—in pursuit of a very speck upon its surface, or perchance under the surface. But, lost two miles from where it was dropped they actually picked up the treasure!

Fine Arts.—A ma ble bust of Mr. VAN BUREN, the President of the United States has, within the last few days been placed in the Library of the Capitol. The National Intelligencer says it is a work of extreme beauty, and adds

"The more we look at it, the more we are struck with the perfect manner in which the execution. The style is now to us, unbelieving, a d way, according to our idea, the refinement of the chisel of CANOVA with the impressive simplicity of the days of the Roman Empire. In the possession of PETTRICH, a favorite pupil of the celebrated THORWALDSEN, and certainly does honor to that school. The studio of this admirable artist, adjacent to the new Treasury buildings, contains many charming things; amongst the rest, a naked, just executed, for a national vessel which is beyond all the praise we can give it.

An Extraordinary Lusus Naturæ.—The Boston papers mention that on the 31st of March last a male child was born unto Mr. John Sadbury, of Weymouth, in that state, who had four eyes, four ears, four arms and four legs! It died the day after its birth. The duplicate eyes appeared above the natural eyes, in the forehead—the duplicate ears just behind the true ears—the duplicate arms grew from below and immediately under the true arms—and the duplicate legs sprung from the hips and extended in length a short distance below the knees of the true legs.

The packet ship Columbus arrived at N. York last evening from Liverpool with another half million of specie, to Prime, Ward, and King. A half million was received the day before, and they seem to be the first instalments of one million sterling on specie, which in pursuance of an arrangement made by the Bank of England in connection with Baring, Brother & Co., and Mr. Jas. G. King of New York then in London, is to be sent out with a view to aid the New York Bank in resuming—the balance will arrive in the successive packets.—The Amer can says this estimated by those who have good means of knowing, that $10,000,000 will be imported before June 1st, and that without reducing the amount of bullion in the Bank of England $10,000,000 sterling—as the tendency of gold was constant from the continent to England.

The house of Lebbeus W. Lathrop, in Piscataway township, five miles from Brunswick, was consumed by fire on Monday afternoon of last week, with nearly all its contents. The act was undoubtedly that of an incendiary, and suspicion is attached to a servant girl in the family, but nothing was elicited in her examination to warrant the arrest of the citizen upon the charge.

The loss sustained is about twenty three hundred dollars, of which five hundred was insured in the Philadelphia Mutual Assurance five comp ny.—N. B. Times.

We gather from foreign papers the following account of resuscitation after drowning. It observes the attention of medical men.—National Gazette.

"A youth, named Rice, having yesterday fallen into the basin, City-road, a quarter of an hour elapsed before he could be got out, when two surgeons attended; but, after an hour's exertion were unsuccessful in their attempts to restore the youth to life. A drunken man, from the tap room, waking from his sleep, and hearing that the unusual men had failed, staggered into the room, and said he could restore the boy, and applying his mouth to that of the youth, at the same time closing his nostrils, by strong suction, as if drawing the water object from the patient, actually recovered him in a few minutes, to the astonishment of all present. This was the ninth person the individual had restored in a similar manner. This case has excited much speculation, and led to the conjecture that an instrument might be made to answer the means adopted in these instances of resuscitation, which would be highly beneficial in every point of view."

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, April 13.

The bill to provide for the reduction and graduation for the price of the public lands, passed the Senate to-day by a vote of 27 to 16. As this bill is of the highest interest and importance, especially to the citizens of the new States, we subjoin a copy of it.

A BILL providing for the reduction and graduation of the price of the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the 31st day of December, in the year 1838, all the public lands of the United States which shall then remain unsold, after having been offered at private sale, at $1 25 per acre, for 5 years shall be subject to entry at $1 per acre for 12 months after the said 31st day of December, 1838, and after said 1 me the same shall be subject to entry at the price of 75 cents per acre; Provided, That no one person under the provision of this act shall be authorized to purchase more than one section; Provided, also, That no one shall be prohibited from entering any quantity, as heretofore, of the lands embraced by this act, at the price of $1 25 per acre.

In the House several memorials were presented in relation to the late duel.

Mr. Cambreleng reported a bill authorizing a re-issue of the Treasury notes authorized by the act of Oct. last. The bill was committed.

Saturday, April 14th.

The Senate did not sit. In the house, the bill extending the charter of the Union bank, at Georgetown was passed.

Monday, April 16.

In Senate, the bill to prevent the circulation of the old United States bank notes was taken up. Mr. Grundy spoke at length in favor of it. Mr. Hubbard then took the floor, and the Senate went into an Executive session.

In the house, nothing of importance

Tuesday, April 17.

In Senate, Mr. Preston gave notice that he should very soon bring up his resolutions for the annexation of Texas.

The bill to prevent the issue and circulation of the old notes of the United States bank, was taken up, and after considerable debate, was postponed till to-morrow.

In the House, Mr. Boon, from the committee on Public Lands, reported the Senate bill to reduce and graduate the price of the Public Lands, without amendment.

Wednesday, April 18.

In Senate, the resolution for the adjournment of Congress on the 4th of June, came up for consideration, and a motion to lay it on the table was refused, 12 yeas and 30 n. ys.

There was some debate respecting the bills of the old United States bank, but no conclusion was arrived at.

In the House, the resolution for a divorce of the Government from the public press, was again taken up. Also the Cumberland road bill.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Wednesday Morning, April 25.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man.—Thomas Jefferson.

Military.—By the last accounts from Florida, certain intelligence has been received, that Gen. Jessup had captured at one time about 500 Indians and 150 negroes, and dispatched them to the westward.

Gen. Jessup has been recalled from his command in Florida, to fill the duties of his station as Quarter master, at Washington. Col. Taylor, who has been promoted to the rank of Brigadier General, by brevet, takes the command of the few troops left in Florida; while the remainder and the greater part are ordered to the Cherokee country, to quell disturbances expected to arise there in consequence of the removal of the Cherokees next month according to the treaty. Gen. Scott is to take the command, and it is to be hoped he will succeed better than Gen. Jessup has done against the Seminoles.

The Resumption of Specie Payments, once more.—The Bank Convention, when assembled in New York, on the 11th inst. agreeably to adjournment last fall, after a session of five days, adjourned on Monday afternoon, the 16th inst. The preamble and resolutions given below, fixing on the 1st Monday of June next as the time for a general resumption, were adopted on Monday, by the following vote:—Ayes, Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. Nays, New York and Mississippi.

On the motion to strike out the 1st of January and insert May 10th, New York, Indiana, Missouri, Illinois, and Mississippi, voted in favor of it.

Several communications were read to the convention. Among them some from the secretary of the Treasury, assuring them all the aid in the constitutional power of the Government to the resuming banks; also one from Prime, Ward & King relative to half a million of specie, that they had made arrangements for bringing into the country, to aid in this great object.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTION.

Whereas it is found necessary, in order to simultaneous action by the Banks in the resumption of specie payments, so to proceed in designating a period for that purpose, as to secure the nearest approach to unanimity. And whereas, whilst in the judgment of this Convention, the return to specie payments and preservation of the currency in a sound condition, will depend essentially on the course of the general government: yet this convention deem it the duty of the banks to make the effort in good faith, exclusive of any direct reference to the prospective measures of the Government. At the same time, the convention has been happy to observe in recent letters of the Secretary of the Treasury specific assurances of an intention to sustain the Banks, so far as it may be done through the fiscal operations of that departm nt of the Government.

Resolved, That it be recommended to all the Banks of the Sever l States, to resume specie payments on the first Monday in January next, without precluding an earlier resumption on the part of such Banks as may find it necessary or deem it proper.

The Delegates from the State of New York held a meeting immediately after the Convention adjourned, and adopted the following preamble and resolution.

New York, April 16th, 1838.

At a meeting of the Delegates of the City and County Banks of the State of New York, held in the City, to-day the following preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted, and ordered to be published;

WHER AS the Law which legalized the suspension of Specie Payments will expire, by its own limitation, on the 10th of May next, and whereas the effects of a resumption are considerations which more properly pertain to the Legislature than to the Banks; therefore, without attempting to foresee what the effects may be, but hoping they may not be injurious to the commerce and industry of the State, and with a determination to render to those interests all the assistance which shall be found compatible with a discharge of our legal obligations.

Resolved, That the banks of this State be recommended to resume Specie payments on or before the tenth of May next.

C. W. LAWRENCE, Chairman.

W. M. VERPLANK, Secretary.

We are happy to see that the law prohibiting the retailing of ardent spirits in Massachusetts, has passed the Senate, by a vote of 24 to 9. It is now the law of the land, it having previously passed the lower house. It restricts the sale of ardent spirits to licensed apothecaries, the number of whom is limited to one in every 2000 inhabitants. It goes into operation April 1st, 1839. The law also provides against any perversion of the license. Massachusetts has in the great temperance reform in this manner excelled all her sister states,—the first in the Union to prohibit the wicked traffic in spirituous liquors. We hope the public opinion in that moral and enlightened state will sustain the legislature in it, and permit the law to be enforced on all occasions, for public opinion is stronger than laws, in moral reformation.

Rhode Island Election!—We have received full returns of this election from all the towns in the state except three. The whigs have a complete triumph. William Sprague, the Whig candidate, is elected Governor, by about 500 majority, over John B. Francis, V. B. the present governor. All the whig candidates for the Senate are elected, and two thirds for the lower house. It was a Van Buren state last year.

Congressional.—On Thursday, 19th inst. the Senate resolved not to adjourn, on the 4th of June next, and the subject of adjournment is postponed.

The bill to suppress the old notes of the U. S. bank, imposing a fine of $10,000, and imprisonment for 5 or 10 years in the penitentiary, upon any officer or trustee of the bank who shall issue them, occupied most of the day. Mr. Wall spoke at length in favor of the bill, and Messrs. Clay, Preston and Prentiss against it.

Mr. Wise gave notice in the House, on the 18th inst. that unless a successful attempt should be made within a few years to recede the District of Columbia to Maryland and Virginia, he would go for a movement of the seat of government to the West.

☞ We were unable last week, on account of the crowded state of our columns, to notice the examination and exhibition of the Green Brook Family School, which took place at the close of the session. The examination we were unable to attend, but have understood from one who was present and well qualified to judge, that it was highly creditable both to the principal and pupils. The exercises in declamation, which we heard in the evening, we were much gratified with, as were also apparently the very large audience.

The Legislature of New York a journed on Wednesday evening last at 12 o'clock, after a session of 107 days, and having passed 303 laws. The Albany Evening Journal of Thursday evening speaks of the session as remarkable for the diligence and application of its members. During the last four weeks, the house has held two and the last week three sessions daily.

The Assembly's bill to facilitate the resumption of specie payments, failed in consequence of a disagreement between the two houses.

The Evening Journal thus notices some of the good fruits of the session:

On no former occasion has more been done to advance the interests of the People, or so much to develope the resources of the State. A new impulse has been given to the cause of Internal Improvement—an impulse quickened and invigorated by the triumphant report of Mr. Ruggles. The speedy enlargement of the Erie Canal is authorized, for which purpose $4,000,000 is appropriated.

The construction of the New York and Erie Railroad is ensured, a loan of $4,000,000 having been made to the Company. The State, by liberal donations to the Canajoharie, the Auburn and Syracuse, and the Ithaca and Owego Railroads, have also ensured the completion of these works. These appropriations and loans, for works of improvement, amount in the aggregate to $7,750,000. Commissioners have also been authorized the survey of several canal and railroad routes.

The bill authorizing associations for Banking has become a law. This law gives freedom to banking and destroys a monopoly which has become too enormous to be tolerated.

The proceeds of the surplus Revenue have been appropriated for the support and benefit of the Common Schools, School District Libraries, Academies and Colleges.

LECTURES ON PHRENOLOGY.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, but one lecture was delivered last week. Dr Dayton intends to recommence his course, this evening, Wednesday, at the same place and hour.

As a proof of a revival of business in this place we take pleasure in stating that Mr. Randolph Frazee sold a building lot, containing less than a quarter of an acre, in the upper part of this village, last week, for $300, in cash. We consider this as worthy of note in these hard times.

On the 4th of this month, the Columbia Rail Road bridge in Pennsylvania, more than 200 feet long, was entirely destroyed by fire. It has been rebuilt already, and was opened for travel on Tuesday of last week, the 17th inst. just 13 days after it was consumed. Very quick work.

The ship republic, which arrived at New York last week from Liverpool, brought an Irish lad, seven feet and six inches high; also a girl with long silver hair,—both for exhibition in this country. This goes ahead of the far-famed Kentucky giant.

The notes of the following Banks, cannot now be negociated or sold in N. Y. viz: Citizen's bank, Worcester, Mass; Lafayette Bank, Bangor Me; Connecticut Bank, at do; Roxbury and Norfolk Banks at Roxbury, Mass. Lancaster Bank Lancaster do: Newbury Bank at Newbury, Vt; Orange co. Bank at Chelsea; Vermont and Old Town Bank, at Orono, Me. The Bank of Newbury has been placed under an injunction, and an investigation into the state of its affairs is about taking place. The Cashier has published a notice assuring the bill holders of the ability of the bank to meet all its liabilities eventually.

Two young travellers, Messrs. Combes and Poirier, have just returned to Paris, after a journey of four years in Africa, during which they have visited and carefully explored Arabia, Senaar, Abyssinia, and the unknown countries Galla, Oiom, and Hat, which Bruce and Salt were not able to reach. They are preparing for immediate publication the narrative of their interesting and perilous travels.

Sharp Shooting.—There resides in Front street a gentleman, who in Castle Island, fired a ball from a rifle at sixty yards distance into the centre and a successive shot, another ball into the other so as to fasten them together. The same at the thatched Cottage, Jersey City, made a trifling wager of 16 to 1, that he would with a dueling pistol shoot into the size of a dollar at 15 yards distance He hit the exact centre, drove the nail, and had a sixpenny piece been placed on the centre and its edge traced with a penknife, the centre could not have been cut more perfectly. He has also hit a visiting card 13 times in 15 shots at 10 paces. He has killed at sea 12 stormy Petrels in 14 shots; the size of the body of this bird is so small that it is supposed by many that it is impossible to hit it. The sailors are very superstitious regarding this bird, and many viewed their destruction with fear.—New York Gazette.

Live Oats.—The Yankee Farmer gives an account of a species of oats (avena sterestiva) which have all the appearance of insects. The seeds are covered with a stiff down, and have appendages somewhat resembling the legs of insects, with joints. These joints are so sensitive as to be affected by the slightest changes of the weather, and of course are continually moving. When wet they will turn over and twist about like an insect in the greatest apparent agony.

The New York Legislature has devoted the income of the surplus revenue fund to the cause of education. The bill appropriates $8000 annually to Geneva College and the New York University, each, for 5 years; 3000 a year for the same time to Hamilton college; and a section requiring each school receiving $600 to provide for the instruction of common school teachers as the condition of receiving its share.

Sir Walter Scott says that the first little board which a man can lay his arms, is the foundation stone of comfort and independence.

It is said that the citizen's bank, at Worcester has failed.

Within the past week three million dollars in specie have been received at New York from foreign countries. Half a million in Sovereigns were deposited yesterday in the Manhatten Bank at their legal value. The Journal of Commerce also mentions that a countryman who came in to sell a few hundred dollars, expecting a premium, was unable to do so, and his broker sold it at par and charged him a quarter per cent for his services!

Mr. Rensselaer Van Rensselaer has been admitted to bail and discharged from goal at Albany. He has given security for his appearance at the next term of the District Court to be held in Albany on the Second Tuesday of May next.

A fine child, of five months, was killed, one night last week in New York, by being overlaid in bed by her mother, who is almost phrenized in consequence of it.

U. S. Navy.—It appears from the Navy Register just published, that the number of National vessels of the U. S. is 55, besides the Steam frigate Fulton. Of the 55, one (the Pennsylvania) is rated at 120 guns, 7 at 80. 4 at 74. 1 at 54, 14 at 44, 2 at 32. 11 at 20, 3 at 18, 6 at 10; the remaining 7 are under 10 guns. There are 50 captains in the Navy, 49 masters commandant 276 lieuts., 49 surgeons, 24 passed assistant surgeons, 33 assistant surgeons, 45 pursers, 6 chaplains, 181 passed midshipmen, 247 midshipmen, 27 sailing masters, 25 boatswain 25 carpenters, and 24 sailmakers. The Marine Corps comprises 1 colonel, 1lt. colonel, 4 majors, 13 captains, 19 1st lts, and 20 2d do.

The most glaring deficiency in our Navy is the want of an adequate number of steam ships. Of these we ought to have at least a dozen. In case of a war they would be worth more as a protection to our commerce, than 50 ships of the line. So in case of the arrival of a foreign hostile ship or ships upon our coast. These steamships, with their long guns, could take their distance out of the reach of the enemy's shot, and pelt it into them at their leisure. The latter could neither escape, nor return the fire to any purpose. A single steam ship of war on Lake Erie during the late hubbub, would have saved us a million of dollars.—Jour of Com.

The Senate of Massachusetts, on Friday last, adopted the report of the joint committee on the subject of slavery and after some discussion, unanimously passed resolutions, 35 Senators voting, declaring its deliberate opinion that Congress has full power to abolish slavery and the slave trade in the District, and the territories, to abolish the traffic in slaves between the States, and that justice and humanity require the exercise of this power immediately. Tuesday, of this week, was assigned for their discussion in the House of Representatives.

The resolutions against Mr. Patton's resolution, as adopted by the lower House of Congress, and insisting upon the right of petition, also passed the Senate without a dissenting vote.

Fire in the Woods.—The Camden Mail mentions that a fire was accidentally kindled in a tract of valuable young timber belonging to John Gill Jr., of Gloucester county, on Thursday last by a brush heap. It spread so rapidly that in spite of the efforts of the collected neighborhood nearly 100 acres was swept over before it was arrested.

Several fresh murders have been committed in Florida by the Indians.

Liberality to Rev. Times.—Contributions and subscriptions in Dr. Spring's church, N. Y. on Sunday, last inst. were $1500.

Rohan Potatoe.—Thorburn, John st., New York advertises the seed of this valuable potatoe. It was brought from Holland about four years since, and grows to the size of from 12 to 20 lbs.—in one instance it reached the weight of 46 lbs. It is a late potatoe, and of certain production.—The stalks grow 6 or 7 feet high and require support.

The House of Representatives of Maine, have, decisive vote, declared that Congress have the right, under the Federal Constitution, to abolish Slavery in the District of Columbia; "and it is considered that the exercise of this right would be consistent with the good faith and lasting honor of our country."

A Small Exception.—At a recent insolvent court in this town, an applicant for the "benefit," on being asked if he had dealt fairly and honestly with all his creditors—"I have," he replied, "in every respect—except paying them!" Such an uncommon instance of candor secured him a favorable hearing, and he passed through the mill, like a ram rod, slick and perpendicular.—Sussex Register.

Large Steer.—Abel Griswold of Suffield, in this state has raised a steer which was 3 years old on the 1st inst. On the 2nd he weighed 2000 pounds and his girth was 7 ft 10 in. He has gained the last year 450 lbs.—Middletown Sentinel.

The steamboat Gen. Wayne arrived at New Orleans on the 10th inst. in the remarkable run of four days and 16 hours from Louisville—the shortest trip ever made.

Two Miles and a Quarter of Women.—Miss Grimke, in her lecture at Boston on Thursday evening stated that a petition for the immediate abolition of slavery in the colonies of Great Britain, was soon to be presented to queen Victoria, signed only by females, whose signatures extended over a list two miles and a quarter long.

Dentistry.

DR. DAYTON has returned to Plainfield, and is at Mr. Jacob Thorn's, where he will be happy to wait on any who may desire his services.

He has on hand a large quantity of the best Peruvian encore, this Teeth,—which will be inserted in the best manner and on the most reasonable terms, and in a majority of cases, without pain. He warrants the Teeth which he inserts not only to stand but to please; and to those who are dissatisfied he will refund their payment. Those who have lost all their teeth either in one or both jaws may have them replaced in such a manner as to chew their food comfortably, and the operation is not painful in the least.

DECAYING TEETH restored to health, and effectually prevented from decaying more

Old Stumps of Decayed Teeth, which have become useless are always injurious, and should be removed. Dr. Dayton will also promise to extract them without pain, but he is provided with instruments which render the operation as little pain ful as possible.

The operation of extracting by removing the Tartar, which defaces and injures them is a great majority of cases without pain, and it not only renders the teeth white and beautiful, but often prevents decay, and if properly performed it will not be the least injury to the enamel or hard surface of the teeth.

Tooth Ache can be cured in many instances without the loss of the tooth, and frequently in five minutes.

Examine our advertisement of Dentistry. Ladies would call at their dwellings if they prefer it.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

Terms.

N. B.—Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers; and the Trustees feel well assured of their ability and attention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to religion and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New York city—which is easy of access to New-Jersey—Rockaway, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad and stage

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
AMERICAN ANTI SLAVERY SOCIETY
At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, exhibit the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. As the object and principles of the Society and institution whose operations are more important to be known by every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 500,000 at no very distant period, others for similar objects and kindred purposes, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a mighty influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles, intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservation of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, we must by lawful and peaceful means, go forward and assert with a speedy and peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

Terms.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, will be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired. All authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

GREEN BROOK Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education, to the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to induce mental effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with firmness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and ample provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any sect or class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each commence on the 2d Monday in March, and the other on the first Monday in May, and the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing, fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bedclothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads is furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of, such as shall, pound in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to be under a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution, and the public may rest assured that a rude, imbecile, or incorrigible boy, will be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the southern bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New-Jersey. Both the situation and location of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The cities of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to the homes in the evening of the same day in safety, if it is convenient so to do.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its confidence. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

Plainfield, Essex co. N. J., Oct. 18, 1837.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for more than two years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found by which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, bilious affections, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, weakness of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness. They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own researches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indisposition, and will not produce any other than a salutary effect in any.—Their effects when taken according to the directions will be to excite and maintain a natural operation or action in the stomach and bowels, and promote a discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and pancreas in proportion—to purify the blood—equalize circulation—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing certificates attesting their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1 tf

Oct. 14. B. M. PRICE, Rahway.

Subscriptions received, at this Office, for the

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE,

By Mr. JENKS, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS.—These dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole compositions of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work:

From W. C. Brownlee :—"Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott, and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose this work by Dr. Jenks.

"The judicious and pious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited in a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private reading—and is particularly applicable to the study of Sabbath teachers and Bible classes.

It is beautifully printed, and contains several select engravings of men and weapons and dress, &c. designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We earnestly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a 'goodly pearl,' which every devout man should seek to possess in his family."

Subscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume, at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—It is well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it produces, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying sosquiebly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become sour, or muddy over long standing, sediment; and lastly, its great durability, and its quality to resist the agents as it is illustrated the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be impaired by heat.

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY ON

THE HOLY BIBLE,

By Mr. Jenks, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS.—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work:

From W. C. Brownlee:—Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott, and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose the work by Dr. Jenks. The general and pervious declarations of the grapelure exhibited. It is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private use and—and is particularly applicable in the wants of S. School teachers and Bible classes.

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, plain and well executed, all designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We extremely recommend this work to our brethren and friends. A 'goodly pearl,' which every devout man should seek to possess in his family.

Subscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—It is well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both!

MISCELLANEOUS.

Two Bottles of Old Irish Whiskey.—The following thrilling narrative, "a tale of real life," we copy from the Illinois Temperance Herald.

A small tenement, No. 32, M——street, was the home, the happy home of three families. Unlike most houses inhabited by more than one family, this was quite clean and respectable. The first floor was occupied by Patrick Callaghan a shoe maker; the front room as his shop, the back serving him, his wife, and their brood of children. The second was tenanted in front by a cartman, named Farrell, a married man but without children; the back by a merry light hearted laborer, Dennis Doyle, his wife and their infant, little Phelim, the finest, prettiest, best natured, smartest in short the first.

These three families, though unconnected by blood or any conventional ties, were united in the firmest friendship. Their joys and sorrows were all thrown into one common stock: the joys to swell the general mass of the happiness of their common home; their sorrows they scarce deserve the name, so much was the burden of grief lightened to each when so equally divided among all.

Thus they had lived together for near 2 years when sometime last winter, I was called to prescribe for Doyle's little boy. The spectacle presented by these three united families, living in concord and love was delightful. At first I had some difficulty in ascertaining to which couple the little sufferer belonged, so equal was the interest evinced by all. The shoemaker almost ceased work lest little Phelim "the darlint," should be disturbed by the noise of the shoe hammer. His wife scarcely allowed her children to enter the house, during the day fearing that their racket might break Phelim's sleep. Farrell came home at least once a day to ask how the baby was, and each time "mug and would take one look at the sweet face of him, just to see, with his own eyes, if the life was'nt more in him." As for his wife, her whole care time and thought was devoted to the 'baby,' and t'was only for her frequent attempts to cheer up the mother that a stranger would have guessed that he was not her own.

At last I had the pleasure of pronouncing Phelim out of danger; and of a truth t'was hard to say what heart in all three, felt less swelled with the grateful thanks and thanksgivings. The event made a deep impression on my mind, and I often quoted the scene at No. 32 M——street as an illustration of the respectability and happiness within reach of the poor.

I was passing in front of the Watch House about 10 o'clock on the night of the celebration, when it occurred to me that I might possibly be wanted there, as our public rejoicings rarely pass over without furnishing the Watch house with a tenant or two. Friends, if such more serious injuries. I stepped in. 'Any thing doing, Captain?' 'Nothing y.—'tis scarcely time; but since you are here, you had better remain awhile, for to you we may want you before the evening is over."

Having no very pressing business, I resolved to spend an hour with my friend, the Captain. We had scarcely fairly seated ourselves and began a friendly chat, when a prodigious tumult at the door announced customers. Shouts, curses and screams, in mingled din, fell upon the ear, but high above the rest we distinguished the yells of a female: "He is dead, he's dead—murdered he is—my own darlint murdered!"

In another moment the whole confused throng burst into the room—men and women, old and young, black and white, watchmen and prisoners, hurrying towards the desk. The first figure that attracted my attention was the yelling mother. She was a young, and though her clothes had apparently been torn off her back, yet the fragments that remained were of good quality. They were evidently the tatters of a best dress. Over her shoulders was flung a blanket, which she had gathered in front, and pressed with both hands to her breast. Her face was flushed, her eyes suffused and her gait unsteady. She had evidently been drinking.

Behind her stood another woman with dress less disordered, but so much intoxicated, the supporting arm of the watchman was necessary to prevent her from falling to the floor. She was overwhelmed with drunken grief, and poured out a flood of senseless tears. The group was made up of the usual materials for such a scene—men and women, whose inflamed eyes, bloated faces, and senseless clamor, bespoke them the victims of the Great destroyer.

With the utmost trouble the Captain silenced their brawling, and one of the watchmen just began his usual story, in which "drunking," "quarreling, and fighting," were the most frequent words, when the woman, whose clamor for her child had almost deafened us, sprang forward to where I sat: 'O! doctor dear, doctor dear, he's dead, he's dead—it's murdered entirely he is." I looked at the poor creature who thus claimed my acquaintance, but failed to recognize her. "I don't know you, my good woman; what is your name?" "Nor know me! why doctor dear, and I Bridget Doyle, and didn't ye save the life of my Phelim and my own, and Dennis, all the same, for sure we would have died with him, but he's dead, dead!"

I allowed the poor creature to run on with her ejaculations, for I was struck dumb. If a thunder bolt had fallen at my feet, I could not have been more astonished. Recovering my senses, I cast one look at Bridget; another on those who surrounded her. I saw it all. There was Callaghan the shoemaker, and his wife, and behind them their two boys, that had evidently been turned out of bed, with scarce time to huddle on their clothes. Farrell too, was there; and the poor driveling drunkard, in the arms of the watch was his wife.

While I made a hasty survey of the scene poor Bridget pushed her way behind the railing, and coming close to where I sat unfolding the blanket which I had supposed she wore only as clothing, and exposed the body of her child. A glance told her's was no groundless alarm. The little boy was dead. The blue contracted lips, the deadly pallic cheek, the sunken eyes—all told of death. The sight of the corpse re-awed the frantic grief of the mother: her shrieks filled the room. Suddenly she ceased, and with her dead child still in her arms, she made her way back to where Mrs. Farrell stood. "O! Mrs. Farrell how had ye the heart to do it?"

Prepared as I am now by sad experience, at the sight of drunkenness, for every form and variety of consequent horror, I could not doubt that misery had turned Bridget's brain. Mrs. Farrell murdered her child? Impossible.

After vain attempts to obtain from either of the parties an intelligible explanation of the sad scene before us, we had to resort to Callaghan's children. Their account I will try to condense into a few lines, for I have already far exceeded my proposed limits.

It chanced that the Celebration day fell this year on the anniversary of Callaghan's wedding. The happy coincidence was seized as an excuse for a family festival. The usual frugal limits to which all three families confined themselves, was for this occasion, to be utterly disregarded. A turkey was duly roasted, and various other dainties provided. The unwonted frequency of Mrs. Callaghan's visits to the grocer's attracted his attention. He asked the reason, and when told of the proposed feast: he praised and recommended his Old Irish Whiskey so highly, that poor Callaghan was persuaded, instead of the single modest pint he had intended to buy, (for he and his friends were comparatively temperate,) to take two bottles.

Reader, may the rest be told? It were scarce necessary but for the horrid catastrophe.

The feast began; joy passed into tumult; then came dispute, anger, blows, and a general fight. Farrell was beaten almo st to a mummy by Dennis Doyle, whose wife (for the women as well as the men took their share of the poison, and of its fruits) had her clothes nearly torn from her back by Callaghan. Mrs. Farrell after fruitlessly struggling to free her husband from the iron grasp of Doyle, broke up stairs, swearing vengeance upon Doyle, his wife and child. The mother heard the savage threats against her child and escaping from Callaghan followed Mrs Farrell to the stairs.—Scarce had she made the first step, when from above, the shouts of the drunken fury are heard. Another instant and the little innocent was dashed over the bannisters. He fell dead at his mother's feet.

Peoria (Ill.) March, 31.

Arrival Extra.—A queer looking craft was seen crossing our lake on Wednesday under full sail, which after exciting much curiosity and conjecture, turned out to be a cause of most unreasonable dimensions. It was 40 feet long, 8 feet 'beam' in the clear, 2½ feet hold, and will carry 25 barrels of flour, or 2 cords of wood. It belongs to Mr. J. S. Adams, the proprietor and occupant of the flouring mill two miles from here on the opposite side of the lake, and was made from a cotton wood tree by some of his wood choppers. It runs up the tan race to his mill door, receives a cargo, hoists sails, sets the lee board and skims over here in 15 or 20 minutes. In the absence of a wind it is worked by oars, and altogether the completest dug out we ever saw.—Register.

The Horrors of Slavery.

Extract from a speech recently delivered in the House of Lords, by Lord Brougham.

The statement which he was about to submit to their lordships he had on authority which could not for an instant be doubted—that of Mr. Laird, the companion of Mr. Oldfield, and unfortunately now the only survivor of an attempted journey into the interior of Africa. According to his statement, it appeared that the cruiser did not go to the port where the slaver was about to take in her cargo. The effect of that would be, that the cargo would not be brought down, and of course if there were no slaves captured, there would be no head money to be received by the crew of the cruiser. The practice of the cruiser was, that when she was informed of a slaver lying at or near to any particular harbor, she put out to sea to such a distance, as that she could barely keep the harbor in sight, while she herself could not be seen from the harbor. She there watches the slaver, and gives chase the moment she comes in sight; and here came an inevitable exaggeration of the miseries to which the unhappy slave was subjected. It was well known that the great object in the construction and outfitting of a slave ship, is a swiftness of sailing to this every consideration he would not say of humanity for the slave, for he was not so absurd as to expect any thing humane from those employed in this mystery of iniquity, as the slave trade had been called, but every consideration, he might say, of even the safety of the ship itself was sacrificed. The slaver was not constructed on the principle, which with respect to all vessels carrying passengers had been rendered necessary by a bill which had passed the Legislature some years ago. She was made in every way for rapid sailing, and was only so broad enough to give her a hold on the water with her sails set. There was no consideration whatever for the misery endured by the slaves, who were passed in between decks by absolute pressure, as if they were dead goods. That was one cause of the misery they endure; but there is another to which he could not refer without a degree of horror which he felt it impossible to describe, and which he was hopeless of impressing on their lordships in its true colors, though he had made up his mind to narrate it as it had been mentioned to him—and this horrible practice was also to be traced up to the system of head money allowed on the recapture of slaves. Their lordships were aware of a practice which existed in this country for many years of allowing certain rewards for the conviction of felons of a particular class, which reward were not unaptly termed "blood money." One effect of that bad practice was to cause the commission, in many cases of the offences which it was intended by severity of punishment to prevent. Parties were sometimes inveigled into crime for the sake of the reward on this conviction. He did not suppose that the system of head money would have the first effect of blood money, for he did not believe that the cruisers created in any way the crime which they were intended to prevent; but blood money had another effect. A man by bribes and petition the reward was to be obtained, was allowed to go on in the commission of crime on the ground that he was not yet of "weight enough," and his crimes were examined at until he became as the phrase went, of sufficient weight—that was, until head-money could be obtained. He now came to another part of this enormous system of robbery and murder. When a slave ship was chased by any of our cruisers her officers and crew calculated with themselves whether they should fight on their vessel, and try and get back to the port from which they started, and there replace the loss of part of their cargo, or whether they should try and get across the Atlantic with even a part of their cargo. Their lordships were not aware of the terrible amount of human suffering involved in the words "with even a part" of their cargo. In trying to escape the pursuing cruiser, the slave captain begins lightening his ship by throwing overboard the heavy out of the entrepon, who are as valueless to him as any lumber on board. Men women and children were thrown overboard without remorse, and in numbers proportioned to the distance which the pursuing ship might be gaining on him. The slaves were thrown over with the fetters placed on them before they were brought on board—fetters which were considered necessary, first, for the protection of the crew against the multitudes of slaves, and also to prevent mutiny, and, secondly, to which the slaves were ever ready to resort, in an opportunity presented itself on their voyage. It might be supposed that these fetters were fastened with a padlock, which the captain could unfasten at his pleasure and that such a mode of fastening would be adopted to facilitate the escape of the slave in case of fire or of shipwreck; but nothing of the kind was done. There was no padlock. The fetters were riveted by the smith before they came on board, and were not opened on until they were brought to the market to be sold. Another object of the fetters was, that when it became necessary to throw parties over to lighten the ship, they when cast in, fetters and all would have the less chance of escape. To lessen that chance weights were sometimes added,—for the negro, with the Herculean strength which he generally possessed, and from that facility of swimming which gave him a sort of amphibious nature, could easily keep afloat by his own unfettered exertions, support himself in the waves until the pursuing schooner came up, and if taken on board would prove a most important witness against those who had torn him from his native home; to prevent the the weights were added, when sunk him before aid could arrive; but that was not the only mode of lightening the vessel. Sometimes three unhappy beings were packed closely in a cask, which was thrown over with weights attached to it, and one slaver which was pursued and before she was captured thrown over twelve such casks, each closely packed with human beings. In another instance two slave ships which were chased had had upwards of 500 slaves on board, every one of whom met a watery grave. let not their lordships imagine that this was a fancy sketch. It was unfortunately a fact of too frequent occurrence. He knew he had said enough to impress on their lordships a due notion of the attrocities of this horrid system, but were he disposed to go into detail, he could say more.

The Boston Mercantile Journal publishes an account of a woman near South St. Marie, who on the 31st of January, during the cold, expected a blessed of her husband that he had been frozen on his way home started in pursuit of him with her infant in her arms.

"There is reason to believe that she proceeded about two miles with her child in her arms, and then finding some difficulty in proceeding further she retraced her steps, and had arrived within a few rods of the wigwam, when she was so overcome with the cold that she was unable to proceed further and was found frozen standing in the snow. The child was found at the distance of 20 yards, carefully wrapped in clothes while the mother had stripped from her own person. Both were dead.

The husband was safe, and had been kept from home by drunkenness. He ought to be hung for murder.

From the Trenton State Gazette.

Hints to Young People.—No. 3.

To improve time well, we must use it as it passes. Seize every moment as it flies. When it is past, it is gone forever.

Let every young person make himself sure of the fruits of a well spent youth. If he would have a good character in manhood, he must lay its foundations and build a large part of its superstructure in his younger days. The youthful mind lays hold of principles with a lively relish. Young people have a peculiar pleasure in virtue, if they once become established in its ways. They enjoy their right principles and actions more than maturer people do. They have a keener sensibility to every thing that gives them pleasure; and of course, as lively a sensibility to the pleasures of virtue as to any others.

It is hard correcting an established bad character. A man who has formed a bad character, and bad habits, in his youth, must labor hard in manhood, to make small corrections in them, and with all his efforts, he can make only here and there a bright spot, like new cloth upon an old garment, while the ground work remains unchanged.

If you insert a bud in the side of a full grown tree, it may live a short time and put forth a single leaf, till the juices of the bud and stem are exhausted, and then it dies. It never grows to become a part of the tree. It cannot change the current of the sap in the tree, so as to secure sufficient nourishment to itself. But insert a bud in a tender sapling, and it incorporates itself at once with the growing and flexible fibres of the tree, applies to itself a suitable proportion of nourishment, and becomes an important part of the tree.

So it is with good principles. If a young person wishes to turn them to any good account, in his future life, he must establish them firmly in his early years.

The vices of children, may with proper care, be corrected in youth so that they will be forgotten and will leave no stain on the character of the man. But not so of the vices of youth. They are long remembered even if they are corrected, as they very seldom are. Many an unhappy man has borne, through life, the infamy of his youthful vices. Having discovered his errors too late to correct them, he is embarrassed and dispirited by the mortified counte nance and the frowning and discouraged look of a reluctant half-the unrelenting reproach of a virtuous community, he shrinks away into obscurity and insignificance, and dies in his shame.

CHARLES CRAYON.

Another shocking instance of the fatal consequences arising from the detestable practice of carrying deadly weapons is narrated as follows in the Louisville Journal of the 16th inst. at:

"There was, we understand a bloody piece of work in Smithfield in this state, on Friday last. A gentleman from that place relates the circumstances to us as follows: A physician boarding at a tavern in the town, offered an insult to the landlady in the absence of her husband, and she ordered him in consequence of it to leave the house immediately.—He refused to go, and the bar keeper, with a view to enforce the order, followed him to his room.—The physician, after ordering him to leave again, and threatening the bar keeper with instant death if he approached. The bar keeper, nevertheless, continued to advance and the physician shot him through the body whereupon the former drew a Bowie knife and laid his antagonist dead upon the spot. The physician died with scarcely a struggle, and the bar keeper breathed his last shortly afterwards.

An Indifferent Judge.—A deceased upright and able chief justice of one of our courts, was once obliged thus to address a southern jury:—"Gentlemen of the jury, in this case, the counsel on both sides are unintelligible; the witnesses on both sides are incredible; and the plaintiff and defendant are both such bad characters, that to me it is indifferent which way you give your verdict."

The editor of the Passaic Guardian, sneers at a citizen, once a bank director, because he was elected to the office of Pound Keeper. Why in Boston, recently, several bank directors were convicted of being "pound keepers" without being elected at all.—Rhinoy Herald.

Since the arrival of specie, mentioned in our last, two half-dollar pieces have changed hands. Ere this they have been hauled down with their brethren. "It's a hard currency what don't circulate," Sam Weller says.—Ib.

The present crippled state of business has brought about one good result, at least, although there are hundreds of bad ones, viz; people have been taught, that however easy it was to raise money and property, three or four years since, it is quite as easy now to raise potatoes, turnips and string beans.—Ib.

Good Example.—The Boston papers mention that a dishonest person who made a noise at one of the public meetings at the close recently, had to pay twenty dollars for his folly. Since then there has been the utmost order and quietness.

It is reported that the freedom of the city of New York is to be conferred on Mr. Roberts, [illegible]

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

The General Banking Law passed at the late session of the New York Legislature, provides that any number of persons, foreigners or natives residents or otherwise, can establish a Bank with a capital not under $100,000 but to any amount beyond, by paying in trust, under the State comptroller, United States or State Stocks, to half the amount—the other half in good mortgages on real estate. The association is then unlimited in its banking operations, the specie remaining always as a basis, 12½ per cent. in specie of its issues. The bills must all be signed by the Comptroller, and the original capital—half stocks half good mortages—remain always in trust as a fund to redeem the issues in case of revulsion, accident or mismanagement.

One of the papers remarks upon it as follows—

In pursuance of this new state of things, we learn that several banks of very large capitals, on the new system are already organizing in Wall street—one in particular of at least $30,000,000 of capital. Isaac S. Bronson is said to be preparing one—the Barings of London probably another—and several Free Companies think of turning their institutions into Banks. Mr. Biddle can also organize his Agency in Wall street to any extent he pleases under the new law.

"In short, we begin a new era, start on a new voyage—and if the next six months do not witness expansions, speculations, and excitements beyond what has ever been seen in any civilized age it will be entirely owing to the veto of Azariah S. Flagg, the Comptroller of the State of New York, who by the law, is made a greater man, and will wield more power than did Napoleon, Caesar, or Nicholas, of Russia.

The Albany Cultivator, Jesse Buel's paper, publishes several articles, showing the manifest utility of spring harrowing winter grain, and explaining the why and wherefore.

The Cultivator advises that in every case 8 or 10 pounds of clover seed be sown to the acre before the harrow is introduced. It will repay the expense of seed, in the fertility it imparts to the soil to say nothing of the value of the herbage to the farm stock.

The philanthropists of the Country, we rejoice to see are protesting against the course of the administration towards the Cherokees. Petitions from all quarters are sent to the Senate and the House, praying that the fraudulent treaty may not be ratified. They are systematically laid up on the table. It is said there has been some ten or twelve from Pennsylvania, in all, bearing ninety thous nd signatures—one of them ten thousand—There have also been some from Ohio, some from Boston. The people will not be silent, but are determined to deny any participation in the wrong, if the wrong must be done."

A similar remonstrance is in circulation in this city.

The comparitive quantity of Sugar, Tea, &c. consumed in England and Fra ce, is nearly as follows. Sugar four pound in England to one in France; Tea, one hundred to one; Coffee, eight to twenty; Tobacco, sixteen to seven; Wine six gallons in England to seven hundred in France spirituous liquors, twenty eight to five; beer, four hundred and twenty five millions of gallons in England against one hundred and fifty millions in France.

LAND HO!—Yesterday was a proud day for New York. It witnessed the restoration of specie payments in less than twelve months from the time of suspension, and after one of the most disastrous tide revulsions which ever happened. Such a recovery from such a wreck, the world never before saw. It is attributable, under the blessing of Heaven, to the energy, the sound intelligence, good sense, and moral integrity of our citizens. The Banks have resumed on the fullest scale of the term. They have also returned to the use of their own notes, which they now pay out as formerly. The hearts of our citizens were filled with joy at this, as w ll they might be.

The arrival of the two steam ships also, from Europe, in such a manner as to remove all doubt about the entire feasibility of n vigating the Atlantic in this manner was a most important and joyous gratifying event. It brings us within 15 to fifteen days of Europe, and gives us such increased certainty as well as quickness that a new era opens upon us. Take it all in all, we think a commercial community were seldom more happy than ours yesterday.—Jour. of Com.

Twenty thousand Mexican dollars were deposited on Saturday in one parcel. The coin recently from the Bank of England is depositing, and in fact there is nothing better can be done with coin of any sort, unless it be pillar dollars. Specie and bank notes are of even value, without resumption. In fact, we have got resumption in the natural way, and we don't understand how we are to get rid of it.

Our Banks we believe, re ready to pay specie for their bills or for deposites, but whether they are or not, we are authorized to say that the Boston Banks can have coin at par for N. York funds, from the quantity just arrived, and so can Philadelphia. We will forever, then as many millions as they can give us checks for on any New York Bank. In fact, specie is more plenty than potatoes, and it would be very strange if an eastern bank should say it could not pay its notes in potatoes. We repeat, if the Banks can pay any thing, they can pay specie.—Jour. of Com.

The Two Steam Ships Arrived.—The steam packet SIRIUS and GREAT WESTERN both arrived at New York on Monday of last week; the first in 19 days from Cork, and the latter in 15 days from Bristol. They now lie in the harbor, and attract crowds of visitors. The Sirius is a vessel of 700 tons, with engines of 320 horse power; and has been fitted up in a most splendid manner. She is schooner rigged and sits high on the water.

Her boilers were supplied the whole way with fresh water by means of a distilling apparatus, which converted the salt into fresh water. The distilling worms small copper tubes measure near four miles.

She had a very stormy and trying passage, but performed admirably equal to the highest expectations of her commander Lieut. Roberts of the Royal Navy.

She brought 40 passengers.

The Great Western Lt. Hosken, R. N. is thus describe:—

This new and magnificent Ship has been built by the Great Western Steam Ship Company," as the first of a line of packets expressly designed to accomplish the object of a regular sta m communication between America and Europe; and every thing that science and practical knowledge can furnish has been provided to render her a safe and in every respect eligible, conveyance for passengers and goods. Her length over all is 234 feet, beam 35 1-2 feet depth 23 1-2 feet—admeasurement 1340 tons—her engines of 450 horse power. Her accommodations for passengers are of the most superior description. She has State rooms, &c. for 120 first class passengers, besides 20 good secondary berths, and if required 100 more sleeping berths can be conveniently arranged.

She came up in the city in fine style, turned a circle round the Sirius, and proceeded up the East River to Judd's wharf. It is said that her voyage has been almost in a straight line across the Atlantic. The weather has been good, except that the wind has been ahead and the sea rough It is also said she has had as little motion that it has not been necessary to put battens on the tables, and that only once has there been motion to upset cups and saucers. She took in six hundred tons of coal, of which perhaps two hundred remain.

The great steam ship "British Queen, (first called the Victoria,) of 1800 tons, was about to be launched when the Sirius sailed. She is said to be a model of naval architecture. Immediately after launching she was to be taken to Glasgow to receive her engines, which have been constructed by Napier.

LOOK ON THAT PICTURE THEN ON THIS.—The London bills of mortality for 1837 give the number of deaths at "nearly six thousand." There is nothing remarkable in this, but the fact that only ONE of that number was murdered! and that in a population exceeding a million and a half!—and greater by hundreds of thousands than any State in this Union, except New York and Pennsylvania; the latter of which, but little more than equals it, and she has a less number of murderers than an equal number of population in any other parts of the Union.

There are States in this great valley, with not a sixth part of the population of London whose murders will average one a week, the year round; and to this the comparisons of the population of London is such, and the mass of extreme poverty so great, that thousands are driven to the perpetration of crime to obtain bread, while in the States of this valley it may be obtained almost without an effort. But in London "Burke and Hare and Arkansa about picks," not known, nor do a man "takes responsibility," he has to make it good, even with his life.

Murderers are not hailed out there, and these are coin for it. Have we not an everlasting chatter about the "march of mind," an "the school master being abroad," in our land, and an everlasting excitement kept up on some theme, or rather pretended, those who would mind their own affairs from being called Shabby and mean? Have we not proclaimed to the world thousands and millions of times, that we are the most enlightened people on earth, and I same among us ought to think so? No doubt of it. Yet the ignorant and starving among a million and a half in London cannot but excel murder in a year; while here, among the most enlightened people on earth, a population of two or three hundred thousand will commit five times the same period!!!

"If ignorance is blis,
'Tis folly to be wise."

It is said that Dr. Brandreth has gone to New Orleans to charter a steamboat to carry pills into the Mississippi valley—the engines to be worked by pills of 100 horse power.

Speech of a Prosecuting Attorney in Indiana.—Now, gentlemen of the jury, this are a case. But I'll tell you one thing. Ever since I have been prosecuting attorney, there is certain big bugs of the law that has tried to take over my rough shod; but, thank heaven, I have risen triumphantly over the rights and liberties of the law; yes, I rise indignantly above the jurisdiction of cavilry in a blaze of glory.

Post Office Specie Circular Revoked.—The bills of all the city banks are now to be received at the New York Post Office for postage. The Commercial also says that instructions have been received authorizing the collector of customs in the city to receive all the notes of the city banks We do not issue paper of a less denomination than five dollars. A section of a recent law prevents the receipt of such notes. The banks in the city which have not availed themselves of the late law of the state are the Manhattan, Bank of America, and bank of the state of New York.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, April 20.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill to prevent the issuing and circulation of the notes of the late bank of the United States.

After much debate it was ordered to a third reading. 27 to 14.

The resolution offered by Mr. Preston, for the annexation of Texas to the U. S. was made the order of the day for Monday. Several anti-slavery petitions were presented. The Senate adjourned over to Monday.

The House was occupied with the Cumberland road bill nearly all day, and it finally passed 96 to 89.

Mr. Randolph, from the committee on Agriculture, reported a joint resolution to authorize the President to lease gratuitously, for ten years any lot of land belonging to the U. S. and not included in the enclosed or public lands, for the cultivation of the mulberry and sugar beet.

Saturday, April 21st.

In the House, Mr. Toucey, chairman of the committee of investigation of the late duel, presented a report. Mr. Grennell then submitted a minority report, signed by himself and Mr. Bayard. Mr. Gilmore of S. C. presented a report for himself, not agreeing with either.

Before the question was put, and pending the motion to print, the house adjourned.

The Committee consists of 7 members. So 4 agreed to the majority Report. Not a line of either Report was read.

In relation to Mr. Graves, the recommendation is in the following words;

"The committee, therefore, viewing the breach of the rights and privileges of the House on the part of Mr Graves, to have been an offence of this high character, against the vital principle of a deliberative assembly and of repres ntative Government, feel constrained, by a sense of duty to present to the house a resolution that he be expelled therefrom.

With regard to the seconds, the committee declare they deserve the censure of the House.

In conclusion, the report says;

"The committee entertain no doubt that James Watson Webb has been guilty of a breach of the privileges of the House; but they also concur unanimously in the opinion, that if there be any real ground to believe that a conspiracy to assassination actually existed, as set forth in that atrocious paper drawn up by him, signed by Daniel Jackson and William H. Morrel, sworn to by the latter, and published in the New York Courier and Enquirer, he be left to the chastisements of the courts of law and of public opinion, and that the House will consult its own dignity and the public interest by bestowing upon him no further notice."

Any speculation as to the course of the House on the subject is idle. But it is not to be presumed that the requisite majority of two thirds for expulsion could be obtained, even if a bare majority could be.

Monday, April 23.

The Senate, after debating all day on the bill respecting the U. S bank, finally passed it, by a vote of 27 to 13.

The proceedings in the house we copy from the Newark Daily Advertiser:

The House has been all day engaged with a fruitless debate on the report of the Dueling Committee. Mr. Robertson, of Virginia, moved its reference to a Committee of Privileges, with instructions to report what in its opinion should be done with Graves, the second. The present Committee had entered upon it ex parte trial. Mr. Toucey, Chairman, vindicated the Committee, and said all parties implicated were duly notified, and that witnesses were freely examined and cross examined.—Mr. Wise jumped up and declared that he filed a written protest against the right of the committee or the House to meddle with his private affairs! By which I understand that he preferred to rely upon his own trusty weapons!

Mr. Elmore of S. C., also vindicated the course of the committee, as being required by the resolution appointing them. Mr. Thompson sustained Mr. Robertson's motion, and Mr. Glascock that to postpone and print. Jenifer objected to the course of the committee, and was in favor of laying the whole subject on the table. Mr. Fletcher, of Vt. thought the house should keep what the report contained before it, could act with gravity, and was therefore for printing. Mr. Duncan said the objection that the committee had transcended its powers, in not confining itself to the mere report of the facts it had ascertained, should have been made when it was appointed. They had been instructed generally and had so reported. It was too late to object.

Mr. Menefee called for the resolutions, and Mr. Bynum, as promptly, for the whole report. Mr. Bell objected to both, and Mr. M. proceeded to object to the report, and contended that members could be tried only by the House. Mr. Thomas and Mr. Fairfield supported the Committee, contending that the resolution required them to report something besides the facts. Messrs. Garland and Briggs thought they had transcended their powers, and opposed the printing, and Messrs. Turney and Cushman thought otherwise.

Mr. Adams thought the House should proceed cautiously, but promptly. He was opposed to postponement, and hoped the motion would be rejected; in which case he should move to strike out the resolutions and all the argumentive part of the report, and to present the bare facts to the House.

Mr. Elmore moved an adjournment the moment Mr. Adams sat down, but gave way long enough to enable Mr. C mbreleng to move the re-commitment of the bill to issue Treasury notes.

Tuesday, April 24.

In the Senate, after three petitions for an International copyright law had been presented, Mr. Preston's resolution for the annexation of Texas came up. Mr. Preston spoke at length in favor of it. He said his course was pacific. That he could prove that the territory belonged to the U. States. It belonged to France, and by them ceded to us. The Rio Del Norte was asserted as the true line as long ago as 1803. Our commissioners always insisted on this line until 1819. Mr. Monroe, Jefferson and Pinckney, all asserted that the U. S. were bounded on the south west by the Rio Del Norte.

He then went on to show that we had the right and the power to receive Texas,—we had the same right as Mexico had. It was also a matter of policy, we ought to receive Texas—that he discussed with much ability. He said the only argument against the annexation was Negro Slavery. He did not believe the annexation of Texas would increase the number of slaves, and by not annexing it we did not lessen their number —Texas would deal in slaves.

In the house the duel report was again taken up and debated all day, as yesterday without taking any question.

Wednesday, April, 25.

In Senate, the report of the S lect committee on the Ruggles case was called up and agreed to without dissent.

The house was entirely occupied with the report on the duel—the question being on postponing and printing, and the proposition of Mr. Robertson to refer the whole to a committee of privileges, with instructions to report as to the steps to be taken by the house. After much debate, the three reports were read on the call of Mr. Boon, and the house adjourned.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Tuesday Evening, May 1, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

New York was in a great stir all last week from the arrival of the expected steam packets from England, an account of which will be found in another column. The Sirius arrived there on Monday forenoon, and the Great Western in the afternoon of the same day. On Tuesday noon, the Mayor and city councils visited the Sirius, in barges, escorted by a fleet of other barges, all gaily dressed. The Sirius had the U. S. flag floating from one mast, and the British from the other—the band of the barges playing "God save the King," and that of the Sirius "Hail Columbia and Yankee Doodle." A full table was spread in the cabin, Capt. Roberts presiding, with the Mayor and Alderman Hoxie on each side.

After a number of toasts were drank and sentiments were interchanged, the company separated about 4 o'clock.

On Friday, the city authorities visited the Great Western, and on Saturday the ladies of New York, by special invitation.

The Sirius, it was positively announced would leave for England to day, May 1st. Several have taken passage in her, some of whom go out to witness the Queen's coronation; and expect after visiting the principal cities of France and England, to be back again in two months. She has superior accommodations, and is fitted with separate cabins for the accommodation of families. Fare in the first cabin, $140, including provisions, wines, &c. Second cabin, $80, including provisions.

The Canada Insurrection.—The trials of several of the leaders in the Canada revolt have been proceeding for some time, and we know not that they are all yet finished. We learn by the newspapers that seven of them were to have been executed on the 20th ult. and that two others, Lount and Matthews were executed on the 12th. Mr. Sutherland has been banished to Van Dieman's Land, and it is feared that Mr. John G. Parker, an estimable American citizen, will share the same fate—all for high treason. Now, much as we disapprove of the Canada revolt, we must say that we as highly disapprove of this wholesale butchery. We thought mild measures were to be used in this case, and not hanging, and we think it would be found more effectual in the long run. Mr. Lount, who was hung on the 12th was formerly from Pennsylvania, but married in Canada, and was at the time of the insurrection a member of the Canadian parliament; he is represented to have been a very upright man, of fearless independence, and with an ardent love of justice and liberty. Ere long, the British Government will repent having hung such a man. It looks as if they would have hung our venerable Washington, had they been able to have got him in their power.

We do not mean to say, however, that the Canada revolt is worthy to be named in the same day with our revolution, but that men should rather be pardoned than hung for political offences.

Benjamin Lundy, the veteran editor of the Genius of Universal Emancipation, and till lately the editor of the Pennsylvania Freeman has concluded to resume the weekly publication of the former in the state of Illinois. If practicable, the first number of the sixteenth volume will be issued early in July. The Genius of Universal Emancipation has been published, at different places, in various forms, nearly 17 years. It has been published in Ohio, Tennessee, District of Columbia, Maryland and Pennsylvania; and it has ever advocated, and ever intends to advocate the Total Abolition of Slavery. May he and it be prospered in Illinois.

Baltimore Election.

The Whigs are again victorious,—we have, now-a-days, to record a whig victory almost weekly. A special Congressional election to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. McKim, (V. B.) was held in Baltimore on Wednesday last, and Mr. Kennedy, the whig candidate, was elected by a majority of about 800. The district comprises the cities of Baltimore and Annapolis, and the county of Ann Arundel. The Whig majority in Baltimore was about 600, in Annapolis, 10, and in the county, near 200.

At the regular Congressional election last July, the Van Buren ticket was elected by a majority of about 250.

Congressional.—On Thursday, 26th, the Senate was engaged on the bill to create a board of Commissioners to examine and report on private claims against the United States, which was ordered to a third reading.

The house was again engaged all day with the diel. The following is a copy of the resolutions appended to the report of the committee, which was read on Wednesday :

Resolved, That Wm. J. Graves, a member of this House from the State of Kentucky, in bearing to the late Jonathan Cilley, then a member of this House, the demand for explanation of words spoken in debate, demanding his reasons for declining to receive it, and challenging him, and engaging in a late duel with him, which terminated in his death, has been guilty of a breach of the privileges of this House.

And be it further Resolved, That the said W. J. Graves for said breach of privilege be, and hereby is, expelled from this House.

Resolved, That Henry A. Wise, in bearing a challenge to the late Jonathan Cilley, then a member of this House, and acting as a second to the challenger in the duel, which terminated in the death of Mr. Cilley, has been guilty of a breach of the privileges of this House, and that he deserves the decided censure of this House, and hereby is censured accordingly.

Resolved, That Geo W. Jones, in acting as second to the challenged party, the late Jonathan Cilley, then a member of this House, in the duel which terminated in his death, has been guilty of a breach of the privileges of this House, and that he be, therefore, and hereby is, censured accordingly, by this House.

The reading of the documents accompanying the report occupied the whole day.

Within the last two weeks business has very materially revived in New York, and there is every reason to expect a speedy return to times of prosperity. Nearly all the papers speak of New-York as having in a measure resumed the appearance of former times. Specie is so abundant, that the banks have already commenced the resumption of specie payments,—two or three weeks before the time. We hope we shall soon feel the new impulse to a reviving business thro' the country.

☞ The Merchant's bank at Boston, one of the largest banks in that state, has resumed specie payments on all its notes.

The following characteristic anecdote is from the Journal of Commerce of Thursday last :

Yankee Competition.—On Tuesday there was a great crowd to see the Great Western, but she lay outside a Yankee schooner, across which it was necessary to pass to the steam ship. If there is a chance to make money, the Yankees are always sure to understand it. The captain of the schooner determined that he would not have his vessel made a highway of, for nothing, or he established a turn pike gate, and demanded sixpence toll. He made money hand over hand, until one of his neighbors, perceiving what was going on, hauled his sloop round so as to make a second passage, and put his toll at three pence. The business however, was very good, notwithstanding the reduction.

The Lexington (Va.) Gazette of the 5th inst. gives the following account of an unprecedented and destructive fire in the Virginia Mountains—

The high winds that Thursday was the cause of fire breaking out in many of the neighboring mountains, in this and the adjoining counties. Many farms were engaged in burning brush, and the wind rising suddenly where there was combustible matter, carried the flames before it almost as swift as the winged lightning. A gentleman informs us that a space of four miles, in Allegany was traversed in less than 15 minutes. The farms in the vicinity of the mountains have suffered most severely ; in many cases scarce a rail is left on the premises, and on three or four plantations all the out buildings have been destroyed, together with their contents. We understand that one gentleman alone has near 1000 bushels of corn, besides hay, fodder, &c. Iron manufactories, and other establishments which require large quantities of wood are the heaviest sufferers. A furnace in Allegany lost 1200 cords of cut wood, a coal wagon, and a valuable horse. Another in this county, 800 or 800 ; and another 500 cords. The loss including the labor which will necessarily be called from the spring farm work to build fences, &c. cannot be less than $50,000, perhaps more.

Looking up.—Messrs. Whitewell & Seaver's sale of dry goods—wool-ens and prints— yesterday, was the largest that has been held in this city for two years, and brought good prices—the sale went off in a spirited manner, indicating a revival of the good old fashioned business feeling. Every article on the catalogue was sold, smack and smooth, and a large number of duplicates.—Boston Post.

FOREIGN.

By the steam packets, late intelligence from England has been received.

The British Parliament were earnestly engaged with the subject of Slavery in their West India colonies, at the last dates. Petitions had poured into both Houses for the abolition of the apprentice system, and in favor of entire emancipation, from all parts of the Kingdom. Lord Brougham presented one from Leeds with 17,000 signatures. On the 19th March he introduced a bill in the Lords for the abolition of apprenticeship on the 1st of August next, which on his motion was ordered to be read a first time and printed. On this occasion the marquis of Sligo said that he had been forced to change his opinions, by circumstances which had come to his knowledge, and that he wanted very little to make him an entire abolitionist. Lord B. said that he had never heard a declaration that gave him more pleasure.

On the 22d Lord Glenelg's bill for ameliorating the condition of the slaves, shortening their hours of labor and increasing their privileges, was reported to the Commons.

The subject continued to be discussed until the 30th in both Houses, when Lord Glenelg's bill passed the Commons, 269 to 205. Mr. O'Connel, and others, spoke six hours in support of it.

Reply to the Letter of E. C. Delavan, Esq. to the Queen of England, accompanying a Present to her Majesty of Mr. Sargent's Temperance Tales.

By a late packet the following has been received by Mr. Delavan, in reply to his letter published in our Ocean number. The value of the reciprocal communication will be perceived by such as consider that in Europe an individual moves a nation. If this youthful female, elevated in the providence of God to the throne of Britain, could by this or any other incident be induced to blot out the plague spot of drunkenness from her dominions, what prosperity would she impart to the millions sitting at her feet ; what a diadem of glory would she secure to herself in the eyes of all future generations !

E. C. Delavan, Esq., Ballston Centre, Ser. Co. State of New York.

St. James's Palace, January 8, 1838.

Sir :—I have had the honor to submit your letter to her majesty and have sincere pleasure in being able to inform you that the queen has very graciously been pleased to acquiesce in the request therein expressed, and to accept of the four small volumes of Temperance Tales which accompanied it. Her majesty at the same time was pleased to command me to convey to you the expression of her entire satisfaction at this mark of your attention.

The subject indeed would not fail to create great interest. The efforts which are now making, both in America and this country, for the suppression of the resetting sin of intemperance, cannot but meet with her majesty's approbation ; and I think it will be gratifying to you to know that those passages in your letter which relate to your residence in England, and the effects likely to be produced here by an abandonment of this pernicious vice, are fully appreciated ; and more particularly that passage which assures her majesty that "your fervent prayer is, that England the land of our fathers, may experience her full share of the benefit of this great reformation."

I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

J. H. Glover, Her Majesty's Librarian.

More food for the marvellous.—It is stated in a foreign publication that in the library of Upsal, in Swed n, are deposited the mysterious iron coffers left by Gustavus III.—The period fixed by the royal will for the opening the coffers, falls this year, and it is expected that they will yield documents which will throw light upon the events of those times, hitherto involved in impenetrable darkness.

The Woodbury Constitution thus notices a vegetable curiosity :

A number of cabages that were buried last fall, on being uncovered this spring were found to be thickly sprinkled over with seed resembling cabbage seed perfectly formed, and on being broken or crushed seemed to have all the appearance of seed produced in the ordinary way. It was not all lying on the surface but a part enclosed within the folds of the leaves. The cabbage is of the drum head species.

Business like.—The vote of the Executive Committee for stereotyping Thome and Kimball's report on "Emancipation in the West Indies," and James Williams, "Narrative," for universal circulation, was passed on Thursday evening, the 5th of April : but from the time occupied by necessary preparatory arrangements, the copy was not placed in the hands of the stereotype founders until the Tuesday following, April 10. We now (April 25) have to report that the whole is stereotyped, the "Emancipation" in 123 pages 8vo, solid brevier type, double columns, and the "Narrative" in 8 pages 8vo ; and the first edition, of TEN THOUSAND COPIES of each work nearly is printed off, and ready for delivery.

☞ Send in your orders. The press goes night and day, 132 hours in a week.—Emancipator.

The Marlboro' House, a spacious Hotel in Boston, has been conducted upon the strictest principles of Total Abstinence, since June last, under Mr. Rogers : and it is said with great success.—There are 100 chambers nearly all of which have been constantly occupied. Smoking as well as drinking confined and fermented liquors is rigidly interdicted, and the religious services customary in private families, are held in the great hall morning and evening. A large and tasteful building called the Marlboro' Chapel (for service on the Sabbath) has been put up, adjoining the Hotel, which will seat two thousand persons. In the cellar beneath the building, it is contemplated to establish a suite of elegant bathing rooms, to be connected with the Hotel.

On the 18th ult. at New Durham, Peter Sours of Michigan, to Mary M. daughter of Stelle Manning, of the former place.

DIED.

In New Brunswick, suddenly, 17 ult. Guisebert Van Sickle, aged 56 years.

In Woodbridge, Henry Freeman, a worthy of the Revolution, aged 77 years.

From the N. Y. Evangelist

At Rochester, on the 24th ult. Edward Frederinghuysen, aged 15 months, youngest son of George and Electa Byington.

Sleep on, sweet infant ! pain no more shall rack
Thy little frame, and thou will wake no more ;
To taste the cup of bitterness. The seal
Of death is on thee, and that lovely brow
Is marbled for the tomb. Ah ! sculptor's hand
Hath never fashioned aught so beautiful,
So soft, so truly fair. Why is it thus !
Why didst thou come, and sport about awhile,
Then droop and wither ? Why twine round those hearts
As tendril to the vine, then tear away,
And leave them sad and desolate ? A voice—
A "still small voice"—is whispering. It is God !
Go, then, loved one, into thy prison-house ;
And may we soon go to dust ; we ask no more ;
Since He who traces cause and its effect,
With infinite discernment, and who loves
The highest good of all intelligence,
Hath ordered even this much dear we will bow,
And wait until eternity unfold
The wisdom of his plan. A. C. F.

A CARD.—To Ladies.

Mrs. Vermule begs leave to inform the ladies of Plainfield, and its vicinity that she intends carrying on the Dress and Habit Making business in all its varieties at the house lately occupied by Mr. Ludlow as a tavern stand, where she hopes by strict attention to merit a share of public patronage. May rest assured that her work will be done with neatness and in the newest fashion, and every customer shall receive satisfaction.

Mrs. V. begs leave to say to parents and guardians who have young ladies under their care, who desire to learn this occupation, she would be happy to take two young ladies immediately.

Plainfield, May 1st, 1838.

Somerset Orphans' Court.
Term of April 1838.

Upon the application of John and Thomas Simpson administrators of James Simpson late of said County deceased, to this Court, to limit and appoint a certain time within which the creditors of the estate of said deceased, shall bring in their debts demands and claims against the same—or that such creditor, shall have no notice being given, be forever barred of his or her action against the said administrators.

It is therefore ordered by the Court, that the said administrators give public notice to the creditors of said deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said estate within one year from this time by setting up such notice in five of the most public public places in the County, for the space of two months, and also by advertising the same for a like space, in a newspaper, published in this state.

And if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, in the said period of one year after public notice given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said administrators.

Dentistry.

Dr. Dayton has returned to Plainfield, and is at Mr. Jacob Thorn's, where he will be happy to wait on any who may desire his services.

He has on hand a large quantity of the best Premium incorruptible Teeth,—which will be inserted in the best manner and on the most reasonable terms, and in a majority of cases without pain. He warrants the Teeth which he inserts not only to stand but to please ; and to those who are dissatisfied he will refund their money.—Those who have lost all their teeth either in one or both jaws may have them replaced in such a manner as to chew their food comfortably, and the operation is not painful in the least.

DECAYING TEETH restored to health, and effectually prevented from decaying more

Old Stumps of Decayed Teeth, which have become useless are also very injurious, and should be removed. Dr. Dayton will not promise to extract them without pain, pain, but he is provided with instruments which render the operation as little pain ful as possible.

The operation of cleaning, by removing the Tartar, which deduces and injures them, is a great benefit in cases where none is required, and it not only renders the teeth white and beautiful, but often prevents decay, and if properly performed it reflects no injury on the enamel or hard covering of the teeth.

Tooth Ache can be cured in many instances without the loss of the tooth, and heal frequently in five minutes

Examinations and advice gratis. Ladies waited on at their dwellings if they prefer it.

ASHLEY HALL Family School.

THE design of this School is the instruction of Boys in the Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, and in all the solid branches of a thorough English Education. In the accomplishment of this design, great care is taken to procure teachers that are both competent and faithful, and equal care to secure eminent effort and the love of good order on the part of the pupils themselves. The government is administered with kindness and impartiality, but without harshness. Its chief aim is the prevention rather than the punishment of offences. Much solicitude is felt, and simple provisions are made, to secure, as far as possible the health, comfort and safety as well as the intellectual and moral culture of every pupil, during the hours of school, recreation and rest. The sacred Scriptures are received as the only standard of morals; and religious instruction is given without inculcating the peculiar doctrines of any one class of men.

Two sessions of twenty-three weeks each compose a year. One commences regularly on the first Monday in May,—the other on the first Monday in November.

The expense of board, including tuition, washing, fuel and lights, is $200 a year, to be paid quarterly in advance. Each boarder must furnish his own bed, bed-clothes and towels, or pay $20 a year for the use of them. Bedsteads are furnished without charge. An extra charge is made for instruction in the modern languages.

Every article of dress and of bedding should be plainly marked with the name of the owner entire.

This school, though intended chiefly for the instruction of such as shall board in the family of the principal, is nevertheless open for the reception of a few day scholars. They are expected however at all times, and on all occasions, to yield a prompt and cheerful obedience to every rule of the institution; and the public may rest assured that no idle, indocile, or incorrigible boy shall be permitted to remain many days in either department.

The tuition bills of all day scholars, whose parents or guardians do not reside in the town must be paid in advance.

The building occupied by this School stands on the southernmost bank of Green Brook, in a retired part of Plainfield, one of the most quiet and healthy villages in the State of New Jersey. Both the site and plan of the building are admirably adapted to secure the objects of its erection. Its study rooms and dormitories are susceptible of free ventilation without exposure to the street. It is easy of access at all seasons of the year, either by public or private conveyance. The citizens of New-York, Newark, Paterson and New-Brunswick can visit the School in the morning and return to their homes in the evening of the same day with very little inconvenience.

The subscriber solicits a share of public patronage, and pledges himself to do all that he can to merit its continuance. EZRA FAIRCHILD.

PROSPECTUS OF THE New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood of rare, beautiful and popular subjects, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, &c. &c. containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and romances—and publish—critical notices—gently and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions as the arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the noted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecessor in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume! Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and selections from foreign journals will be made, to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquant fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish designs to illustrate the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week will be published one piece of music. Terms, four dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

The Emancipator,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE AMERICAN ANTI-SLAVE Y S CIETY At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings, publish the views, and extend the principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably no institution whose operations are more important to the honor and welfare of the American citizen. Combining the views of probably 200,000 citizens, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Society will doubtless have a powerful influence for weal or woe. We believe its principles, intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservatism of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, therefore forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. No pains will be spared to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

Terms.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who will forward the money for five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

No paper will be sent after the subscription is expired till authorized agents of the Anti-Slavery Society are requested to act as agents for this paper.

Address 143 Nassau street.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building is one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of College,—also to give a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not friends in the village, should board with the Principal of that department, as they will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

HORATIO BRYANT, } Principals.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of this School will commence, as usual, in May next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass., Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y. and Mrs. Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers, and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for the institution of the above kind. It is within 25 miles of New-York city,—to which as well as to Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access is at all times convenient by railroad.

SEAR'S AMERICAN VEGETABLE

Renovating Pills.

DR. SEARS would most respectfully announce to the citizens of Plainfield and its vicinity, that his Vegetable Renovating Pills have for several years past been extensively used throughout the country, and not an instance has occurred to his knowledge in which they have not had a salutary effect, and, in numerous cases, they have proved very efficacious.

Although they are not offered as an infallible cure for all diseases, yet there are few cases (if any) to be found in which they will not have a salutary effect. Their great excellency is in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Bilious affections, and diseases occasioned by a disordered state of the stomach and bowels, impurities of the blood, or obstructions in any of the natural secretions, and especially those peculiar to females, and habitual costiveness.

They are entirely vegetable, and have been the result of his own reasearches, occasioned by unusual sufferings from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for more than 30 years. They may with perfect safety be taken by both sexes, of all ages, in all cases of indigestion, and may not produce any other than a salutary effect in any—Their effects when taken according to the direction, will be to excite and maintain a natural peristaltic action in the stomach and bowels, and produce a free discharge from them of whatever morbid or bilious matter they may contain—to excite action in the liver and promote its secretions—to purify the blood—to equalize or to rid a circulation—and to aid all the different organs of secretion and excretion in the performance of their various functions. And in producing all these salutary effects they will not debilitate, but strengthen and invigorate the whole system.

☞ Circulars giving a more general description of their properties, and containing numerous certificates of their good effects, may be gratuitously obtained at this Office where the Pills are for sale. 1tf

THADEUS DAVID'S

WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the clearness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying so quickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become sour or muddy, never having any sediment; and lastly, for power or durability, and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing Bills of Exchange, Wills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be imposed by sea air.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the New York Mirror.

The Queen and the Peasant.

Courts and palaces have their tribulations. Power and splendour cannot so fill the throne, that Grief shall not find room to edge in her wasted form. But the affliction which solaces the maid of the street, or the chambers of the wealthy, is no more the same with that which visits the naked cottage of the peasant, or accosts the desolate wayfaring man, that the light which is sent through an opal screen is the same with that which the sun darts at noon day upon the quivering eye-ball of the fevered sick. Life and all its changes are to the one, ever vested in a reflecting atmosphere, which prevents their being seen in their native colors, or lent in their real form; to the other the world is a bare and a bald thing—a harsh and rocky promontory, that, shapeless in its dull severity, strike at morn, at midday and at eve, frowns on in wrinkled rudeness. The least evil of poverty is physical suffering; the wasting away of the manly spirit, the crushing of the mental independence the bending back of the generous affections, the weighing down of the energies, are the paralysing of hope, by the racking anguish of otherwise owed disappointment—these are the train of poverty, which make its presence so ghastly. Wisely did the Omniscient say, "He who has not been poor, has not known misery."

Beneath the frosted roof of Windsor's storied palace, in the halls as palaces of royal pomp, on a couch, where the purple of Turkey contended with Cumbria's wadie, reposed a soft and youthful queen. The infant offspring of tender love, the royal representative of a line of kings, the hope of nations, lay dead beside her. What calamity! The arm of an affectionate husband encircled her; the consoling sympathy of millions poured her; on on her head the choicest blessings of heaven were invoked, by all that was honorable and virtuous in the land; subject citizens were weeping with her. What consolation! Her mind rested in that of a fond and grieving father, and a devoted mother led on over her in tenderest imposition.—so that love of the living, who there to soften the grief for the dead. At her feet, in the whole nature of the crape, stood the primates of God's church, to lead her thoughts to heaven; and religion almost converted the scene into a gala. A frequent hour since had her eye, which joy might have mistaken for her own. Were she generous, the deep grief of others had checked their signs; were she selfish, the suffering of others had gratified her vo. Grief! Call you this grief! The lonely sign of the desolate heart—the sickening bitterness of memory—the appalling suggestions of the future—the horrid caucus in the thoughts, and the monotonous misery of existence—these belong to grief, but they belong to more. Death, here, was but a means of showing how profound and how large the riches of affection and piety. And this was greatness!

There resided, some years ago, in one of the central counties of Ireland, a young woman, who belonged to the better order of Irish peasantry, but who, together with her family and friends, was involved in narrow ignorance and rigid poverty. There had long subsisted an attachment between herself and the son of one of her neighbors whose profession, like her own, was that of a laborer in the fields. Their occupation brought them often together, and connection in regard to which want and difficulty were a natural temptation. After a few months he declared his intention of going to America, and very soon disappeared, leaving his wife in utter destitution. She lingered in her native country, supported by the bounty of friends, until the birth of her child—at which time she had not to seek for its unworthy father having borrowed enough money to pay for a voyage over the ocean. Her hope was, that the sight of his infant boy, joined to her own presence, might reclaim him from his ruinous courses. A tedious and suffering commencement of many weeks in the steerage of the ship, during which her own health and that of her child, naturally feeble in constitution, had sustained many injurious influences, she landed at New-York. In entering a great city for the first time, the prospect of a vast world of interests, with which the stranger has no connection, the sight of gayety and business which has no consciousness even of his existence, and the silent reproof which so much activity seems to give to his uselessness, might well urge an impression of loneliness amounting to pain, on the heart of the happiest and most self sustained; to her, the feeling was little less than despair. She looked around and saw but one face for her object, nor one compassionating eye; and a sense of desolation and a depression of energy and spirit, which scarcely any aggravating circumstance was wanting to complete. She had happened to be aware that her husband was in Baltimore, and as she had barely enough money to carry her [illegible] she was obliged to deny herself that food which her comfort and that of her infant demanded. She took her passage in the steamboat, and arriving there on the following day. As she sat on a hard pine bench as the boat went up the bay and looked round on the important or cheerful persons about her, or regarded the heartless bustle which was busy before her eyes, the pang of desolation entered deeply into her soul. Her child had been for some time exhibiting, by its restlessness and crying, those blind demonstrations of suffering, by which the helpless infant seeks relief. Her mother—but during the last afternoon, it had become more than commonly quiet, and only showed its discomfort by a faint and sickly moaning; she presently heard it breathing uneasily and irregularly—then beginning gradually heavier in her arms—then ceasing to move; it was dead!

When the boat had reached the wharf and the passengers had all gone off, she at last sat in a kind of dumb torpor, till the rude noise of the sailors coming to wash the deck, roused her to consciousness. She rose and walked mechanically to the shore. To find her husband in that great city, or to obtain a resting place for her lost, penniless as she was, hope itself could not expect. I saw her when she had reached the first corner of the street—and hesitated—to go, she knew not whither. She looked at me in silence. There was rigid smile, upon her lip, which took to be a token of present heart. I thought also, that I saw her slowly shake her head. God help thee, poor woman!" said I, as she passed beyond my sight: "thy man can do little for such misery as this!" And this was poverty!

Correspondence of the New York American.

Anecdote.—A brother in Paris, Feb. 6, 1837.

The severe cold intermitted for a few days last week, but has returned, though not with its original intensity. Four thousand laborers are daily employed in clearing the streets of the capital from ice and mud. We have not had, on an average more than 8 hours of light in the 24, since the beginning of December. London has not enjoyed 6. The climate of Paris is decidedly preferable through out the year, to that of Babylon the Great. You have more clear, finer weather, than either, cases of death by cold, or hunger within and without doors, in the streets and on the high roads, over the northern and middle parts of France, are numerous than even the many related in the newspapers with the most harrowing circumstances. The instances are not few, of persons possessing rather wealth or competency, found frozen to death in their chambers, who were too averse to purchase sufficient fuel for self preservation. It is not improbable that the same persons, who, able to go abroad, did not hesitate to spend on play tickets more than would have been necessary for a winter provision of domestic comfort. Strange force of general habit! The extreme frugality and self denial, the apparent artlessness of a great number of the rich in Paris, in household and personal details, would surprise you; but still they cannot be said to hoard their incomes; they practice closeness most minutely at home, in order to buy more gratifications abroad in theatres, concerts, balls, the fashionable rides, &c. There are so many temptations in Paris to small expenses—amusements and knick knackeure so multifarious and diversified—that the habit of self restraint or deliberation about the least disbursement must be acquired by all except the very opulent. Americans learn here what they seldom have occasion to learn in their own country the value of pennies. London is the most expensive place in the world by prices and gross charges. In Paris you are tempted to your ruin—you are drained by sous and francs, when you loiter abroad.

Miss Davenport, a little girl of eleven years, is making an excitement in the theatrical circles of London, by her personations of Richard III., and other of Shakespeare's characters. She is expected in this country.

Without virtue, good sense, and sweetness of disposition, the fine art of features will avail but little.—Skin deep beauty these with the graces are united, it must afford an agreeable and pleasing contemplation, and a beloved companion.

An edition of the Book of Common Prayer has been published in New York with the rubrics printed in red letters and of verse. This materially facilitates the use of the book in church, besides rendering the page more beautiful. This venerable work—one of the noblest legacies of the English Fathers to the christian world—deserves a place in every library; and the present edition would grace the parlor centre table.

Hints to Young People.—No. 2.

Young persons will do well to consider how much a good character is worth. They have a natural desire for the advantages of it. Let them not forget that, unless they have the character itself, they cannot enjoy its benefits.

A man's character is the state of his mind. If you exercise your mind with right thoughts and feelings, habitually, and as it were, by nature you have a good character, and the man of good character is the happy man. You may be rich, hndred, powerful, but without a good character you cannot be happy.—Such a character is, therefore, above all price. It cannot be estimated by any other sources of enjoyment. No other good which men desire as means of happiness, can be compared with it. For all other things are good only so far as they contribute to promote virtue, or good character, as sources of enjoyment.—They are the only means; the good character is the end; and the end is, of course, better than the means. The garment is better than the needle it was made with. The house is better than the saws and planes used in building it. So is the good character better than all other things a man can have for his improvement and happiness.

How much medicine would it take to be equal in value to good health? Can medicine be compared to health? You would not think the remark a very sensible one, if I should tell you that good health was worth all the calomel and apecuac in the world. Yet it would be very much like saying a good character is worth all the wealth in the world. There is nothing therefore by which we can estimate the value of a good character.

If you have a good character you will commonly have a good reputation. "A good name is better than precious ointment." It gratifies any man to know that he is well spoken of by good people; and the man of a pure character will enjoy the good opinion of all who know him and love virtue. Establish such a character as will secure you a good name among good people and your interests will be safe. Some young persons take pleasure in the society and approbation of the vicious. They think a bold and dash ng recklessness is honorable; and they care not what good people say or think of them, if they can be esteemed and talked of as a good fellow among the drinking smoking, swearing, swaggering herd whose friendship and praises they seem to covet. But the friendship and praise of such people are a mark of disgrace; and, however it may appear for a time to its credit and satisfaction, it always turns out in the end to his shame and ruin.

Do not count it a matter of small consequence respected friends, what associations you form in your youth. See well to your habits of thought. Regulate them with care. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If you suffer yourself to become familiar with foolish and false thoughts and practices, your character will be in danger. Such things are death to a good character, as surely as the frost is death to fill and tender blossom of the peach.

I doubt not, if the whole youthful history of the memorable Franklin were spread out before you, and all his thoughts related, you would find them remarkably conversant with pure and elevating subjects. He did not suffer his thoughts to be led captive by every vain thing that chanced to pass under his observation. He was bent on fixing good principles as the guide of his life, and improving his mind, and storing it with knowledge; and his success in manhood and through life, he attributed to his industry and circumspection in his youth.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES CRAYON.

The world is beginning to place a right estimate upon the character of Bulwer's writings. Admiration of their enticing brilliancy has hitherto withheld expressions of the abhorrence, which they must certainly prompt in all well regulated minds. This apparent toleration has evidently induced them to surpass even in his former efforts in prodigacy. His last works are infinitely more objectionable than those of an earlier date; and from almost every quarter, condemnation the most impressive is passed up n them. The following forcible paragraph in relation to Ernest Maltravers, is extracted from a late number of the American Quarterly Magazine:

"However severe, our opinions of Mr. Bulwer's books have been uniformly consistent. We believe him to be a false philosopher; a sophistical author; a poet whom neither gods nor columns allow; and what is more, much more than all, a bad man. All his books prove it. He advocates infidelity under the mask of liberalism, and alleges that prostitution is justifiable when the victim chances to be the child of a profligate father. His 'Philosophy of Life,' is the elaborate compend of a fiend. Nothing but an unprincipled ambition, the anxious craving, insatiable desire of notoriety, could induce him to compose such a work as this. When Satan cites Scripture and Bulwer talks of morality, let the good retire. We are sickened by his sensuality, and disgusted by his infamous sing. In the perusal of his books, one would believe that half of his life had been passed among the reprobates of St. Giles, and the nightwalkers of the Minories; for such licentious opinions as he develops, could be acquired in no other places or abandonment."

Extracts from 'The American Democrat,' or hints on the Social and Civil Relations of the U. S. of America. By J. Fenimore Cooper.

Argument against the right of Instruction.—Unwise when, viz: we take into consideration the received signification of terms as they were understood when the Constitution was framed, the legal effect of legislative acts, which are binding, though the orders contain no instruction to the contrary; the omission in the constitution to put out any legal means of instructing, and the practical difficulties in obtaining it, all unite to establish above the reproach of being ex parte and insufficient; the permanent object and design of the constitution; the doubt and indecision instructions would induce into a government, that was expressly framed to obviate these weaknesses; the dangers that constantly arise from the activity of the designing, and the supineness of the well meaning; the want of unity and fixed principles, it might give to a legislature that controls peace and war, and the foreign relations as well as the exposure to influence directly exercised over irresponsible men; and the general character of deliberation and examination which is secured to congress, which may be called on to act on information known only to itself; we are led to conclude that the doctrine of instruction is unconstitutional, whether as applied to the Senate, or to the House of representatives, and that so far from being a doctrine, that is adapted to secure the domination of real majorities, it is either an invention of intriguing politicians to defeat their ever wishes, in opposition to those of the nation. Exceptions may occur, but governing principles are to be settled on general rules, and by general efforts.

Lord Ward, a young English nobleman, who has just come of age, is said to be one of the richest commoners in England, coming in to the amount of more than two hu dred thousand pounds sterling per annum, or about two dollars a minute, or over $100 an hour night and day.

The following resolutions have been adopted by the New York city banks, one announcing their resolution to resume fully on the 9th of May, and the other their intention not to receive the notes of Banks out of the city after the 16th of May. The Journal of Commerce says from this day they cease entirely to pay out the notes of country banks, paying city notes in all cases:

At a meeting of the officers of the city banks on the 21st of April, it was unanimously

Resolved, that the 9th day of May next be the day fixed for the resumption of specie payments by the banks of the city of New York.

Resolved that after the 16th day of May next, no notes or bills of the banks of this state will be received by the city banks, except such as shall be redeemed daily in the city.

The Boston Daily Advertiser says the Merchants, Columbian, and North banks of that city, and perhaps more, have already resumed specie payments in full; and adds, we have little doubt that their example will be soon followed by the other banks in that city and state.

Silk Culture in Warren Co.—The Belvidere Apollo, of Tuesday, has the following notice of a characteristic yankee enterprise—

A few years since, eight enterprising young men in the state of Connecticut, resolved to devote themselves to the culture of silk, and their first effort was very properly directed to the cultivation of the Morus Multicaulis—probably the most valuable tree in existence for that purpose—and having by last autumn accumulated a large number of trees, they sent a committee into the far West to select four locations—intending to go forth two by two for their occupancy. Belvidere was one of the first places determined upon, and within a few days Messrs. Grant & Chamberlain have arrived among us with their families, trees and all necessary apparatus for the prosecution of this profitable and delightful business; and have rented a field on the farm belonging to Dr. Green for ten dollars per screw year. What other business, except making town lots, would yield such a rent! The land holders of the county would do well to look into this business, when they would find that their wives and children will earn as much money from an acre in Mulberry trees as they can on 80 or 100 acres of labor they usually bestow upon it without counting the increased value of the land of the county after the Silk culture is once successfully introduced.—These gentlemen with others engaged in the business here, will feed several thousand worms the ensuing summer, and probably make several hundred pounds of Silk.

The other locations are Harrisburg and Lancaster in Pa., and Princeton in this state.

Result of Folly.—On Sunday last, several young men were assembled at a public house at Saugerties, when a wager was made by one of them, to steal J. Defaw, who was employed at the Ulster Iron works, that he could drink the entire contents of one of the decanters, which was a pint and a half of brandy. He swallowed the liquor, and several glasses more after it, but he very soon fell senseless to the ground. An attempt was made to draw blood from his arm, which was unsuccessful, and he was given up for dead, and buried on the following day. Before his burial, it appears, blood oozed from the incision in the arm and the fact becoming noised about the village, there was on Saturday a considerable commotion there, owing to the belief of many that the unfortunate victim of folly had been buried alive, and that he had merely swooned instead of dying from the effect of the terrible draught he had so foolishly swallowed.

'My dear sir,' said an election acquaintance, to a sturdy wag, 'I'm very glad to see you.'
"You needn't be—I've voted.'

This afternoon about six o'clock, the new and elegant steamboat Moselle, Captain Perrin, left the wharf of Cincinnati (full of passengers) for Louisville and St. Louis, and with a view of taking a family on board at Fulton, about a mile and a half above the quay, proceeded up the river and making fast to a timber raft for that purpose. Here the family were taken on board, and during the whole time of the detention the Captain was nodding to and all his steam he could create, with an intention of showing off to the best advantage the great speed of the boat as she passed down the whole length of the city. The Moselle was a new brag boat, and had recently made several exceedingly quick trips to and from that place.

Soon as the family were taken on board from the raft, the boat moved off; and at the very moment her wheels made the first revolution, her boilers burst with a most awful an astounding noise equal to the most violent clap of thunder. The explosion was destructive and heart rending in the extreme, as we are assured by a gentleman who was sitting on his horse on the shore, waiting to see the boat start. Heads, limbs, bodies and blood were seen flying through the air in every direction, attended by the most horrible shrieks from the wounded and the dying. The boat, at the moment of the accident, was about thirty feet from the shore, and was rendered a perfect wreck. She seemed to be torn all to flinders as far back as the gentleman's cabin, and her hurricane deck (the whole length) was entirely swept away. The boat immediately began to sink rapidly, and float with a strong current down the river, at the same time getting farther from the shore.

The Captain was thrown by the explosion entirely into the street, and was picked up dead and dreadfully mangled. Another man was thrown entirely through the roof of one of the neighboring houses, and limbs and fragments of bodies scattered about the river and shore in heart rending profusion. Soon as the boat was discovered to be rapidly sinking, the passengers who remained on urt to the gentleman's and ladies' cabins, became panic struck, and with a fatality unaccountable jumped into the river. Being above the ordinary business part of the city there were no boats at hand except a few large and unmanageable wood flats, which were carried to the relief of the sufferers as soon as possible, by the few persons on the shore. Many were drowned, however, before they could be rescued from a watery grave, and many sunk who were not seen afterwards.

Later.—The loss was unusually crowded, and Mr. Broadwell thinks the whole number on board at the time of the accident, cannot be but little, if any short of THREE HUNDRED. From the information we can gather it does not appear that more than 30 or 40 of this number are known to have been rescued. It is probable that the whole number drowned or destroyed is somewhat in the neighborhood of TWO HUNDRED OR TWO HUNDRED AND THIRTY OR FORTY PERSONS! It is impossible that any accurate detail of the dead and missing can ever be made or the precise number ascertained. A very large portion of them were deck passengers, and as usual little or no records the passengers or nothing but their names.

The Cincinnati Post states that the Moselle was crowded with passengers from start to stern principally Germans, bound for St. Louis. Nearly all on board (with the exception of those in the ladies cabin,) were killed or wounded; 17 of the former have been found; numbers of the latter have been conveyed to the different houses along the shore and some of them are now writhing in the throes of death—Captain Perrin was thrown up into front street, (upwards of eighty yards from the boat,) and instantly expired. The pilot was thrown about one hundred feet, perpendicular feet into the air, came down to the water, and sunk beneath the surface, never to rise with life.

Further particulars.—The bodies of many of the unfortunate passengers, are dreadfully mangled; one of them cut in two; another divided into three or four parts, and presenting similar various manners, too shocking to relate. A stack of wood was driven through the head of one man; and a Mr. Watts, a merchant of Springfield Mass. was driven head foremost through the roof of a house, on the Ohio shore, at least 100 yards with about half of his body inside, and the remainder out.—He was so completely wedged in, that he expected to be cut out. One venerable looking gentleman of the locks, was swept by the current with his wife and five children, while another old man was weeping for the loss of nine members of his family.

All the bodies four in number, exploded. Bodies, and fragments of bodies, were thrown both to the Kentucky and the Ohio shore. By far the greater portion of the missing found a watery grave. An eye witness states that he saw from sixty to seventy persons in the water at a time during the entire surface of the Ohio with human heads, of whom not a dozen or two could be reached live shore. At sunset last evening, between 25 and 30 dead bodies had been taken from the wreck, and picked up on the shore.

About 96 only, out of the 280 are known to have been saved. The Cincinnati Whig of the 27th says:

We understand that the body of Mr. T. C. Powel of Louisville, Ky., was taken from the wreck of the Moselle the morning about 11 o'clock. He had in his pocket about $300 he has left a wife and child. The head of a man was also taken from the boat this morning, which has not been recognized.

Independence.—The most independent class of beings in the wide world, are the New England factory girls. A late paper has the following dialogue of a Lowell girl, with her overseer.

Well, Mr. ——, I am informed that you wish to cut down my wages.

Yes.

Do you suppose I would go to work again in that room, at lower prices than I have received before?

It is no more than fair under the circumstances

Well, all I have to say is, that before I'll do it I will see you in Tophet, pumping thunder at 3 cents a clap.

She was finally invited to resume work at the old prices.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Friday, April 27th.

In Senate, the bill for the establishment of a board of Commissioners for the settlement of claims, was finally passed and sent to the house for concurrence.

A bill to provide for the security and protection of the Indians at the west came up.

Mr. Norvell said he hoped never to see the day when an Indian or negro could be admitted upon the floor of Congress, and he should therefore move to strike that provision from the bill which proposed a delegate. He should move to have an agent instead of a delegate. His amendment was rejected, 24 to 16.

Messrs. White, Linn, Lumpkin, Crittendon, Hawes and King, spoke in favor of the bill, and Niles, of Connecticut, was rather opposed to it.

Adjourned without taking the question.

The house resumed the consideration of the du l report, the question at 11 being on the motion to print the report and to postpone it till Monday week.

The reading of the testimony was concluded at 1 o'clock. Mr. Wise then called for the reading of the journal of the committee, which was read.

Mr. Toucey addressed the house in favor of the course of the committee.

Saturday, April 28.

The Senate did not sit.

The duel case occupied the house nearly all day, but did not come to any decision.

Edward Robinson, of Maine appeared and took his seat.

Monday, April 30.

In the senate, Mr. Clay presented a memorial against the Cherokee treaty, and praying for the establishment of an International Congress for the settlement of d fferences. He spoke at length in favor of the latter proposition. The memorial was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Clay offered the following resolution which was ordered to a second reading.

"Resolved, That no discrimination shall be made as to the currency or medium of payment in the several branches of the Public Revenue in debts or dues to the Government, and that until otherwise ordered by Congress, the notes of sound banks which are payable and paid on demand in the legal currency of the United States, under suitable restrictions, to be further with prescribed and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be received in payment of the Revenue and Debts and dues to the Government, and shall be subsequently disbursed, in the course of public expenditure, to all public creditors who are willing to receive them."

The bill providing for the protection of the Indians at the west, was taken up. Mr. King's amendment giving them an "Indian Territory," in fee simple, north west of the Missouri was negatived, 33 to 11. The bill was ordered to a third reading, 30 to 6.

In the house, J. P. Kennedy appeared and took his seat. The Duel report consumed the day. Mr. Adams was severe in his remarks, and was called to order for an insinuation about the bloody deeds of a party idol. Well, said Mr. Adams, I will suppress what I had intended to say in reply to the chairman of the committee; but I can inform him that what I have said is mere fol, compared with what I intended to say.

Mr. Wise and Mr. Graves followed. Mr. Pickens moved to lay the subject upon the table—lost, yeas 98, nays 107.

The question was then taken on the motion to postpone the consideration of the report till Monday next, and decided in the negative, yeas 85, nays 109.

Tuesday, May 1st.

The Senate adjourned as soon as the journal was read, to see the great horse race between Decatur and Fanny Wyatt for $1,000! Decatur won both heats easily, running each heat in 7 minutes and 5 seconds.

The duel report again occupied the house all day. The question was on motion of Mr. Adams to recommit it with instructions to report the facts only. Mr. Cambreling presented a Treasury report, stating that its whole available means are $500,000; and he therefore urges the authorizing of more treasury notes.

The debate having been continued some time, Mr. Boon suggested that there was no quorum, when being ascertained to be present, Mr. Adams moved a call of the house. He observed that as the religious services, (horse racing) of the day were nearly over, the house might expect those who had been attending upon them soon to return to the public business.

A quorum being present, Mr. Toucey, by unanimous consent, reported the Senate bill for the suppression of dueling within the District, and it was referred to the committee of the whole and ordered printed.

The house adjourned at 3 o'clock.

Wednesday, May 2d.

The Senate passed the bill for the protection and security of the western Indians, by a vote of 39 to 6.

Mr. Clay's currency resolution was brought up, and on motion of Mr. Wright it was referred to the committee on Finance, after having been debated nearly all day, by a vote of 28 to 19.

The house was very thin, but the debate was very exciting, still being on the motion of Mr. Adams to recommit the duel report with instructions. Ten members were present. Mr. Wise objected against a vote by so thin a house, and about 5 o'clock the house adjourned.

Editorial Change.—Mr. Epes Sargent, Jr. who has for some years been an associate editor, of the Boston Atlas, has removed to N. w York, and is in future to be associated with Mr. Morris as editor of the New, York Mirror. The Boston Courier remarks—

Mr. Sargent is a polished writer, a good scholar, and deserves, what we ask for him in his new home, a cordial reception, and a continual support. As an editor, he has always behaved towards his contemporaries like a gentleman, and we, in this city part with him with regret.

The first steam boat that ever crossed the Atlantic, was an American boat—the Savannah, Capt. Rogers, many years ago. She visited England, France and Russia.

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Tuesday Evening, May 4, 1839.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

ANOTHER WHIG VICTORY!

Aye, Yet Another!!

We see all the whig papers rejoicing and boasting so much for their many recent victories, that we can't help joining in with them in some small degree, though if the truth must be told, we care but precious little which party succeeds.

Virginia has also gone for the whigs, as has been anticipated for some weeks past, from the fact that almost all elections now a-days seem to go one way—you know which way that is, reader, without our saying. The latest intelligence we have received up to this present writing is, that in the 64 counties heard from, 57 whigs, 21 democrats, and 6 conservatives are elected.—These counties last year elected 35 whigs, and 49 administration men,—Whig gain thus far, 44.

It is probable that the whigs will have a majority in the house, and on joint ballot, and the V. Buren men will have a majority in the Senate. The whigs will therefore be able to choose a Senator for the next session of Congress, as successor to Mr. Rives, whose term expires in March next.

The Virginia Legislature last year stood as follows:

	Whig.	Van Buren.
Senate	12	20
House	47	87
	59	107
		59

Van Buren majority on joint ballot, 48

The Richmond Enquirer of May 1st, says:—"It is idle to despond, but we are beaten in Virginia. We have lost the House of Delegates. We still retain the Senate."

Dreadful Fire in Charleston, S. C.

With much regret, we have to record that the city of Charleston was visited with a most awful and destructive conflagration, on the night of the 25th of April. The fire broke out about eight o'clock in the evening, and was not at all checked till some time the next day. It is estimated that from two to three millions of property was destroyed, and not far from 1000 houses. The number of lives lost is estimated as high as forty or fifty. The Charleston Insurance offices are said to have made bankrupt, and cannot pay over one half, and the New York Insurance Offices, it is said will lose $50 or $60,000 by the fire. 12 or 1500 families are thus in a night deprived of a home.

Among the buildings destroyed, are a number of churches, the new theatre, the splendid new hotel, nearly the whole market, and nearly all the large stores on King street, and the large storehouse on the corner of Society street.

A most terrible calamity, in which the whole country will participate.

Mr. Slaughter, the whig candidate for Congress, from Virginia, in the place of Mr. Patton, a conservative, has been elected by a majority of about 50. Mr. Patton resigned on account of having received a state office.

By intelligence received since the above was in type, we learn that Mr. Slaughter's majority was 14.

The Van Buren party in the House of Representatives have lost four of their number by death, since the commencement of the present session, viz: Carter, Culley, McKim, and Ripley. In the places of two of them, whigs have been elected, who have already taken their seats in the house; from the other two we have not heard.

We regret to learn that the Bowery Theatre is to be rebuilt. We have had strong hopes of late that its ashes would have remained undisturbed, at least, for the present. The insurance money, $30,000, was paid last week, and with it another theatre is to be built on the site of the old one. The Newark Daily thus concludes a notice of the brilliant novelties intended to be performed when finished:

"But the new managers have engaged a composer who pledges himself to surpass all former undertakings, and not only set a toothache to music, in such a manner, that every auditor shall instantly recognise it as actually as if it were in his own jaw, but distinctly to impress upon the ear the hypothenuse of a triangle, and excite a very lively impression, by sound alone, of the peculiar smell of the shape of the drum. Further particulars will be given in the bills.

The Albany city charter election terminated on Tuesday last. As far as we can learn, the whigs elected every officer, except one Constable. At all events they elected a large majority of them. We intended to get a line, stereotyped, it will save us a vast deal of trouble in putting it in type, two or three times every week.

"Another Whig Victory,"

Mexico.—We are much pleased to learn that our difficulties with this neighboring republic are in a fair way of a speedy and amicable adjustment. Both parties have agreed to refer the dispute to some third neutral power. It appears after all, that the famous insult to our flag by the Mexican armed vessel, was more the fault of our vessel than the other.

We exceedingly regret, however, that the relations between that country and France are very likely to terminate in war, for which Mexico is but ill prepared.

Congressional.—On Thursday, 3d inst. both houses adjourned at an early hour, according to custom, over to Monday, for the purpose of ventilating the Hall, &c. The race-ground being the principal attraction, nothing of importance was done in either house.

Mr. Cambreling hoped the house would come together on Monday, prepared to take up the public business; but Mr. Wise said he would not let the duel report pass, another week must therefore be taken up on that.

The Boston banks pay all their notes of five dollars and under, in specie on demand; and the remainder of the Massachusetts' banks pay all their notes under $5, in like manner.

The Philadelphia banks pay all demands against them, under one dollar, in specie.

The Michigan Legislature has required the State banks to resume on the 16th of the next month.

At the last session of the Massachusetts legislature, the charters of the following banks were repealed, with an aggregate capital of $4,000,000: Commercial, Kilby, Oriental, Fulton, Commonwealth, Franklin, Lafayette, Middlesex, Roxbury, and bank of Norfolk. The charters of several of them were renewed at their own request.

The legislature authorised the issue of State bonds to the amount of $2,380,000, for Rail-roads, mostly for the Western rail-road connecting Boston and Albany.

The steam ship Sirius left New York on Tuesday last. She had about 30 cabin passengers, and 21 in the steerage. She carried about seventeen thousand letters, for which she charges one shilling each, making over $2000 for postage alone. It is estimated that 30,000 persons were at the wharves to see her put off.

The Great Western was advertised to leave yesterday, Monday, and probably she did.

The friends of Temperance in Essex county held a meeting in Newark on the 30th ult. at which resolutions were passed to organize a County Society on the principle of Total Abstinence. Newark, Orange, Bloomfield, Elizabethtown, Westfield, and New Providence were represented. Mr. Frelinghuysen and several others addressed the meeting. Adjourned to meet in Elizabethtown on the 28th inst. at 2 o'clock, P. M. when the new constitution will be reported.—We are very happy to see New Jersey going forward in the safe plan of Total Abstinence.

Accounts are given in our present number, of two dreadful steamboat accidents, from explosion, and of two very destructive fires, one at Charleston, and one at Vicksburg. Several other steamboat accidents have occurred, and several fires, but none of so great importance as those mentioned.

We learn by gentlemen passengers in yesterday's boat, from Boston, that a meeting of the officers of the banks of that city, held on Friday evening, it was resolved to redeem all their notes of the denomination of five dollars and under, and that the resolution was carried into effect on Saturday, the banks on that day paying specie for all their paper presented.—Virtually, the resumption is considered entire, as it is understood that the banks will furnish any amount of specie for ordinary business purposes, and no demand for any other can be anticipated, at present.—N. Y. Cour. and Enq.

Counterfeiters Arrested.—The Monmouth papers receive this morning notice the arrest of 2 men—Jonathan Grant and Isaac Perkins—for passing the $3 counterfeit bills on the Bank of Utica noticed by us on Friday. They stopped at one of the Freehold taverns, on Sunday, long enough to smoke and drink to the amount of two shillings, and receive the change of a $3 bill. The fraud being soon discovered, they were soon pursued and arrested at Bucks tavern, where they had just performed the same trick. They had a number of the same denomination.

The Enquirer says Grant was formerly a resident of that county, and now has a family residing near Rahway and Perkins has a family living in Elizabethtown.

Counterfeit $2 tickets, of the city of Trenton, have been detected in that place.

The last Globe gives official information from Florida, that Alligator, one of the most active Creeks, surrendered at Fort Bassinger on the 4th ult., with 85 of his people. He was about to make an effort to induce the other Indians to yield it is further stated that 44 Indians had been taken by Lt. R. Anderson, 3d Artillery, at Fort Lauderdale—and that 100 had voluntarily gone in to Fort Vanswearingen.

Particulars of the Explosion of the Oronoko Steamboat, Princeton, (Miss.)—This boat was commanded by Capt. John Crawford, and left New Orleans April 16th. On the 21st, at 5 A. M., after making only two revolutions from the time of touching at Princeton, (Miss.) she burst one of her boilers, blowing 15 to 20 persons overboard and severely scalding 40 or 50 on board. Some 6 or 7 of the latter soon after died Among the scalded were about 30 white men, chiefly deck passengers, 5 or 6 women, and the same number of children, since dead. Only 4 or 5 of those that went overboard were saved. Some few cabin passengers were maiming. Few of the scalded it is thought, will recover. The number of cabin passengers was about 70 to 80 and on deck from 60 to 70, including blacks and children. Most of the cabin passengers were in bed, and thus were saved. The screams of the sufferers implering some one to put an end to their misery, were truly heart rending. Some of C. L. Oliver's race horses and grooms on board were badly scalded. Among the sum: we see James W. Palmer, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; O. Van Sickle, of Long Island; W. R. Davis, of New York.

Georgia Central Rail Road.—The rail road between Macon and Savannah, is under contract for eighty miles—twenty five miles only are finished, and travelled by the locomotives, and sixty five are graded. The number of laborers employed upon it exceeds 500, and the progress is rapid.

History of the Custom House Frauds.—Extensive seizures of Woolen Goods have been made in N. Y. within a few days past, to the amount of more than two hundred thousand dollars, for violation of the revenue laws. Several parcels have also been seized in Boston, which had recently been purchased in N. Y., which it is supposed are part of the same concern. It seems that an extensive system of frauds on the Custom House has been discovered, and that it has been for some time in operation. The principals are said to be Yorkshire woolen dealers; and it is understood that they have been able to enter large quantities of woolens a high cost, and, by collusion with an officer of the Customs, to pay only the duty charged on low priced goods. This was done by entering 10 or 20 bales at once invoiced alike, as low priced goods; 2 of which only corresponded with the invoice while the others were of a fine quality. It is customary in such cases, to examine but 2 packages of a lot and if they corresponded with the invoice, to let the rest pass unexamined. The collusion consisted in the knowledge, by the officer in charge of the goods, of the packages which corresponded with the invoice, and of what packages the selection by him, of those packages for examination. It is said that those implicated in the fraud have made their escape. The recent extensive sales of fine Broadcloths at very low prices produced a suspicion which led to the detection of the fraud.

Yesterday morning after the inside of our paper had been worked off, the pressman took the green form, containing the types of both pages, from the press and hooked it to the block and tackle, to lower it into the composing room, when some part of machinery gave way, and the whole room come down from the third to the second story of the office, cutting away the floor like a thunder bolt; but so well had it been "hooked up," that not a type was disturbed.—*Phil. Singing.—Mr. W. A. Wer sworth has opened a new vein of merriment. He has latcnes very intently to the pronunciation of E glish singers, and has given some choice specimens of it, accompanied occasionally by a singularly perverted sense. Who would think to hear the Messiah opened in our native language after this fashion,

The Albany State Bank has declared a dividend of 10 per cent.

We have just received intelligence from Virginia, which states that Mr. Slaughter, the whig candidate in Mr. Patton's district, is not elected after all; Mr. Banks, the Van Buren candidate, having been elected, by a majority of 28.

Seventy-one counties in Virginia are heard from, electing in all, 92 members. The whigs thus far have a majority of 28.

The account now stands thus:—Whigs, 50; Van Buren and Conservatives, 32. Since the last accounts, the latter have gained five, the whigs, three.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.

The Mexican Ports are blockaded by the French squadron. The intelligence is communicated by the French minister at Mexico, to the Department at Washington, through Com. Dallas, commanding our Naval forces in the gulf.

This step imports a War.—The U. S. schr, Grampus which was sent from Vera Cruz to Pensacola with the government despatches, reports that the castle of San Juan de Ulloa, would be immediately invested and that from its condition it could not hold out.

The Mexican were willing to pay the indemnity demanded by the French, but the latter required some apology, which the Mexican government refused to make. One side issued manifestoes 10,000 horses, and the church had agreed to supply one million of dollars to carry on the war.

The French squadron consists of one frigate and five brigs of war, to which additions are expected. In anticipation of an attack upon Vera Cruz the women and children had been removed, with all valuables. The Mexican Congress was empowering a proposition to expel all Frenchmen from the Republic.

There were no merchant vessels of any nation in port, and but one American—the Ann Eliza of New York—expected. The blockade will be rigid as respects merchant vessels, but none others.

We copy some of the terms of the blockade:

"2. Neutral vessels which may be already in one of the ports of the Republic before the blockade of such port will have full liberty to depart, with or without cargo, within 15 days, dated from that upon which the blockade is established.

"3. The ports of Vera Cruz and Tampico will remain entirely free for the entrance and departure of the post office, military and non-commercial packet vessels.

"4. The ports of the Mexican Republic shall remain entirely free for the entrance and departure of the Mexican boats engaged in fishing, unless the French naval division should be hereafter forced in retaliation, to withdraw this benevolent disposition."

The late Vicksburg was visited with another destructive fire on the 23d ult. The fire broke out about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in the stable of Messrs. Ayre & Swain on last East Street, in the North Western extremity of the town. Nearly the whole square was destroyed—consuming property to the amount of $200,000—among which was the dwelling of Wm. H. Sims, Esq., the store and dwelling of Messrs. Ayre & Swain, and the Boarding house of Mrs. Fretwell, with all the out buildings were destroyed.

The Baltimore papers mention that the Collector of that port, upon information received from New York, seized on Wednesday, several hundred pieces of woolen cloths which had been consigned to a Baltimore house from New York.

Another seizure of cloths valued at $5000, took place in Boston on monday last. They were taken in the depot of the Providence Rail-road immediately on the arrival from New York.

The Hunterdon Gazette says that farmers in that region are sowing the Italian Spring wheat, and that if it be found on experiment, well adapted to our soil and climate, it will form a new era in the wheat growing interest of this state. The experiment to escape from the ravages of the fly, and the many uncertainties which of late years have attended the raising of winter grain.

A law has been passed by the Legislature of N. York authorizing copartners and joint debtors to make seperate compromises with creditors, without involving the rights of those who may not be parties to such arrangements. These compromises are not to be suffered to interfere with the power of copartners to call upon the partners making them to furnish their rateable proportion towards the discharge of the obligations of the firm.

Somerset Orphans' Court.

Term of April 1838.

UPON the application of John and Thomas Simpson administrators of James Simpson late of said County deceased, to this Court, to limit and appoint a certain time within which the creditors of the estate of said deceased, shall bring in their debts demands and claims against the same—or that such creditor, after such due notice being given, be forever barred of his or her action against the said administrators.

It is therefore ordered by the Court, that the said administrators give public notice to the creditors of said deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said estate within one year from this time by setting up such notice in five of the most public public places in the County, for the space of two months, and also by advertising the same for a like space, in a newspaper, published in this state;

And if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, in the said period of one year after public notice given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said administrators.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with many choice and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood and rare, beautiful and popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, and every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays humorous and pathetic—critical notices early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—judicious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—pictures upon the various productions in the fine arts, are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in foreign tongues, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, arts, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exercise its predecessors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. Nothing has been omitted to add to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume. Besides which, choice translations from the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and selections from popular journals abroad will serve to give variety, and render it one of the most piquant miscellanies for the entertainment of every man of taste and the fine arts at home.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New-York Mirror, the attractions entered into and consummated for the fourteenth, the first number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in variety, it will be superior to any of its predecessors, fully maintaining its pre eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering it successful rivalry with the celebrated popular periodicals of the British and Parisian press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, females, and costumes.

CONDITIONS.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

Subscriptions received at this Office, for the

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY ON
THE HOLY BIBLE,
By Mr. JENKS, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Size, super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides extracts from essays of other standard writers.

We select so few from the many recommendations of the work.

From W. C. Brownlee:—Were I to have my choice of this work on one hand, and of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose the work by Dr. Jenks. The great and precious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited. It is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family worship, as well as private reading,—and is particularly applicable to the wants of S. School teachers and Bible classes.

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, many of which are well designed to illustrate Scripture manners, customs and antiquities.

We earnestly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a "goodly pearl," which every devout man should seek to possess in his family.

Subscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—his well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Student will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

THADEUS DAVID'S
WRITING FLUID,

A Substitute for Ink, for the Steel or Quill Pen.

THE superiority of this Fluid over common Inks, may be summed up under the following heads: The ease with which it flows from and follows the pen, the superior blackness which it acquires, the fairness with which it writes, its bright and distinct color when first written, also its drying sequickly, retaining its fluidity in all weathers, having no tendency to become ropy or muddy, or to destroy any steel pen, and lastly, its great durability and its quality to resist the agents used to obliterate the common inks renders it particularly valuable for writing Wills, Conveyance, Bills, Deeds, and also Log books as it cannot be imperfectly seen.

Plainfield Classical Institution.

THE above Institution is situated in the village of Plainfield, N. J. The building forms one of the best in the country. It is pleasantly located and, in every respect, well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

On the 2d of May next, this school will be opened, under a new arrangement, for the reception of Gentlemen and Ladies.

The Gentlemen's department is designed to fit young men for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes of Colleges—alternative a thorough course of instruction in the Sciences and Higher Mathematics, together with all the solid branches of an English Education.

The Ladies' department will be, in most respects, distinct from the other, it being under the direction of a competent and experienced Lady, as Principal. Instruction will be given in all the branches usually taught in the most popular Female Seminaries. It is desirable that all young ladies, who have not finished their studies, should board with the Principal of that department, as then will, thereby, secure all the advantages of a Family Boarding School.

The year is divided into two sessions, of twenty-three weeks each.

N. B. Reference and further information given on application.

The Trustees having engaged the services of Nathaniel M. Dexter, Horatio Bryant, and his Lady, Mrs. L. C. Bryant, give notice that the first Session of the year will commence, as usual, on May 1st next, under their superintendence.

Mr. Dexter is a graduate of Amherst College, Mass. Mr. Bryant, of Union College, N. Y., and Mrs Bryant is from Miss Grant's school, Ipswich, Mass.

They are all experienced and successful teachers, and the trustees feel well assured of their ability and intention to maintain a school of high character, with respect, both, to discipline and scholarship.

The well known healthy and beautiful location of Plainfield points it out as a very eligible place for an Institution of the above kind. It is within 2 miles of New York city—within 1 hour's ride of Newark, Elizabethtown, New Brunswick and other adjacent towns, access to all at all times convenient by railroad and stage

The Emancipator,
PUBLISH D WEEKLY BY THE AMERICAN ANTI SLAVERY CIETY
At 143 Nassau street, New York.

THE Emancipator is designed to communicate the proceedings and publish the views and principles of the American Anti-Slavery Society and its auxiliaries. At the present time, there is probably an institution whose operations are more important to be known to every American citizen. Combining the influence of probably 200,000 efficients, generally behind no others for moral worth and determined purpose, the Anti-Slavery Societies will doubtless have a mighty influence for good or evil. We believe its principles intelligently embraced and faithfully carried out, are the only true conservatism of our free institutions. Patriotism, as well as religion, forbids that we should draw back, or omit any lawful endeavor to carry forward our enterprise to a speedy and a peaceful triumph.

With these views we are led to urge a large increase of our subscription list. We will be required to make it the vehicle of the earliest intelligence, and the most interesting information connected with the cause.

TERMS.—$2 per annum, always in advance.

Those who procure and forward the names of five copies in advance, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

New York Mirror.

A new volume to commence on the 2d of July next.

A POPULAR and highly esteemed Journal of elegant literature and the fine arts: embellished with magnificent and costly engravings on steel, copper and wood, and rare, beautiful and parallel music, arranged for the pianoforte, harp, guitar, &c. and containing articles from the pens of well-known and distinguished writers, upon every subject that can prove interesting to the general reader, including original poetry—tales and essays, humorous and pathetic—critical notices—early and choice selections from the best new publications, both American and English—scientific and literary intelligence—copious notices of foreign countries, by correspondents engaged expressly and exclusively for this journal—strictures upon the various productions in the fine arts that are presented for the notice and approbation of the public—elaborate and beautiful specimens of art, engravings, music, &c.—notices of the acted drama and other amusements—translations from the best new works in other languages, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.—and an infinite variety of miscellaneous reading relating to passing events, remarkable individuals, discoveries and improvements in science, art, mechanics, &c. &c.

The next volume of the New-York Mirror will exceed its predecess ors in literary attractions, engravings, music and typography. The best writers in the land will contribute to its pages, and a spirited foreign correspondence will be maintained. The sum of $5000 will be paid for the original matter to be published in the course of the next volume. Besides which, the Mirror will continue to give the French, German, Italian and Spanish; and Selections from popular journals abroad will serve to give it variety, and render it one of the most piquan fascinating and exquisite repositories of elegant literature and the fine arts extant.

Its Literary Character.—Whatever may have been the attractions of the thirteen preceding volumes of the New York Mirror, the arrangements entered into and announced for the commencement of the fourteenth, the number of which will be published on the second of July next, warrant us in the pledge that, in every respect, but particularly in the literary department, it will greatly surpass all its predecessors—fully maintaining its pre-eminent position among the periodicals of the country, and offering a successful rivalry with the most vaunted popular periodicals of the British and French press.

Its Steel Engravings.—The most distinguished artists have been employed to furnish designs and execute the beautiful series of pictorial embellishments, illustrative of American scenery, incidents, and personages.

COPYRIGHT.

It is published every Saturday, at the corner of Ann and Nassau sts. Elegantly printed in the quarto form on beautiful paper. It is embellished with splendid engravings, and every week with a popular piece of music. Terms.—Five dollars per annum, payable in advance. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year.

Subscriptions received at this Office, for the

COMPREHENSIVE COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE,

By Mr. Jenks, D. D.

The 5th and last volume of this invaluable work will be published in June, after which time the books will be delivered.

TERMS.—Three dollars a volume, or fifteen dollars the set. Super royal octavo.

They contain nearly the whole commentaries of Henry, Scott and Doddridge, besides selections from several other standard writers.

We select a few from the many recommendations of the work.

From W. C. Brownlee :—"Were I to have my choice of this work or Scott's, Henry's, Poole's, Scott and Doddridge, separately, on the other, I would decidedly choose this work by Dr. Jenks. The grand and precious doctrines of the gospel are exhibited, it is a work of exceedingly great value to the private christian and to heads of families—it is, moreover, conveniently arranged for family reading as well as private reading;—and is particularly applicable to the wants of S. School teachers and Bible classes.

It is beautifully printed, and contains several steel engravings, maps and well executed cuts, all designed to illustrate Scripture names, customs and circumstances.

We earnestly recommend this work to our brethren and friends. It is indeed a 'goodly pearl,' which every devout man should seek to possess in his family.

Susscriptions also received here, for

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE,

a very large work, complete in one volume,—at the price of five dollars.

Dr. Tyler says—His well worthy a place in every family library.

Dr. Alexander says—The Theological Sudent t will find it a convenient and useful companion.

Want of room only prevents us from giving further recommendations of both these important and valuable works. All who are able should possess them both.

POETICAL.

For the Plainfield Union.

PLAINFIELD,

Delightful village! When the glowing sun
Darts down his scorching rays upon our heads,
In summer's sultry heat, I love to ruin
Among thy rural shades; to sit beside
Thy murmuring brooks; and list the humming bee,
Or wild bird's note; and watch the busy tribes
Darting in playful mood among thy streams.
But most I love thy mountains steep to climb.
The mountain air and healthful toil invigorate
My frame, and brace my nerves anew. I feel
New life flow through my veins, and all my powers
Expand, as up the stony path I force
My toilsome way.

Hast ever climb'd to the high summit of
Our mountain? Friend! 'tis more than worth thy while.
No stinted prospect envious, bounds our sight
On yon high peak. Thence we look down upon
The wide-spread plain, as on a map. We trace
Each wandering stream through the green meadows,
Mark every road and path, and note each
Separate dwelling, far and near.

Come up with me. Along our way we'll call
And view the "mine" where enterprising Thomas
Digs the hard bowels of the mountain out,
And for his pains gets massy heaps of ore.
Thence to the left and upward let us hie,
Till we have reached the topmost peak of all.

'Tis gained, and now the boundless prospect bursts
Upon our sight—How vast! How glorious!
How magnificent and sublime! Art with
Art hath dressed with tasteful hands, the widened plain.
Turn where thou wilt, beauty will meet thy gaze,
For the whole picture 'neath thy feet is drawn
In lines of loveliness. When thou hast gazed
On the wide plain enough to drink in all
Its various and varying beauty,
Let thine eye rest upon Plainfield.

'Tis no huge city that thou lookest on,
A simple country village, quiet and still,
With no display of gaudy ornament,
No useless show; but simple neatness and Substantial comfort every where appear.
What if her churches' spires rise not so high
To pierce the ambient clouds? Can we not
Worship God as truly and as well? Say!
Doth it matter aught to Him who rules in Righteousness the world, and says that man
Shall worship him in spirit not in forms,
Whether the incense of his praise arise
From lofty castellated dome and spire
With golden ornament magnificent!
Or from the poor man's humble unwalled hut?

Two schools of learning form our bonst and pride,
Where those who would be skilled in classic lore,
In the deep mysteries of uncouth Greek,
Or easy flowing words of ancient Rome;
With ancient Homer, who would converse hold,
And living sparks of inspiration catch
From old Demosthenes and Cicero,
Do spend their days and nights in study deep.
Of local cannot speak—but well I know,
Our Faneuilla is well skilled in all the art,
His house in modern's bones 'tis here to impart
And to acquire instruction is delight.
No birchen rod its trembling inmates awes,
Or ferrule blisters their unsightly hands.
By love he rules, yet is not less obeyed;
By moral suasion, not by brutish fear.

A hundred things remain as yet unseen,
And time would fail to note them one by one.
One other sight 'tis well thou shouldst observe.
A dwelling thou canst spy beyond the town,
Standing apart, at distance from the road.
If thou wert near thou couldst not but admire
The taste which there so sweetly hath combined
Neatness with elegance. A lovely spot
Is that! and lovelier, from the thought, that
'Tis the muse's bower—sacred to posey
And bewitching song. 'Tis there the gentle
Muse who guideth Clemestha's pen, doth
Make her daily visits and inspire those
Tuneful and heart-touching lays, admired
By all—and most by those whose souls are best
Attuned to Nature's harmony.

But thou perchance art wearied now, and wouldst
Descend—well, be it so. What else remains
Unseen, we'll see some other day.
May 10th. Florio.

Reverence of the Sabbath in England.—In a recent English paper among other acknowledgements of donations to a charitable institution, is the following: "From the Liverpool and Manchester Rail way Directors, part of a sum received for Sunday travelling, refused by certain shareholders, £250.

An editor in Boston, lately got such a large idea into his head that his friends were obliged to hoop his noddle lest it should crack open.

How are you this morning? said Sam Poor to a lawyer, "Not at all myself," says Lattit. "Then I congratulate you," replied Sam; "for be however else you will, you will be a gainer by the bargain."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Looking Ahead.—A St Louis paper, looking forward forty years, at which time it supposes the seat of Government will be at that place, and that Texas, Mexico, Canada, Astoria &c. will be connected with the United States, indulges in the following pretty extravagant anticipations; though it must be confessed that some of the improvements of our own day, would have appeared to those who lived 50 or 75 years ago, almost as extravagant as any of the "anticipations of the writer of the following article:—

St. Louis, January, 1876.

Excerpts from the Official paper.

We regret to hear that some difficulty has occurred in reference to the simultaneous publication of our paper at this place and Montreal. The Express balloon has failed several times in succession and our last editorial articles, in yesterday's twelve o'clock paper, did not appear in the Montreal paper until two hours after they were circulated here.

We learn from Astoria that another hourly paper has been started in that city, making in all 62. The first number of the new one reached us several minutes since. It is conducted with considerable taste and talent, but it is entirely too small. The citizens of that city seem to dislike large sheets. The World is the most respectable and that is only 32 by 46 feet.

A gentleman who came from New Holland yesterday, states that the balloon had several scientific men on board, who prevailed upon the conductors to stop 45 seconds near the site of an old city called New Orleans. Our readers will remember that the place was overwhelmed by an earthquake in 1840. The workmen have made considerable progress in the excavations, and we learn that twenty one thousand men, or nearly one half of the workmen employed, were discharged for disorderly conduct.

A fine old fashioned merchant had been found in a state of high preservation, and two gentlemen brought it along with them in the balloon. It will be exhibited this evening at the Exchadge.

A horse was caught yesterday by a company of hunters. We are informed by a venerable old gentleman that these animals, thirty or forty years ago, were extensively used as beasts of burden. The race is almost entirely extinct, and there are not probably a hundred remaining upon the continent.

A man fell yesterday from the top of the capitol to the ground, a distance of thirteen thousand feet. He had one of the "life preservers" with him, and escaped unhurt.

The ladies have the meager majority of seventeen hundred and six in Congress newly elected. It is now thirty one years since, by an amendment of the Constitution the ladies became entitled to the privilege of a seat in either house.

A chap in the city of Mexico advocates the removal of the government from St. Louis to that place. It is no go.

The Washington Monument upon Laurel Mountain, cost twelve and a half bushels of Eagles.

A Relic.—A gentleman who left Boston an hour ago, has just informed us of a very curious circumstance. In a central part of the city last night, some antiquarians discovered a small pile of stones, which, it is proved, are the remains of the Bunker Hill Monument, about which so much was said fifty years since. Twelve tons have been deposited in the New York Museum as a curiosity.

A publisher in this city is about to issue a work containing all the duels fought in the last session of Congress. The work will be a quarto of six hundred pages. All the incidents connected with the last row will be published. Our paper of one o'clock will contain the act which provides for supplying Congress with whiskey.

The news from Cincinnati confirm the reports contained in our nine o'clock paper. Sixty-one thousand persons and several blocks of buildings were eaten up by the hogs. We are sorry to learn that forty Counilmen are among the missing.

Highly Important!—We are rejoiced to learn that the ship canal from Charleston, S. C. to Augusta, is at length under contract, and will be completed in three weeks. The pass through the Rocky mountains is the greatest obstacle, but it is calculated that the patent spade machine will dig it out in less than a week.

The Starch Company who purchased the old and deserted tract of land formerly called New Hampshire for a potatoe field, have recently declared a dividend of two hundred per cent.

A lady in this city yesterday presented her husband with twenty one children at one birth. The lady is convalescent and the children are all doing well.

From the Massillon (O.) Gazette.

Return of the Captive.

Tyuth is Stranger than Fiction.—Our citizens yesterday morning, were introduced to the acquaintance of John Wood, a man whose tale of sorrow could not fail of interesting the heart. A meager sketch can only be given now. The ample history of his misfortunes may hereafter be presented to the world.

In the war of 1812, John Wood, new 50 years old, was a young and industrious farmer in Pickaway county Ky. He was the husband of a young and interesting woman, and the father of two infant children. He was living in happiness on a farm, which he had earned by his industry, when the gallant Capt. Butler, who afterwards fell at the capture of the British batteries, at fort Meigs, raised his flag, and solicited the hardy Kentuckians of Bracken county, to enrol themselves among the defenders of their country. John Wood was one of the number. He suffered all the privations to which the chivalric army at the north west was exposed, during the disastrous campaign which resulted in the defeat of Winchester at the river Raisin. By good fortune he escaped the tomahawk of the savage allies of Great Britain, and was sent a prisoner of war to Quebec. He was next with other American prisoners despatched in a transport to Plymouth, in England. From Plymouth accompanied by a crowd of fellow prisoners, he was about to be transferred to Dartmoor—that well remembered scene of British cruelty—when he found an opportunity to elude his guards and make his escape He wandered through the country, stealing through by-ways, until he found himself at Bristol. Hunger compelled him to enter a grocery, the headquarters of a British press-gang. Here he was pressed, and despite his protestations that he was a citizen of the United States, and a fugitive prisoner of war, facts which might have been easily proven by reference to the military authorities at Plymouth, he was hurried on board his majesty's frigate Sea Horse, then the flag ship of the celebrated Sir Peter Parker, and compelled to bear arms against his own countrymen.

On board the Sea Horse were several other Americans, who like Wood, had fallen victims to the British system of impressment. They determined on desertion, and when lying in the Port of St. Johns, they succeeded in securing a boat, during an extremely dark night and attempted to reach the eastern coast of the state of Maine.—They were instantly pursued, and were obliged to desert their boat, on the shore of New Brunswick and seek safety in the woods. After wandering about for two days, exhausted with cold, and hunger, and fatigue, they were apprehended by a party of British soldiers, and again transferred to the Sea Horse. The punishment that followed this act of desertion was inflicted with all that ingenious refinement for which the British Navy is so celebrated.

The Sea Horse attached to the squadron under Admiral Cockburn, was shortly afterwards ordered into the Chesopeake, and took an active part in the robbing, burning, and murdering of defenceless inhabitants of the coast. Mr. Wood and the impressed Americans were never permitted to leave their vessel. He was on board the night when Sir Peter Parker met his fate on shore. A few days subsequent to this event, he in company with 7 other impressed Americans attempted to escape, in broad day light, by boldly jumping into a boat alongside, and pulling rapidly for the shore. One of the number was shot by a sentinel on duty. The others reached the beach, but was immediately apprehended by a party of marauders belonging to the Sea Horse.

By order of Admiral Cockburn, they were sent in irons to Nova Scotia, where, after undergoing the formality of a mock trial, they were sentenced to be shot. The sentence, however, was commuted to service for life in his Britannic Majesty's army in the East Indies. They were accordingly shipped to England, and thence with a regiment of newly levied recruits, despatched to Calcutta. For 21 years Mr. Wood served as a private soldier in the East India service; and 18 months since, when broken down in spirit and in constitution he was permitted to leave the army and sail for England. Destitute and heart-broken he reached London stated his case to the U. S. Consul, and by him was furnished with the means of reaching N. Y. He left N. Y. in January and wended his weary pilgrimage towards the home of his childhood.

It is now 26 years since he left his wife and children in Kentucky, and not one reliable has he heard, relative to their situation, since the moment of their separation. The citizens here forced a few dollars upon him, for poor and decripled as he is, he still possesses all the pride of a Kentuckian, and set him on his way in the stage to Wellsville, from which town he intends to embark on a steamboat for Augusta, Ky.

Fancy cannot help asking—what now is that home to which the war broken wanderer is returning? With the wife of his youth he ready, in the fidelity of her early love, to hail the restoration of her long lost husband?

A veteran Negro.—In the county of Susquehannah there resides a colored man who receives a pension from the United States. He early enlisted in the Revolutionary army and fought thro' the war. He bears upon his person the scars of wounds received in his country's service. He owns a farm which his own hands have cultivated, pays his taxes and supports a large and intelligent frmily, and justly enjoys the respect and confidence of those around him. When the subject of the revolution is mentioned in his presence the old man's heart grows warm—the memory of his sufferings and his toil rushes upon him—and he gives glowing and vivid descriptions of his soldiers life—and of his country's triumphs.—This negro is a native of Massachusetts.—Pa. Pa. per.

Liability of Steamboat owners.—In the Madison (Indiana) Circuit Court, at a late term, the Captain of steamboat Ben. Franklin was mulcted in damages to the amount of $2,043, for damages sustained by the owners of the Kenawha Salt Works, by the sinking in a flat boat loaded with salt, occasioned by the waves produced by the steamboat. The Court instructed the jury, that if the steamboat ran so close as to cause the damage when she could as well have kept further off the steamboat was liable. Verdict for plaintiff, $2, 043.

Religion.

Thoughts on Prayer.—How astonishing that any human being should fail to prize the privilege of unburdening his bosom to the Great Father, and benefactor of human nature, in prayer! Who would not regard it a great favor if he might freely approach the most exalted, and wise, and powerful of our own race, and familiarly request counsel, and aid, and protection! And yet, the ever-blessed and infinite King of kings, most imploringly entreats and beseeches us to do so! What an affront would a human ruler regard it, if his condescending invitations to friendly intercourse was the meanest of his subjects should be slighted as every one of us have slighted the invitations of the Great God our maker!

Nothing but concious guilt drives us away from the audience chamber of our august Father. But even here, we are met by offers of forgiveness on the easy terms of confessing our offences and returning to our duty. What excuse is then left us, if we neglect secret and frequent prayer? Do we believe that God exists, and that he is the rewarder of such as diligently seek him? If we do, why should not every wish become prayer? As it is evidently improper for us to desire any thing, for which we can not consistently and conscientiously pray, so it would be the basest of hypocrisy for us to pretend to pray for that, which we do not spontaneously desire. And whatever we truly desire, we shall diligently labor to obtain. Wishing and praying ought, therefore, to become synonymous terms; and with every devout Christian they will very nearly become so. It is equally certain that you may know what objects a lively Christian has been spreading before God in prayer, if you can discover, by his daily conduct and labors, what objects he is industrious to pursue.

Domestic Management.—The following article is from the pen of Mrs. Conant, the new editor of the Mother's Monthly Journal, and is copied from the first number of the present volume of that valuable work.

Child—Mother, I want a piece of cake.

Mother—I havn't got any—it's all gone.

C.—I know there's some up in the cupboard: I saw it when you opened the door.

M.—Well, you don't need any now; cake hurts children.

C.A-No it don't; (whining) I do want a piece, mother, mayn't I have a piece?

M.—Be still, I say, I shan't give you a bit if you don't leave off crying.

C.—(still crying) I want a piece of cake. I want a piece of cake.

M.—(rising hastily and reaching a piece.)—There take that, and hold your tongue. Eat it up quick, I hear Ben coming. Now don't tell him you've had any.

(Ben enters.) C.—I've had a piece of cake; you can't have any.

Ben.—Yes I will; mother give me a piece.

M.—There take that; it seems as if I never could keep a bit of any thing in the house. You see, sir, (to the child) if you get any thing next time!

(Another room) C.—I've had a piece of cake! Youdger sister.—Oh, I want some too.

C.—Well, you shall, and mother'll give you a piece. I did.

Let us see how many errors were committed by the mother during this short conversation. In the first place she tells a downright lie, and the child detects her in it. 'I havn't any cake.'—'You have, I saw it in the cupboard.' Secondly she gives a false reason, 'cake hurts children,' for not gratifying the child's wishes, at least her next reply would lead him to supposeso. Thirdly, she encourages the child to cry for what he desires, by offering, as a reward for leaving off, the gratification he could not obtain by continued good humor. Fourthly, she breaks her promise and rewards the child for crying indiscreetly her. Fifthly, she fosters a spirit of selfish greediness, the lowest and most debasing of all passions; 'eat it quick and don't tell Ben.' Sixthly, she utters a threat which she has no intention of acting upon; 'see if you get any next time!' We must mention also, the spirit by which her conduct through the whole is marked, and which makes the child feel that she has at last yielded to his wishes, not because she loves him, but to save herself the vexation of being teased any longer. The practical commentary which he makes in his advice to his younger sister shows that he fully understands the springs of her domestic machinery.

Yet this is probably a mother who loves her offspring, who is toiling early and late for their comfort and respectability, but who will perhaps have to complain that her old age is embittered by the neglect and unkindness of her children. They are not wholly in the fault. A mother may sacrifice her health and life itself, for her family, and yet not make them happy, they will not value her. A child cannot comprehend the value of that affection which keeps his mother busy from morning to night, when her industry is continually crossing the track of his enjoyment; when it is made an apology for petulance, injustice and neglect by those little things which make up the happiness of childhood. Nothing but a constant hourly show of kindness, prompt in gratifying, gentle in refusing—a kindness which knows no ebb, unruffled by passion, unpolluted by selfishness—can gain the entire confidence and affection of a child. I ought also to add that a mother who has made herself an object of contempt to her children cannot justly claim their deference and respect, and such she surely will be, if in her management of them, she stoops to the meanness of deceit and falsehood. The pure ennobling sentiment of filial piety, can spring up only in an atmosphere of truth and love. In its nature it is a link to that which is exercised towards the beneficent Father of all, and a reward for its full acquisition thesame influences of rectitude and goodness.

How much War Costs.

The incidental losses of war are from three to five times as great as its direct expenses; and yet its ships, and fortifications, and arms, and ammunition, and other engines of death and devastation, costs an incredible amount of money.

Phrenological.—The Mass. Herald gives the following account of a Phrenological visit to the State Prison in Boston, and of the success of Mr. Fletcher, who has for some time past been lecturing on Phrenology, in hitting off the characters of the convicts:

"Mr. Fletcher, having hit off many thousand characters in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, strictly in accordance with the individuals themselves, and to the satisfaction of their friends, accompanied by several literary gentlemen, paid a visit to the prison last Saturday for the purpose of further testing the truth of the science. The result was highly satisfactory to all, and had the most skeptical person been present, he could no longer entertain a doubt of the truth of Phrenology. The reporter of this paper being present and having attended the trials and reported the testimony against many of the individuals whom Mr. Fletcher examined, will bear witness that, in most cases he stated their crimes and ruling characters correctly.

The first person ovamined by Mr. Fletcher, he stated to be a generous, good hearted fellow, and that he appeared more willing to serve a fellow being than to injure him. The prisoner was Mc Guire, who was convicted of perjury a short time, and who was actuated to it solely to save his friend from punishment; with this exception his character had always been good. Mr. Fletcher also examined the head of the youth, Monahan, imprisoned for burning the Lakehouse on Canbridgeport; he discovered an ingenious turn of mind—very large constructiveness, which was correct. He also examined the heads of two or three ministers, whose characters he hit off admirably, although clergymen, and before being sent to prison, were esteemed excellent preachers Mr. Fletcher discovered little or no veneration in their craniums. His judgement in the last individual was extraordinary, and was a matter of astonishment to all present. He stated the most prominent organs of his head were benevolence, self esteem and destructiveness might have been excited by his self esteem being injured; that his benevolence was too large to allow of his committing destruction on a fellow creature, unless on the impulse of the moment, and that it was most likely that he had destroyed property to revenge himself of a fancied injury. This prisoner was Wade, who set fire to some stables in Dedham to gratify a revenge.'

A Thrifty Family.—A Sow and her 6 Pigs, which were raised and fattened by Oliver Powers Esq. of Phillipston, were butchered, and the pigs being 1 year and 1 day old, and weighed as follows: Sow 456. Pigs 396, 369, 338, 326, 325, and 295—total 2,505. For several years past Esq. Powers has made use of apples mixed with other fodder for fattening swine, with good success. He does not assert to the generally received opinion that 'sweet apples are good, but sour apples have little or no fattening quality,' but it is his opinion, that sour apples are better than sweet; having as much nutritious matter, with a tendency to keep the appetite sharp.—Worcester Mass. Spy.

Emigrating West.—The Fort Madison (Wisconsin) Patriot says—'I he great number of immigrants to this part of the territory during the past eight or ten days, is almost incredible. The first of this week, one hundred and fifty families were counted on their way to Black Hawk Purchase between this place and Rushville. By land and by water, our population is thus rapidly increasing.'

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser of the 8th tells us that not less than One thousand passengers embarked on the Lake at that port on that morning. The De Witt Clinton, bound to Chicago was loaded literally to the water's edge with freight and passengers. The Constitution and Cleaveland, for Detroit, were also well loaded, and the steamboats generally appear to be doing a good business.

Emigration to Illinois.—The last Peoria Register gives the following notice of the arrival of a colony from Maryland—

The fine steamboat Princeton, Capt. H. Baldwin touched at our wharf on Wednesday, on her way to Utica, a town on our river 7 miles above Peru. She was chartered at Wheeling, by Mr. Samuel Hitt and Capt. Swingly, an behalf of themselves and ten other familes, all from Washington county, Maryland, to go to Oregon city, Rock river or to the nearest point thereto which the navigation would admit of. On reaching St. Louis, Mr. Baldwin ascertained that it would be unsafe to attempt to go up the Des Moines rapids of the Mississippi, and that if he should succeed in getting over them, the water in rock river was too low to admit of his ascending it. He therefore entered our river and continued up it to Utica, where the colony disembarked within 50 miles of their place of final destination. This distance they probably overcame in two days. The number of souls is 150, all of whom will settle in the same neighborhood, an agent having last fall made a selection of lands for them.

The, boat as it touchedat our town sufficiently told the object of its visit to our waters without further inquiry. The hurricane deck was entirely covered with wagons and light farming implements, and the guards were lined with the various articles of household furniture. The moveables were estimated at 75 tons, which were contracted to be transported from Wheeling to the place of debarkation for one dollar per ton, dried, or $2S ton. The charge for passage was $20 for each adult in the cabin, and $8 for deck.

The Princeton made the run from Wheeling to Utica in 9 days, a distance of 1400 miles. She is a superior four boiler boat.

More Murders.—Nathaniel and G. W. Stelle were recently shot dead while passing through the town of Claysville, Ala. in a carriage, in open day. Alexander Stelle and William Collins were in the same carriage, were badly wounded, if not mortally. The perpetrators of this horrid deed were supposed to be Jesse Allen, Alexander and Arthur Macfarlane, and Daniel Dickerson, who had posted themselves in a house on the road side, and deliberately committed the murder, they fled immediately. The individuals butchered, were of a party who, about a year ago, murdered James Macfarlane and others, in the same community.

A mammoth bank, it appears by the papers is soon to be established in the city of New York under the late general bank law. The Commercial Advertiser says:

'We have the pleasure of assuring the public that the preliminaries have been so far adjusted that the work will go on. We shall have a bank of forty or fifty millions—a bank that will take the lead in the Union—and which, in the absence of a national bank, will be the next best engine of currency to such an institution.

Self Torment.—More than half of the suffering of this world is self inflicted. People torment themselves with imaginary evils, until they lash themselves into bona fide despair.

'Of this class of self torments was the good honest kitchen maid, whom her visiters surprised weeping bitterly in the kitchen. The heated oven had cooled, the batch of bread all ready for baking was falling in the pans from the "high estate" to which the yeast had raised it, and Betty was sobbing as if her heart would break.

"What is the matter?"

"Why (sobs) just as I had got the oven nice and hot"—sobs again.

"Well," said the mistress frightened, 'did you burn yourself?'.

"No ma'am I happened to think"—sobs.

"Well Betty."

"That if I should ever get married,"

"You wouldn't cry at that, certainly."

"And should have a nice little baby."

"Well, well"

"And it should just go-alone, and I should get the oven hot—and should go and leave it and the baby should crawl in—(boo-o-o-o!) it would burn itself to death!"

The man "was not carried out his principles."—A few days ago, says the Pennsylvanian, a gentleman at Natchez requested an acquaintance to carry a sum of money to New Orleans. He carried it to Texas! This was carrying the thing too far.

Twenty-fifth Congress.

Monday, May 7th.

In the Senate, a variety of remonstrances were presented against the Cherokee treaty. A memorial was offered from officers in the army, for a repeal of the section which still allows whiskey to soldiers on fatigue duty; referred to the military committee.

The bill to increase the salaries of the Commissioners of the Land Office was discussed and lost, 8 to 26.

The bill to sell the bonds given to the U. S. for the 3d and 4th instalments ($5,000,000) of the government stock in the late U. S. bank, which are due in September next, and in 1839.

It was finally ordered to a third reading, and will pass. The bill to re-charter the District banks passed.

In the house, Mr. Cambreling made an urgent request that the public business on the table might be taken up, and moved a suspension of the rules in favor of a resolution to take up the bills which had been referred to the committee of the whole. The vote stood 112 to 67, not two-thirds, by one. He then made an effort to get up the Treasury note bill, which also failed, 102 to 77.

The duel report then came up in order. The motion to lay it on the table was lost 48 to 131. A motion to postpone it until the first Monday in June was lost, 50 to 106. These and like motions were debated until six o'clock, when the house adjourned.

Tuesday, May 8th.

The proceedings of both houses were once more suspended by the death of one of the members. Hon. Josh Lawler, a member of the house from Alabama, was taken sick with the prevailing pleurisy on Sunday, and died on Tuesday morning. We are happy to state that he was a very pious man. After the usual tokens of respect both houses adjourned.

Wednesday, May 9.

The funeral of Mr. Lawler took place from the Hall of the House of Representatives at 12 P. M. The hall was unusually full, and the services appeared to produce universal solemnity—The President, Secretaries, and other public officers were present.

The New York papers observe that business continues to increase with a slow but sure pace. All parties agree that the fall business promises to be exceedingly good. A number of importers are about to proceed to England to purchase their own goods, thus dispensing with the services of agents.

The U. S. frigate Columbia and corvette John Adams sailed from Hampton Roads on Sunday morning, 6th inst. on a voyage round the world, touching at Rio Janeiro, Madeira, the cape of Good Hope, Muscat, Cantee, the Sandwich islands, Peru, Rio Janeiro, &c. Among the midshipmen of the John Adams, is a John Quincy Adams.

A Cunning Rogue.—A few days since a clerk in New York, going to make a deposite in one of the banks, had his bank book peering and peeping from his coat pocket while he stopped to gaze at the numerous caricatures near the new custom House. A well dressed rogue came up behind him quietly, and while winking and smiling to the mob, and inviting them by signs to look at a neat trick, he slipped the bank book out of the pocket of the clerk, took out the notes, and returned the book to the pocket without disturbing the clerk, who was still gazing at the pictures.—The bystanders, believing him to be an intimate friend of the clerk, and highly tickled at the trick, laugh ed and chuckled at the anticipated surprise of the clerk. The rogue walked slowly ahead, turned smilingly to the crowd, put his finger on his lips to enjoin silence, and actually disappeared with a thousand dollars in bank notes, thus obtained openly while hundreds were looking on. No one knew who he was, nor has the money been recovered. It was a bold and yet a most dexterous robbery.—Star

A Dandy Jack.—One of our Jack tars in Arcdent square, was amusing himself with remarks on passers by, lately, when a dandy came tripping along with his short legged unmentionables lashed rather tight at the bottom. 'I say, friend,' said Jack, 'and you got your breeches wrong end up?' 'No, fellow, why do you ask?' said the dandy with dignity. 'Why,' replied Jack, 'you've got the gallowses on the wrong end of your trowsers.'

THE UNION.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Tuesday Evening, May 15, 1838.

For I have sworn upon the Altar of God, eternal hostility against every form of Tyranny over the mind of man. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

We much regret that we have not yet full returns from the Virginia election; it is probable, however, the whigs will have a majority of two or three in joint ballot, though not certain. As far as heard from, the whigs have elected 67, and the administration 52 delegates,—14 yet remain to be heard from, which last year sent 10 administration men and 4 whigs. In the Senate, the Van Buren party have a majority of 12.

Accounts from the Mississippi election are very unsatisfactory; the only conjecture we are able to form from the last dates, is, that Prentiss, one of the whig candidates, and Claiborne, one of the Van Buren candidates are elected. If such should prove to be the fact, the neutral party will have won the victory for once!

On Thursday, 10th inst. a number of remonstrances were presented to the U. S. Senate against the Cherokee treaty. The bill for the sale of the bank books introduced on Wednesday, passed and was sent to the house.

In the House, the duel business was at length disposed of. After a desultory debate, Mr. Thomas moved to lay the report and documents on the table, and also to print them. The first motion passed, 102 to 75; the motion to print the majority and minority reports passed by a vote of 123 to 74; the printing of the evidence and journal of the committee was then ordered, 189 to 4.

It will be seen by reference to our Congressional department that death has again invaded the ranks of our representatives. He has now chosen a shining mark, one that could hardly be spared from Congress. From Mr. Lawler's funeral sermon, delivered by Mr. Reese, we learn that he was a Baptist minister, much respected by all who knew him.

Mr. Lawler was formerly an Administration man, but has latterly acted with the Conservatives.

The election which took place in Maine in the former part of this month to supply the vacancy in the house of representatives, occasioned by the death of Mr. Carter, has resulted in favor of Mr. Parris, the Van Buren candidate.

We understand with pleasure, that the State bank at New Brunswick, in this state, redeems in specie all its notes of $5 and under.

The board of chosen freeholders for this county for the current year, organized in Newark, on Wednesday last, the 9th inst. Reen Prudden, of Elizabethtown, was chosen director of the board, and T. C. Ward, Clerk. James Wilson Wade, of Union, was appointed county collector for the ensuing year.

The loss by the Charleston fire is estimated at $4,000,000. The City Corporation have resolved that no wooden buildings should hereafter be raised; and have appropriated $10,000 to the indigent sufferers.

The corporation of Savannah have voted a donation of $8000.

Augusta has appropriated $2000 for the benefit of the sufferers, and nearly 4000 more was raised in the same city by private subscription.

Columbia has transmitted $3000, by its common council, and private subscriptions were made to the amount of 6,500 more.

Wilmington, N. C. has contributed 1100.

A "lady of Edisto" has presented 600 dollars.

Public meetings have also been held in Philadelphia and Baltimore, in aid of the same great object.

The Georgia Insurance and Trust Company of Baltimore, has lost 30,000 by the fire. The Charleston Insurance Offices it is said will be able to pay their losses in full.

Nine days later from Europe.—The packet ship England, arrived off Block Island, in the remarkable short passage of 19 days from Liverpool, (almost as quick as the steam ships,) bringing papers to the 21st of April. She brought 750,000 dollars in specie. Money was abundant at low interest: how to invest it in safe stocks, to get 4 or 5 per cent. interest, was all the question there.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has decided that the law lately passed in that state, prohibiting the retailing of wine and ardent spirits, is constitutional. It says the law does not prescribe what a man shall eat or drink; it leaves every man to get drunk when and as often as he pleases. But the state is determined to give no facilities or encouragements in this matter.

The following message on the state of the U. S. treasury, was transmitted by the President to both houses of Congress, accompanied by a report of the secretary of the treasury. The Secretary says that most of the revenue being received in Treasury notes not redeemable until November next, and these forbidden by law to be paid out again, has reduced the available means in the treasuary; and he therefore asks permission to pay out such money as he receives. A very reasonable request surely, and one we should suppose that would be granted:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit to the consideration of Congress a statement prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury, by which it appears that the United States, with over twenty eight millions in deposite with the States, and over fifteen millions due from individuals and banks, are, from the situation in immediate danger of being rendered unable to discharge, with good faith and promptitude the various pecuniary obligations of the Government

The occurrence of this result has for some time been apprehended, and efforts made to avert it. As the principal difficulty arises from a prohibition in the present law to re issue such Treasury notes as might be paid in before they fall due, and may be effectually obviated by giving the Treasury during the whole year, the benefit of the full amount originally authorized, the remedy would seem to be obvious and easy.

The serious embarrassments likely to arise from a longer continuance of the present state of things induces me respectfully to invite the early action of Congress to the subject which may be consistent with a due regard to other public interests.

May 10. M. VAN BUREN.

Farmers making their own Sugar.—The New England Farmer notices an important discovery made by a gentleman in the vicinity of Boston, in the manufacture of Sugar from Beets. Specimens of the sugar made by this process, finely crystallized, and of as good a quality as the common Havanah white Sugar, have been exhibited to competent judges; and those who have seen the process and its results, have no doubts of its success.

A patent for this invention and discovery, has been applied for, and it is confidently expected that the right to manufacture will be for sale, seasonably this summer, at such a rate as to put it in the power of every industrious farmer to make his own sugar.

The Des Moines Rapids of the Mississippi.—By the late report submitted to Congress relative to the navigation of the Mississippi it appears that the only serious obstacles to its navigation from the mouth of the Ohio to the falls of the St. Anthony, a distance of about 1200 miles, are the Des Moines and Rock River rapids and these form the first objects of attention.

The Des Moines rapids, situated about 200 above St. Louis commence just below Des Moines garrison, and terminate about three quarters of a mile above the village of Keokuk and 4 miles above the mouth of the Des Moines river. Between these points the Mississippi flows with great velocity over an irregular bed of blue limestone, reaching from shore to shore, at all times covered with water, and through which many crooked channels have been worn by the action of the current. Its longitudinal slope not being uniform, but at raised several places above its general elevation, divides the whole distance into as many pools or sections. The passage over these rocks becomes, during low stages of the river, very difficult, in consequence of the shoalness of the water, its great fall and velocity, and the narrow and winding channels through them. The distance from the head to the foot of the rapids is about 11 miles, and the entire fall of the river at the time of making the survey was about 24 feet The descent is not uniform, being greater over the rents and less in the pools, is different in every section and varies at every stage of the river. The estimated expense of this improvement is $189,622. The beneficial results which may accrue from it may not be estimated.—St. Louis Bulletin.

Counterfeit five dollar notes of the Telland Co. bank, Connecticut, are afloat.

A wholesale counterfeiting concern has been discovered and broken up by the Trenton police officers. We noticed a few days ago that a person was arrested last week for passing spurious Trenton tickets, and we now learn, by the State Gazette, that the officers thus obtained a clue to a gang of counterfeiters in Philadelphia. It is stated that 13,000 dollars of counterfeits on the notes of various corporations, with the plates, press, and all the other instruments were found. The highest praise is due to Constable Payne, for his vigilance and perseverance in ferreting out the gang.—Newark Daily.

The Coal Trade has commenced briskly. We learn by the Mauch Chunk Courier that there have been despatched by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company up to the 3d inst. 85 boats, carrying 4,256 Tons of Coal. The Lehigh had risen about four feet in consequence of the late rain.
